PLAN TO EXTEND WILSON ST. IS PRESENTED AT MEETING

Council Discusses Advisability of Connecting Street With State Road West of Town

The advisability and probability of continuing Wilson street from Liberty street, across the Baltimore and Ohio tracks, the Little Youghiogheny river, to connect with the State road at the entrance of the Baseball diamond, was discussed to some extent at the monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council Monday night.

"In furtherance fo this project a petition will be passed among the citizens of Oakland in the near future for their acquiesence or rejection of the move," Mayor Lawrence Fraley said yesterday. "There will undoubtedly be many against this move, and there will also be many more in favor of it. There is no question but that it will benefit the people of Rosedale, and this community is growing more each year. It would also be of much benefit to other people in town, and will be a much shorter route out of town," Mayor Fraley continued.

To Erect Signs

That there would be a "no trespassing" sign erected at each end of the sewer pipe crossing the Little Yough river, was also decided upon. "This is all that the town is able to do," the mayor said, "because the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company owns the land, and even if a fence could be built on each end of the pipe, children would disregard it."

The question about the sewer pipe was brought up following the drowning a few weeks ago of Roy DeWitt, a lad of 9 years, who slipped into the swirling waters as he attempted to cross the river on the refuse line.

Anyone disregarding the "no trespassing" signs can be prosecuted, it was stated.

The passing of the monthly bills occupied the remainder of the meeting. The next session will be held on February 6.

LEAGUE LEADERSHIP TO BE DECIDED THIS WEEK

High School And Catholics To Meet In Second Game.

Oakland High School defeated the Lutherans 19-13, and the Presbyterians were victorious over Mountain Lake Park 27-10, in the two church league basketball games played last Friday night at Naylor's Hall. High School's victory over the Lutherans ties that crowd of basketeers with the Catholics for first place in the league.

The league leadership will be decided this coming Friday night at 7:30 when the Catholics and the High School meet in the second game of the evening's entertainment. Second place will be contested for in the first game of the evening when the Lutherans will meet the Presbyterians.

Admission Price Lowered.

The admission price for spectators has been changed, according to the manager, and prices for church league basketball games will now be 15 and 25 cents, and it is hoped that more will turn out and support the games, he stated.

In last week's games, the Presbyterians had little trouble disposing of Mountain Lake Park when McComas for the Presbyterians started to ring in the baskets. He caged seven field goals and three fouls to bring his total to 17 points. The Lutherans were without the services of three of their regular players, but withstood the High School's attacks until the closing minutes of play. The line-up and summary:

| Lutherans | | High School |
|---|---|---|
| Graves | F | Stanton |
| Wilson | F | Stemple |
| Hanst | C | Sanders |
| Glaze | G | Lohr |

Field goals: Sanders, 4; Hanst, 4; Graves, 2; Stanton, 2; Stemple, 2; Stahl, 1. Fouls: Sanders, 1; Hanst, 1. Referee: McComas.

| Presbyterians | | Mt. Lake |
|---|---|---|
| Wolf | F | J. McRobie |
| Lee | F | I. Turney |
| McComas | C | B. McRobie |
| Bond | G | J. Turney |
| Blake | G | Weber |

Substitutions: Franklin for Bond; Echard for I. Turney. Goals: McComas, 7; Wolf, 3; Lee, 2; Echard, 2; B. McRobie, 2; J. McRobie, 1. Fouls: McComas, 3.

Mr. Henry Lauer, whose health has been on the decline for several months, left Oakland on Sunday morning for Baltimore where he has entered a hospital for treatment. His host of well wishers in Oakland and other parts of Garrett county trust that he may be speedily restored to his usual good health.

RETURNS FROM SEAL SALE ARE NOT UP TO STANDARD

Money Sent In Is Below Total Amount Received Last Year.

Returns from the sale of tuberculosis seals in Garrett county are below the returns of last year, according to Mrs. C. Milton Sincell, chairman, but all to whom seals were mailed prior to Christmas have not yet replied or sent in their checks for the seals thus sent them. Returns to date total $259.60 as against $311.33 for last year.

"Christmas is a busy season," Mrs. Sincell said, "and we feel sure that some of those to whom we sent seals early in December have not yet found time to reply. Just now we are making a final check-up, as we are required to account early in the year for all seals sent out.

"We shall be deeply grateful if the unused seals are returned or the money for them sent in, so that the proper credits may be given on our records and the business closed up as soon as possible."

The campaign just closed has been carried on for twenty years and the world has been asked to buy the seals so that the unceasing fight against tuberculosis may be unrelentingly continued until the disease is stamped out in the human race.

SIGNAL TOWER AT PARK BURNS; MAY NOT BE REBUILT

Loss Estimated to Be $20,000—Overheated Stove Is Said to Be Cause of Blaze Sunday

Whether or not the two-story frame signal tower and telegraph office of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Mt. Lake Park, which was completely burned at 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, would be rebuilt could not be learned definitely from officials of the railroad at a late hour this morning. The fire, believed to have originated from an overheated stove, completely destroyed the building, the loss being estimated at $20,000. The intricate mechanism of the inter-locking system, and the other equipment of the tower was quite valuable, according to officials.

Operator W. C. Ready and E. V. Show, assistant road foreman of engines, who were in the telegraph office in the upper part of the tower at the time of the fire, were forced to flee when flames and smoke burst thru the floor. The stove was in the ground floor of the tower.

Efforts to extinguish the blaze with extinguishers were futile and the Oakland Fire department was summoned. The volnnteers arrived soon after, but the fire was beyond control.

E. C. Shirley, assistant trainmaster, and John L. Matthews, division operator, with a force of workmen, established a temporary telegraph office in the station nearby in less than one hour after the blaze. The interlocking switches, operated from the tower, are now being operated by hand, and will continue to be until those in charge in Baltimore decide whether or not the tower will be rebuilt.

The tower in Terra Alta, which was destroyed by fire several years ago, was never rebuilt, but whether the Mt. Lake tower will be a repetition of this is unknown. It was also learned that there is a brick signal tower about one mile east of the Mt. Lake station, and it was thought that this might be put into use. It was built during he war, but was abandoned because of its poor location.

The mercury stood at five degrees below zero Sunday afternoon at Mt. Lake Park, when the fire was discovered.

Brotherhood Meeting.

The Brotherhood of St. Mark's Lutheran church held its new year meeting on Tuesday evening of this week with Guy Yutzy, president of the organization occupying the chair.

"Bill and Wade," led the singing, which was spirited and greatly enjoyed. The quartet, composed of Cecil Smith, Reeves Blandford, Jesse Ashby and Wade Hinebaugh, accompanied by Prof. "Bill" Gibson, was never more thoroughly enjoyed.

Rev. W. E. Waybright, pastor of Red House Lutheran church, was the evening speaker, his subject being, "Reasons for being a churchmember."

Another number on the program was a piano solo by Miss Hazel Nine.

About twenty-five members were present, all of whom enjoyed the program as well as the refreshments. The next meeting will be held on February 7.

MARRIAGE LICENSES HIT HIGHEST PEAK WHEN 1300 WERE ISSUED LAST YEAR; RECORD IS BEATEN BY 140

Twenty-two Hundred and Sixty-eight Get Fishing Licenses—Many Given Hunting Permits

Averaging more than three marriage lincenses each day of the year, the all-time record for the number of permits to marry issued at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland was broken in the year 1927 with a total of 1300. The previous high record was made in 1925 when 1160 licenses were issued.

During five of the months of the year just closed new records were made in the number of licenses issued, while the other seven months were not far below. Last month, the final month of the year, was slightly below the average in this respect, only 98 permits being granted. Following is a table showing the number issued each month during 1927:

| February | 90 |
| March | 77 |
| April | 111 |
| May | 104 |

| August | 140 |
| September | 139 |

| November | 109 |
| December | 98 |

Many Fishers and Hunters

During the season, 2268 fishing licenses were issued to county residents, non-residents of the county but of the State and non-residents of Maryland. This number included the special licenses issued for fishing in Deep Creek Lake, which number totaled 1986.

Dunring the fall hunting season there were 1529 licenses issued to hunters, which is somewhat below the number issued in 1926. The season for hunting upland game closed on Decemebr 31, but it is still lawful to hunt wildfowl until January 31 in places not otherwise restricted. The open season for otter and muskrat is from January 1 to March 15, inclusive, according to information sent out from the office of the State Conservation Commission.

Fishing Season Starts on April 1.

Open season for fresh water fish will begin on April 1, and anyone desiring to secure his license may do so at any time, according to A. G. Ross, deputy clerk at the office of the Circuit Court. Rainbow trout, in the Big Yough below Swallow Falls may not be caught prior to July 1, nor will black bass in the same stream. Deep Creek Lake waters will be open for fishermen from June 1 to August 15.

MURDER REPORT FALSE. SHERIFF CASTEEL SAYS

Andrew J. "Boots" Sims Died From Exposure to the Cold

The report circulated last Thursday to the effect that Andrew J. "Boots" Sims, of near Kitzmiller, had been murdered, was declared false on Friday morning by Sheriff William D. Casteel, who investigated the case thoroughly.

Sims' body was found last Monday in the woods near Kitzmiller. He had been missing since Saturday evening preceding. Following the finding of the body Magistrate Grover Poole was notified and at a coroner's jury of inquest that body found that death was due to intoxication and exposure to the extreme cold weather then prevailing.

It was at first thought that Sims had met with foul play when it was reported that the man had a large hole in his head purported to have been inflicted with some blunt instrument, but a later investigation made by the sheriff and other officers did not reveal this to be the case.

Sims' remains were interred at Mt. Zion on Wednesday of last week.

Jacob L. Kendall, president of the Kendall Lumber Company of Crellin, died on Tuesday morning at his home in Pittsburgh as the result of injuries he sustained on Saturday when he was struck by an automobile on the street in Pittsburgh. Mr. Kendall did not regain consciousness following the accident. He was aged 65 years and is survived by two brothers, Mr. J. L. Kendall, of Crellin, and Congressman Samuel A. Kendall, of Meyersdale, and by a sister, Mrs. Abagail Baker, of Crellin.

LADIES' NIGHT OBSERVED BY LOCAL ROTARY CLUB

Members Have As Their Guests Thirty of the Fair Sex.

"Ladies' Night" of the Oakland Rotary Club was observed last Thursday evening by members of the local club at the William-James Hotel when the members of the club and their guests, numbering thirty ladies, were entertained with a turkey dinner and a special program given by the club.

The dining room was opened at 6:15 and the members with their guests seated themselves at an elaborate dinner consisting of hearts of celery, asparagus salad, olives, French rolls, roast turkey with cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, sauer kraut, pineapple ice cream, cake and coffee. Cigarets and cigars were also provided for those of the sterner sex.

Following the singing of several club songs, Dr. McComas, president of the club, welcomed the guests in a short speech, following which Mrs. Paul Naylor, in a very accomplished manner read "The Ruggles' Christmas Party." Mr. Frank E. Rathbun made the address of the evening, his subject being "What is a Rotary Ann?"

Each lady present was given a vanity case as a memento of the evening. The favors were red roses.

Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the program committee, did not forget to hand each member of the club a slam with the presents they received from Santa Claus. He was assisted in his work by Bill Gibson.

PYTHIANS WILL INSTALL OFFICERS FRIDAY NIGHT

Public Is Invited To Attend This Meeting of the Lodge.

The installation of officers of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, to which the public is invited, will be held at the lodge room on Third street tomorrow evening, according to Paul B. Naylor, retiring chancellor commander of the organization. The wives, sisters and friends of the members of the lodge will also be very welcome at this meeting, he said.

There will be a special program presented along with the installation ceremonies, and Reese E. Friend, chairman of the program committee, promises a good time to all who may be present.

Last Friday, which was known as "Crellin Night" in the local lodge, was in charge of Mr. Charles W. Ream, as chairman of the committee for that evening, and he presented a vaudeville and several musical numbers, the Boys Band of Crellin, and other Crellin lodge members, participating in making the program a great success.

The weekly surprise was a portable electric lamp, donated by A. D. Naylor & Co., and which was won by Luke Harvey, of Sand Flat.

The financial report for the year was read by Harry Stemple, district deputy grand chancellor, and was considered to be one of the best reports of the financial condition in the history of the lodge.

D. E. ORENDORF CHOSEN AS COMMISSIONERS PRESIDENT

Succeeds Geo. D. Browning, for Eight Years Head of Body.

The Board of County Commissioners of Garrett county in session at the Board room at the Court House on Monday morning organized by electing Mr. Daniel E. Orendorf president of the body for the year now begun. He succeeds Mr. George D. Browning, who has been a member of the board for ten years, serving eight years of the ten as president of the body. The third member of the board is Mr. Harvey Gortner, of Grantsville.

Mr. Fred. A. Thayer, of Oakland, was appointed attorney to the board, which position he occupied last year.

The board has been kept busy during the time it has been in session this week appointing road supervisors and hearing the demands of various delegations from nearly every section of the county who desire new roads built and other internal public improvements made.

The list of road supervisors will be printed in The Republican next week.

PEACE BOND EXPECTED TO FORESTALL TROUBLE

Contestants in Fistic Duel at Kempton Last Week Make it Safe for Themselves

Making sure that he would no more be asked to settle an argument by a fistic encounter, and his opponent in turn, making sure that he would have no more black jacks swung over his head with damaging results, the two necessary parties in the fistic duel last week at Kempton were in Oakland on Saturday and swore out peace bonds against each other and their friends.

Jake McRobie, who was fined $20 and costs last Wednesday by Magistrate E. I. West for carrying concealed weapons, went before Magistrate Gonder on Saturday and swore out two peace warrants, one aganst William Broll, and the other against Stanley Perchon.

Not to be outdone, William Broll, who was convicted of assault Wednesday evening before Magistrate Gonder, and fined $25 and costs, appeared before Magistrate West on Saturday also, and swore out peace warrants, two against McRobie, and one against Wilbur Bear. All peace bonds issued were for $300.

The bonds were fixed at $300 because the alleged threats made against the two contestants by their opponents were considered to be dangerous, it was stated.

The trouble between the men has been brewing for several months, according to the testimony of a week ago, and it is thought that the issuance of the peace bonds will now be the means of preserving order between the two men and their associates.

KINGWOOD CLUB WILL BE FOE OF OAKLAND MONDAY

Local Basketeers Are Practicing Hard—Out to Win

Oakland A. A. will play Kingwood Athletic club Monday night at Naylor's hall, Oakland, according to an announcement made this morning by the manager. The team consists of ex-high school stars of one, two and three years ago, and is expected to give the locals a real battle.

Oakland will present practically the same lineup as before. McComas will be at center, Dewey Rice and Buck Killen, forwards, and Hanst and Nally guards, with Holland, Kahl, Echard and one or two more in reserve.

In all probability there will be a preliminary game, beginning at 7:30, the manager stated. The feature game of the evening will start at 8:15 o'clock. Admission will be 25 and 50 cents.

Schools Were Reopened Monday Following Holiday Season

The public schools of Garrett county reopened on Monday, January 2, with the majority of teachers and pupils in their accustomed places. A few, however, were undecided about Monday being a holiday and so compromised and made their first appearance in the class room on Tuesday.

Mrs. Webster Ravenscroft returned to her home near town on Thursday last from a visit to her daughter, Mrs. Leo Lyon, at Clarksburg, being accompanied by her little grandson.

TO EXTEND INVITATIONS FOR STATE GRANGE MEET

Commercial Club, Mayor, and County Agent to Ask that Meeting be Held in Oakland

To extend a cordial invitation to members of the State Grange to hold their 1928 meeting in Oakland, was the purpose of the special meeting last night of the board of directors of the Oakland Commercial club, held in the town hall. That Oakland would be delighted with the State meeting and that everything would be done to make their stay a pleasant one, will be the contents of letters which will be sent out within the next few days by Cecil Smith, secretary of the Commercial club, Lawrence Fraley, mayor of Oakland, and J. L. McGlone, county agent.

That there was a possibility of the next State Grange meeting being held in Oakland during the summer or fall of 1928 was announced several weeks ago by County Agent McGlone, who had just returned from the State meeting at Easton. Mr. McGlone told the convention of the advantages of Garrett county and assured the delegates that everyone bonded together would welcome them to the county in 1928. The delegates were said to be exceptionally well pleased with Mr. McGlone's invitation, and were enthusiastic in their acceptance and urged the executive committee to choose Garrett county as the next meeting place.

Would Bring Many People

This meeting would bring several hundred persons to Garrett county for the three-day's session. In the invitations that will be sent out by the Commercial club, the mayor and Mr. McGlone, the exact date of the convention will be asked so that adequate arrangements can be made to accommodate so large a gathering. If it is decided to hold the meeting in Oakland, the Commercial club will appoint a committee immediately to arrange entertainment for them. It will be several weeks yet, Mr. Smith said, until Oakland will be informed whether or not it will be the site of the next Grange meeting.

NEW YEAR ACCOMPANIED BY COLD WAVE IN COUNTRY

Thermometer Dropped To Five Degrees Below Here Monday.

Promptly on time the New Year arrived in Oakland and Garrett county, but brought along with it the coldest weather for a year, the mercury dropping to below zero for the second time this winter.

At Weber's a mile or two east of Oakland, where a government thermometer is maintained and daily records are kept, the mercury showed five below zero on Monday morning, while at other places in the vicinity of town the thermometer varied from two to five or six below. Keyser's Ridge, said to be the coldest spot in Garrett county, registered in the proximity of ten to twelve below.

While stormy conditions are predicted for the remainder of the week, the temperature has been slowly rising, and it is not expected to fall below the mark reached earlier in the week.

The temperature dropped approximately 45 degrees within twenty-four hours from Saturday noon until on Sunday morning. The change was sudden and begun with a driving rain and steadily increasing cold which in a few minutes turned the rain into snow.

New Year's Day Observed Monday

The cold weather, however, did not prevent a somewhat restricted observance of New Year's day on Monday. The postoffice and one or two stores were closed for the day, but the banks and other business establishments remained open for business.

The drop in temperature was accompanied by a slight fall of snow, which drifted in spots but caused no roads to be blocked.

Storm Came From The West

The storm which struck the county came in from the west and was a tabloid of the western blizzard which made snow-bound many towns near Chicago and froze many people and thousands of cattle to death, demoralized bus and train schedules and covered the western country under a heavy blanket of snow.

The storm here, hower, was not severe enough to cause undue delay in train or other public utility service.

Knowledge without action is like a sail without wind.

Lesson for January 8

JESUS AND THE SICK

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:21-45.
GOLDEN TEXT—He hath done all things well: He maketh both the deaf to hear and the dumb to speak.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes Sick People Well.
JUNIOR TOPIC—John Welcomes and Baptizes Jesus.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus' Power to Make Whole.

The purpose of Mnrk in this section is to sbow Jesns Christ the Divine Servant bearing God's mossage and clothed with the power to save lost sonls. Conpled with His snperhnman strength is revenled His unwearied sympatby, giving itself out in belpful and saving service.

1. The place (v. 21).

It was in the synagogue in Capernaum where He with four disciples repaired "straigbtway" upon His entrance into the village. He availed Himself of the regular channel of instruction. Thougb many abuses bad crept into the synagogue service, He chose to associate tbe new witb the old order.

2. The time (v. 21).

His faithfulness in observing the Sabbath bronght Him to the place where the people assembled to worship and to hear the Scriptures expounded. He came not to destroy but to fulfill tbe law, even the law of the Sabbath.

3. The impression (v. 22).

The people were astonished. Two things about His teaching impressed the hearers.

The substance of His message. The scribes, the professional teachers of the law merely quoted the authorities, but Jesus with first-hand knowledge set forth the truth with the enthusiasm of freshness and personal conviction. This distinction was quickly detected by those who heard Him.

II. Jesus Conquering Demons (vv. 23-28).

1. The outery of the demon-possessed man (v. 23).

Perhaps be interrupted Jesus wbile He was teaching. When the power of God is manifested there is bound to be an outcry of the evil spirits.

2. The demon's confession (v. 24).

"Thou art the Holy One of God." The one whose chief business it was to waste and destroy human life was in such miserable state as to desire to have nothing to do with Christ, and was now forced to confess Him as the Holy One.

3. Christ's attitude toward him (v. 25).

He rebuked and accepted no testimony from Him, but sternly rebuked and cast out the foul spirit. He not only is Himself pure but is able to deliver others from impurity. Christ wants confession only from pure lips.

4. The obedience of the demon (v. 26).

The spirit was reluctant to leave the man and malicious to the end, for he tore the man whom he had to leave. He had to acknowledge his defeat and went out in a howling rage.

5. The impression made upon the people (vv. 27, 28).

The news of Christ's power spread rapidly over Galilee. The people were startled by two things:

(1) The new doctrine which He brought.

(2) His authority over demons.

III. Jesus Heals Peter's Mother-in-Law of Fever (vv. 29-31).

This scene lies in the home of one of the disciples. He went home with Simon and Andrew who told Him of the condition of Peter's mother-in-law. He came at once and lifted her up and the fever departed. She immediately ministered to Him.

IV. Jesus Ministering to Many (vv. 32-34).

Though the day was strenuous in its labors, He came unwearied even when the sun had set, to meet the needs of the multitudes who had gathered from all parts of the city. He healed many of their diseases, cast out demons, not allowing them to speak. The demons knew Him, but the poor, blind people knew Him not.

V. Jesus Cleansing a Leper (vv. 35-45).

As Jesus preached in the synagogues of Galilee and cast out demons, His power became known. A leper came to Him saying, "If Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean." Jesus put forth His hand and touched him, saying, "I will, be thou clean," and immediately the leprosy departed and he was cleansed.

Beauty of Bible Thoughts

I am of the opinion that the Bible contains more true sensibility, more exquisite beauty, more pure morality, more important history, and finer strains of poetry and eloquence than can be collected from all other books, in whatever age or language they may be written.—Sir William Jones.

NEW CHEVROLET CARS ARE PRONOUNCED WINNERS

1928 Models Built Along Beautiful Lines and Greater Efficiency

Wildfire enthusiasm kindled thruout the country Monday when the new Chevrolet line for 1928 went on display took particular account of the many mechinical innovations embodied in the new car.

Thousands who viewed the new models noted that the wheelbase was increased and bodies made roomier and more beautiful; also that the mechanical features had been developed to a measure heretofore unknown in the low price class.

Outstanding developments in the engine and chassis that received widespread endorsement were the increased speed and power of the new car, easier steering, four wheel brakes of new design, shock absorber springs marking an advanced trend toward riding comfort, and smoother engine performance.

The last mentioned feature was achieved by the use of constant clearance alloy "invar strut" pistons which make for smoother, more efficient motor performance. Further contribution toward this end were gained by raising the compression ratio and by stepping up the valve lifts. Through these changes maximum power is developed.

Other changes in the engine are the addition of a breathing system to eliminate the annoyance of engine fumes; a new two-port exhaust and a silencing engine enclosure.

The four-wheel brakes are of nonlocking design—the product of Chevrolet laboratories plus the facilities of General Motors laboratories and proving grounds. Front brakes are two-shoe unenergized internals, while the rear brakes are the nergized external, self-wrapping type. Front and rear brakes have been proportioned to prevent side drag or pull. Each brake has an individual adjustment at the wheels, while "stops" have been provided to make the adjustment process especially easy. Easy initial pedal application throws the front brakes into action. Further applicaion trows front brakes harder into action and also brings the rear brakes into full play ,so that it is possible to slide the rear wheels on dry pavement by using full pressure, but not the front wheels.

The effect of this, according to Chevrolet engineers, is to get uniform wear on the brake lining.

The springs also are of extraordinary interest. Realizing that all uncomfortable spring action is the result of rebound after striking a bump, Chevrolet engineers set about to increase the friction of the springs and thus check the rebound.

This end was accomplished by equipping the springs with special rebound checks. Two checks are on each spring located helf way between the center spring shackle and the spring end. These rebound checks are inverted bow shaped steel leaves assembled under high pressure against the top of the spring leaf, the ends pressing against the top of the leaf, increasing the resistance.

So much has the spring friction been increased by this new device that the car is said to ride 50 percent better than with old type springs. The rebound checks also offer greater resistance to bumps.

Greater ease of steering was made possible by adopting a ball bearing worm and gear steering mechanism, including ball bearings in the steering knuckles, and by increasing the steering ratio from 8 to 9.5 to 1. The four inch increase in wheelbase contributes greatly to the riding quality of the car with less pitching and better road holding qualities.

The front axle has been enlarged and strengthened to accommodate the new brake attachment. A fan shroud has been added for more effective cooling and a host of other details combine to make the Chevrolet for 1928 the best performing, most efficient and dependable mechanical unit ever built by the company.

Models of these cars may be seen at the Oakland Garage and the Grantsville Garage, Garrett county representatives of the Chevrolet.

Pythian Sisters Install Officers.

Garrett Temple, No. 17, Pythian Sisters, of Oakland, is now officered by the recently chosen members to succeed those retiring from the various chairs with the ending of last year. Installation of the newly elected officers occurred on Monday night, but on account of the extreme cold weather there were not as large a turnout as the members present would liked to have been there. We urge all who possibly can be there to be present next Monday night. At the close of the installation ceremony refreshments were served and enjoyed by all present. PRESS COMMITTEE.

Bigger and Better

See the New Chevrolet now on display!

Today, Chevrolet presents the crowning triumph of sixteen years' continuous progress—a great new automobile so impressive in appearance, performance and staunchness that it marks the opening of a new era of luxurious transportation at low cost.

Built on a 107-inch wheelbase—4 inches longer than before—the Bigger and Better Chevrolet is impressively large, low and racy. Its new Fisher Bodies are finished in new Duco colors and offer rich new upholsteries and handsome appointments. Its improved valve-in-head engine has numerous impressive features such as alloy "invar strut" pistons, hydro-laminated camshaft gears, mushroom type valve tappets, AC oil filter and AC air cleaner. The chassis also has been redesigned. As a result, the new Chevrolet provides delightful smoothness throughout the entire speed range—a wide margin of power for hills—click-of-the-heel acceleration—the ability to maintain 50, 55 and 60 miles an hour without the slightest sense of forcing or fatigue—the safety of four-wheel brakes—the steering ease that can only result from a ball bearing worm and gear steering mechanism—and comfort over all roads at all speeds due to semi-elliptic shock absorber springs—84% of the wheelbase.

SILK LONG USED BY WELL-DRESSED WOMEN NOW PLAYS IMPORTANT PART IN INDUSTRY

Bell System Among Large Users of This Commodity. Silken Threads Protect and Improve Appearance of Switchboard Wires, Telephone Cords, and Other Apparatus

Silk is used extensively in telephone switchboard wiring, cords, and other apparatus. The operator uses the silk and cotton covered voice pathways to bring to her ears the number wanted and to make a continuous path from one telephone user to the other. (Circle) Japanese woman weaving silk on a native loom. (Bottom) Boiling cocoons to loosen the silk fibres. The raw silk is then reeled ready for the loom.

Silk, one of the oldest fabrics known, is now used more generally than ever before in the history of civilization. Silk is used extensively for clothing, and the wardrobe of the well-dressed woman of today is largely composed of silken things. Silk also plays an important part in industry. Among the largest users of this commodity in the communications field are the telephone and telegraph companies.

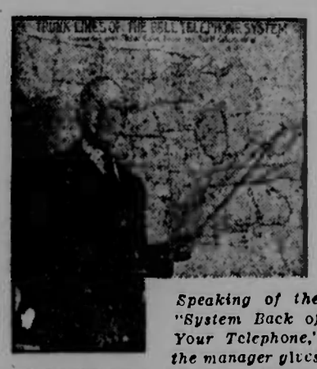
Silk is strong, flexible and a good insulator, all of which makes it practicable for telephone use. Silken threads wrapped around the current carrying wires or braided over groups of wires to hold them together, not only protect them but improve their appearance.

A large part of the silk brought to this country is used by the Bell system. In every telephone switchboard there are thousands of feet of silken threads that encase the copper covered wires. The covering of each switchboard cord that makes the connection between telephone users, as well as the receiver cords and cords connecting the telephone with the bell box contain silken threads.

The story of silk is a story of olden times when merchant-adventurers journeyed to the Far East for valuable woods and spices and cloths—and of modern industry which sends men to those same strange countries of the Orient for the same precious products, according to engineers of the Western Electric Company, who, in an article, "From the Far Corners of the Earth," give in interesting detail, some of the products that help make up telephones and telephone apparatus.

Often a single shipment of silk to this country is worth as much as $6,000,000. The silk itself is obtained from a worm which feeds on the leaves of mulberry trees. During its short life the worm spins a cocoon from one continuous thread 800 to 1200 yards long. This it wraps around itself in about three days' time, laying the tiny strand very evenly by turning its head to guide the thread, just as the silk braiding machines make an even braid in the telephone cords.

After the worm has been in the cocoon for a short time, it moistens one end of the fibre shell, probes aside the fibres and flies away, a brilliant moth. The life cycle is completed when the moth mates and the eggs that result become silkworms which in turn again make cocoons and repeat the process.



The cultivation of the silkworm and the mulberry tree upon which the worm lives is an ancient art in the Orient. It is said that about 2600, B. C., a Chinese Empress after encouraging the planting of mulberry trees created interest which led to the invention of looms to weave the fibres into fabrics. Later the Japanese and the Koreans entered into competition with the Chinese. As for India, a princess is supposed to have taken from China some eggs of the insect and some seeds of the mulberry tree concealed in the lining of her head dress.

As the knowledge of silk spread throughout Europe the demand for it grew until large caravans were needed to transport it across the deserts to the ports of the Mediterranean, where the famous merchants of Venice and Genoa bought it and sold it to the nobility of Europe.

Today the silk which the worm spins is as greatly prized as in the days of the Crusaders. Thousands of people in China and Japan and in France and Italy take care of the little worms, bring them indoors if the weather is too cold for them outside and pick mulberry leaves for them to eat. Then they unwind the silk from the cocoons and spin it into silk thread which in the course of time becomes a necessary part of telephone apparatus.

TELEPHONE INDUSTRY INTERESTING SUBJECT

Spectacular Achievements In Communication Art Explained By Managers

That the public is genuinely interested in the telephone business, is evidenced by the frequent calls that are made upon the managers of the telephone company to discuss various phases of its operation before trade bodies, luncheon clubs, church societies, and schools.

In Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, the territory served by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies, talks on such subjects have been presented by the companies' managers before thousands of people. In this way the public has gained an insight into the operation of the vast system which provides constant communication between the 18,000,000 telephones now in service in the United States.

The telephone is in universal use today, but many of those who use it constantly fail to realize the magnitude of the system behind it, or stop to think of the multitude of complicated, yet vital, features that are involved in its operation.

Spectacular developments in the telephone art during the past few years, such as radiotelephony, telephotography, television, and transatlantic communication, have served to increase the public's interest and the telephone manager is constantly called upon to discuss and explain these developments.

Managers are always not only willing, but glad to make these talks. It has been found that the better the public understands the telephone system and its operation, the more it is willing to extend the measure of cooperation with the company, which is necessary in order to give the most satisfactory service.

TELEPHONE CALL JUDGED LEGAL ACKNOWLEDGMENT

By a recent decision of the Ohio Suprome Court, legal instruments may he acknowledged over the telephone and documents acknowledged in this way are valid. The decision was reached in the case of the Logan Oil and Gas Company vs. M. K. Wells and Wilbur Keith, of Cambridge, Ohio. Keith had started drilling for gas on a farm which was owned by Wells, and the Logan Oil and Gas Company claimed a lease. The defendants, however, held that the lease was invalid because of its recognition by telephone. When the case was tried before Judge Turnhaugh, he found the lease to be valid and now the Supreme Court has upheld Judge Turnbaugh's decision.

The Doctor's Prescription

By EDGAR T. MONFORT

(Copyright.)

WITH envious eyes Dorothy Keener watched her sister deftly shaping her lips into a carmine cupid's bow with the lipstick she held between her fingers. She leaned closer to the mirror and worked with the care and concentration of an artist painting a picture. This task at last finished to her satisfaction, she darkened her pencilled eyebrows, then turned quickly from the mirror and slipped on a diaphanous, pink dress of tulle and georgette.

She stopped abruptly for what was the use of going on? It was a sort of n mental stone wall against which she had thrown herself since earliest childhood. Certainly she could not make herself beautiful by wishing for it. She could not make men like her and rush her by wishing for it; so what was the use of wishing? But it did seem hard enough not to be popular without having a dazzling, bewitching vamp for a younger sister. When Gladys was in the room nobody ever saw anybody else—every male thing within reach swarmed around her like bees around a flower. To be sure, Gadys never kept her admirers long, but then there was always a fresh crop with equally fine cars and open pocketbooks coming along. A man was proud to be seen on the street with her. There was something about the very way she wore her clothes that made people turn and look.

"By, darling; don't know when I'll be home. We're going to Arwood to the road-house dance."

Of course Dorothy was not going. She did not have a dozeu invitations a year to go to places with men and these she treasured like golden memories to be lived over afterward, bit by bit in the lonely evenings she stayed at home while Gladys was out dancing and flirting the hours away.

Her head ached as she stooped to pick up the underthings her sister had left lying in a heap on the floor. Her head had been aching for days but now it seemed suddenly worse.

"Why won't you go to Doctor Winthrop regularly as he told you and have your eyes treated?" protested Mrs. Keener impatiently, when Dorothy told her about it at breakfast next morning.

Why wouldn't she go to Doctor Winthrop regularly? Another thorn in her side and one that she could not explain, even to her loving sympathetic mother. How could she tell her that she was wild about the good-looking middle-aged physician who was always so kind and sympathetic. She would not so humiliate herself—especially when he had never so much as called on her. He had called on the family frequently but then he had known them for years and it was not his fault that her empty little heart had gone out to him in its loneliness. So she merely said to her mother:

"I'll go right down there as soon as I've finished eating. Gladys won't need the car until later. She won't get up until nearly lunch time, I expect."

"What if she does need the car?" demanded Mrs. Keener.

Dorothy shrugged, brushed n crumb off her smart green-flannel dress and rose from the table.

"It's the old headache, Doctor Winthrop," Dorothy said half an hour later, trying to smile.

"Yes, your mother called me up just now," he said.

She glanced quickly at the clear-cut features, the fine gray eyes that so strongly suggested gentleness and kindness and a little thrill passed over her.

"Do you think it's a symptom of some serious condition?" she asked a little breathlessly.

"N-no, I believe it's psychic and I could cure it if you'd let me." He flushed and toyed with the paperweight on his desk as he spoke.

"Oh, how?" she asked quickly. "I'd do anything you said."

"Is that a promise? A solemn promise?" he shot back at her.

She nodded, her cheeks flushed, her lips parted. She was almost pretty as she sat there. Doctor Winthrop leaned over and took her hand.

"Dorothy, this is going to sound strange to you, but you must realize that it's natural. You've developed an inferiority complex because you have n little, rattle-brained butterfly of a sister who is more popular than you are. But remember there are lots of older men who could appreciate you and wouldn't give a snap of their finger for Gladys. I'm one of these—so, as your physician I prescribe—me."

He rose and drew her to him.

For a moment Dorothy was too amazed to realize what was happening, then joy seemed to sweep over her in waves.

"When a man has lived as long as I have he knows how to appreciate pure gold. Will you marry me, dear?" he asked after a moment.

"I promised to do as you told me," she laughed, still wondering whether she was dreaming or whether this could really be true.

ONE-THIRD OF PNEUMONIA CASES LAST YEAR FATAL

A Total of 2723 Cases Recorded In State—919 Deaths Resulted

The records of the State Department of Health show that approximatley one-third of the cases of pneumonia, both brocho and lobar, that are reported from the counties each year, occur among babies and children under five. Out of a total of 2028 cases of pneumonia recorded in 1925, among people of all ages, 662 occurred among children under five. Out of a total of 747 deaths from pneumonia, the same year, 288 occurred among babies and young children who had not reached their fifth birthday. In 1926, when 2723 cases of pneumonia were reported in the counties, 951 occurred among children under five, while 343 out of a total of 919 deaths from pneumonia, were among children under five.

Because babies and young children are so susceptible to colds and to the pneumonias that so frequently follow what seems at the start to be "just the sniffles," or "only an ordinary cold," Maryland mothers are urged, in a leaflet prepared by the Bureau of Child Hygiene of the State Department of Health, to safeguard their young children from colds of every sort.

Two ways of doing so are pointed out. First, to strengthen the resistance of the children to any sort of disease by care in the selection of their food, and by giving them a well balanced, nourishing diet; by dressing them according to the weather; by seeing that they have as much sunshine and fresh air as possible and that they get plenty of sleep at night with a midday or mid-afternoon nap every day.

Second, to protect them from harm by keeping them away from other children or from grown-ups who have coughs or colds, or who are ill from throat or chest diseases. Particular attention is directed, in the leaflet, to the fact that colds and the pneumonias, like most of the catching diseases, common in infancy and childhood are spread through the secretions of the nose and mouth and that persons who are suffering from colds, should be careful not to cough or sneeze right in the fact of anybody, children especially.

Since every newspaper Scoop picks up contains predictions for 1928 by some noted or some unknown scientist, seer, fakir, soothsayer or prophet, he has decided to make some predictions of his own. And he also has sufficient faith in himself to think that they have as much chance of coming to pass as all the other predictions made. In fact, the predictions of these famed men and women are so obvious that they are almost bound to happen, and in the same trend of thought Scoop offers the following:

There will be a revolution in Mexico and several soldiers will be killed.

Several well known aviators will be killed.

There will be a gang war in Chicago.

An outstanding murder will be committed.

There will be a Labor Day picnic this year.

Several large trout will be caught in Deep Creek Lake.

A large still will be unearthed in Garrett county, but the owner will escape the strong arms of the law.

Oscar Notes will maintain his record by having the best kept lawn in the State.

There will be another severe snow storm and cold spell before spring.

There will be many automobile accidents this year.

A large fruit crop will be harvested, including henfruit.

A prominent Garrett county resident will make a name for himself in some branch of trade or in his profession.

The Republican will still be Garrett County's leading newspaper and will carry more local news than any other paper within a certain radius.

Smokes No Longer—Nor Shorter

An inveterate smoker about town, who literally lights one cigarette from the butsy of another, has just made a new year's resolution. "Since smoking Satterfield and Fortunate Hit cigarets, I do not cough any more but do cough a lot easier, Ihereby resolve that I will smoke the weeds, no longer, nor any shorter—but will continue to smoke them to the same point as before."

Lucky Windy.

Whatever else the storm may have contributed to the welfare or detriment of the people of Oakland, it certainly did aid Scoop on Saturday when it lifted the two curb Christmas trees from in front of The Republican building out of their depths and laid them gently on the street. And it broke only two electric light bulbs in doing so. "It is an ill wind that blows nobody good." The only trouble is that on Sunday the same wind that rooted up the Christmas trees froze Scoop's left and right ears.

His nose escaped.

* * *

No Kiddin'

Honestly, though, Scoop seriously thinks that the curb Christmas tree idea was a very good one, and he is hoping that the same thing will be done next Christmas.

Buy across the Counter

WHEN you buy across the counter in the stores of this town, you are using good business judgment. Why? There are many reasons, but one of the most important is this:

You can buy what you want at the price you wish to pay! You are not obliged to accept "something just as good," because you are in a position to compare values and make your own selections.

When you trade at home you are helping your friends to help you! And there is no finer thing in life than neighborly co-operation. It always pays—in happiness and satisfaction as well as dollars and cents.

"IMMUNE" AUTO LICENSES.

Hard pressed to supply the demand for automobile license tags with small numbers, the Pennsylvania State Highway Department has created several new series to avoid a situation that threatened to prove politically embarrassing. The theory is that every applicant for a small number is a friend of the State administration, but would transfer his political allegiance if refused the particular license plate of his heart's desire.

For years the Governor's office has distributed the first thousand plates to favored ones. The next nine thousand were distributed from the office of the sceretary of hikhways in like manner. The remaining million plus were issued in the order applications were received, unless requests were made for particular numbers.

The present administration seems to have come into power with a horde of importunate and reward-hungry hangers-on, for the executive office will assign the regular licenses up to 2000 and the several thousand special numbers created by the new series. The cars of judges will be known hereafter by the letter "J" on the plates; those of legislators by the letter "L" and those of the State military officers by the letter "A."

Petty patronage of this sort is usually innocuous and, for that reason safe from public criticism. Bue there is some criticism of the automobile license patronage, not because it is patronage, but because it has a tendency to create a favored class on the highways. There is a suspicion, and it is not without foundation, it seems, that the letter and low number license tage are apt to awe traffic officers into shutting their eyes to traffic law violations by cars bearing them.

REPUBLICAN ACCOMPLISHMENT.

Passed an emergence tariff which stopped the importations of wheat, milk and cheese from Canada; eggs from China; corn and beef from Argentina; wool and mutton from Australia; butter from Norway, Denmark and Sweden, which were being shipped into this country in large quantities under the Underwood tariff. Authorized the use of a billion dollars by the War Finance Corporation to finance in an orderly manner the marketing and exportation of agricultural products.

Reduced the army and navy to a peace-time basis. Passed the peace resolutions with Germany and Austria and brought about a limitation of armament through an international conference. Put the Budget System in operation. Reduced government employees over 100,000.

Curtailed government expenses through economy and good management. Reduced the national debt from $22,964,000,000, June 30, 1922, to $18,368,000,000 on November 1, 1927. Reduced individual income taxes twice, and repealed many nuisance war taxes. Reduced total internal revenue taxes nearly $1,000,000,000 a year. Combined activities for ex-soldiers of the world war, and provided $500,000,000 for relief work annually. Restricted foreign immigration for the benefit of American wage-earners and for the safety of American institutions. Established a foreign war debt commission, and a settlement of all foreign debts, except that of France.

Passed the Maternal bill. Passed a law regulating the grain exchanges and packing houses. Provided for the return of alien property in excess of $10,000 to each person. Provided for the organization of co-operative marketing associations, and passed the anti-narcotic act; the bill prohibiting the sale of filled milk; a bill for the monthly payment of Civil War veterans; brought independent citizenship to women; enacted a tariff law protecting agricultural products and reviving the operation of all industries.

Restored approximately 5,000,000 idle men to employment. Established a system of rural credits to aid agriculturalists. Gave the soldiers a soldier's bonus. Passed a bill reorganizing the diplomatic and consular service. Created a national radio commission. Restored public confidence and raised public credit.—Cumberland Daily News.

Former Governor Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania Wants To Make Certain That Corruption At Elections, Such As Existed In His Own State During the Campaign Last Fall, Will Not Again Occur and Suggests A Remedy For Such An Evil.

Mr. Benj. H. Sincell, Editor,
The Republican,
Oakland, Md.
Dear Mr. Sincell:—

Now that the exclusion of Vare and Smith from the U. S. Senate is assured, the next step is to make certain that no such corruption of the ballot will occur again.

We need to set by law a limit to the amount of money that can be spent in an election for a national office (such as Senator or Congressman), and any candidate whose campaign expenses go beyond that limit should forfeit his election. To make that workable every candidate should be required to appoint an agent (and sub-agents if necessary) through whom and through whom alone all campaign expenses would be paid. Nobody else should be allowed to spend a cent under severe penalities.

In that way all the money would pass through the hands of one man, and the total cost of any campaign could be actually known and effectively limited.

But what should the limit be? Obviously, money enough to conduct a campaign in Nevada, with less than 100,000 people, or in Michigan, with 4,000,000 would not get far in Pennsylvania with 10,000,000. Obviously, again, the limit must be fixed at so much per inhabitant or per voter and not at so much per State.

The present limit set by Federal law is in fact no limitation at all, for it allows unlimited spending for postage, printing, and most other items of campaign cost.

The Pennsylvania Committee of 76, a non-partisan body, appointed to consider the whole problem of clean elections after certain frauds by the Vare machine became known, last year recommended for primary elections a limit for all expenditures of every legal sort equal to ten cents for each vote cast by the candidate's party at the last general election for any office in the candidate's district. That would result in Pennsylvania, for example, on the basis of the election in which Vare ran, in a limit of $110,000 in a primary campaign for the United States Senate.

The same general principle of limitation, if not the same specifice limit, can be applied, of course, to a general election as well as to a primary.

The amount of the limit is very important. If the number of cents per voter is too large, the purchase of elections will not be prevented. If it is made too small, an independent candidate could seldom or never win against an organized machine. Since it costs five cents to send one letter to one voter, the limit of ten cents would not appear unreasonably high.

The punishment for exceeding the limit should be loss of the election. If any candidate (or his authorized agent) spends money beyond the legal limit, or for any purpose not allowed by law, his nomination or election should be void. The point is to make any candidate who cheats lose the office he cheated to get.

If a candidate is guilty of fraud or of conniving at fraud, in that case also he should lose the office he cheated to get. That will be a far better deterrent than merely putting some crooked minor election official in jail, desirable as that is also.

Other things are necessary, such as requiring all contributions and expenditures larger than, say, $5.00 to be made by check; preventing a number of candidates running together as one ticket from spending more than one candidate running alone as one ticket; and complete publicity of campaign expenses.

But the main thing is to make buying or stealing elections unprofitable. A man who buys or steals votes to win an election should lose it even if he wins.

A bill embodying the foregoing principles is in preparations and will shortly be introduced in Congress.

If you care to do so, I would be glad to have you make any use you please of this letter on Monday, December 19, or on any later day.

Sincerely yours,
GIFFORD PINCHOT.
Milford, Pike County, Pa., Dec. 14.

Mr. E. W. Kelso, On Trip To the Pacific Coast, Tells of His Visit to Relatives and Friends En Route and of the Country Through Which He Passed.

To the Editor of The Republican.

I always have enjoyed reading of parts of the United States other than my own, and perhaps many readers of The Republican are of similar inclination. Having this in mind, I will write a brief description of my observation on my route to the West.

I left Oakland on December 15 to visit my son in New Mexico and on to Los Angeles, California, my destination. I went via St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., to El Reno, Oklahoma, and on this route I saw a large acreage of very fertile land. I arrived in Shamrock, Texas, where the Martin brothers reside. They were former residents of Garrett county, having lived near Mountain Lake Park before coming to the Southwest, and also Alexander Harvey, of the same place. He recently moved into a new six-room dwelling with all the modern conveniences.

In 1921, Shamrock had only 1200 population; they now claim to have 3000. Finding gas and oil twelve miles from the town caused the increase.

I am told that one hundred wells are producing oil at a depth of 2100 feet and gas at 1800 feet, which is piped to Shamrock and sold at 60 cents per 1000 feet for domestic use.

The agricultural land in this community is rolling and various crops are grown without fertilization. I am told the last rain here was in August, but crops were practieally matured before the drouth.

From Shamrock I went to Amarillo, Texas, 150 miles distant, with a population of 50,000 and an altitude of 3600 feet. Plenty of oil and gas is obtained sixty miles from Amarillo, which fact is responsible for the increase in population.

A man who has some interest in the oil industry in this section handed me the following statement:

"Two thousand wells producing oil at an average depth of 3000 feet; area 50 by 120 miles; large gas field and gas rate 45 cents at Amarillo for domestic use. Gas piped to Kansas City and to South Plains."

I can't recall seeing so many gas filling stations and large sales rooms for automobiles in any town as I saw in Amarillo. The oil and gas gave the town an excessive boost when the people built ten and thirteen story hotels, business blocks and office buildings. Many of the oil wells are closed because of low prices for the product, consequently there is much unemployment and hundreds of laborers have left the town. But Amarillo will continue to be a good town, having immense acreages of good farm land in its vicinity and a considerable cattle raising industry, with three railroads centering here and many other industries.

Many years ago Amarillo was dubbed a "cow" town. The cattle industry was the main employment of the settlers and ranchmen and the cowboys had great sport to have men and women meet at a corral and witness the exploit of the men in roping and tieing steers, and the cowboys held in many a pent-up oath to give the performance a semblance of cowboy etiquette..

I am writing this letter from Alamargo, New Mexico, which is 86 miles northeast of El Paso, Texas. The origin of the town's name is Spanish. The town's population is four thousand and its altitude 4500 feet. The town is situated in a level basin and mountains four miles distant with an altitude of 9000 feet. The mountains are very abrupt and barren. Spring water is piped from these mountains to irrigate the land to produce crops.

I examined some of the irrigation ditches this evening and I realized it was no fun to clean ditches to be in shape to receive water. On the sides of the ditches is brush about three feet high and with thorns about an inch long and sharp as a needle. The individual cleaning these ditches gets a frequent reminder of the presence of these thorn-bearing bushes.

The streets of this town are planted to cottonwood and are ten to fifteen inches in diameter and about twenty feet high. The town is the county-seat and has a good court house and also three large brick school buildings. I alos note that all western towns of average size have good school buildings.

E. W. KELSO.

Mrs. Jarboe was born December 4, 1844, and was aged 83 years and 25 days.

Funeral services were conducted from the home on Alder street Sunday afternoon, January 1, the Rev. A. D. Craig, pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church, assisted by Rev. Paul Linaweaver, rector of St. Matthew's, officiating. Interment was made in the Oakland cemetery.

She was married to the late Captain John McElroy Jarboe shortly after his discharge from the Federal army at Oakland, the ceremony having been performed on September 5, 1865. Captain Jarboe's death occurred in Oakland on July 3, 1912.

B. & O. EMPLOYES 84 AND 53, ELOPE; ROMANCE OF RAILS

G. W. Haulenbeek, Formerly of Deer Park, one of Principals

This business of eloping and getting married is not an adventure confined altogether to the young and careless, George W. Haulenbeek, 84 years old, Civil War veteran and for forty-six years a member of the legal department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, a former resident of Deer Park, well remembered and highly esteemed by many Garrett countians, explained yesterday in telling of the elopement to Elkton of himself and Mrs. Anna G. Lutz, 53 years old.

"We couldn't let 1927 get away without getting married," Mr. Haulenbeek said, "and Saturday being the last chance, we ran away to Elkton and now we are Mr. and Mrs. George Haulenbeek."

Theirs was truly a romance of the rails, Mr. Haulenbeek said. They both were employed in the Baltimore and Ohio general offices, Mrs. Lutz being in the office of the auditor of disbursements. They had seen each other around the building, he said, and on occasions when she was on the way to her mother's home in Buckingham, Pa., while Mr. Haulenbeek was on the way somewhere else. Both riding on passes they had something in common, he explained, and other things joined to make conversation and association only mutual.

Had To Speed Up Matters.

"I don't just remember when I first mentioned getting married to her," Mr. Haulenbeek confessed. "We had been going together for some time when I started making such remarks as 'When you and I are one,' and that kind of thing. Well, you know it went pretty good, and when I saw 1927 slipping away so swiftly I just had to speed things up a bit."

Mr. Haulenbeek, who had been a widower for ten years, has several children, grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

He was born in Newark, N. J., in 1843. During the Civil War he served in the Thirteenth New Jersey Volunteers, taking part in the Battle of Antietam. It was in April of 1881 that he became associated with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad's legal department, and he has been there ever since.

"No, sir; I'm not an old man," he said. "Years are not the only measurement for a man's age."

Mr. Haulenbeek said that after the ceremony at Elkton he and Mrs. Haulenbeek went to her home in Buckingham, Pa., for a wedding trip. He returned to work early in the week and she remained for a visit at her home.

Not Companionate Marriage.

"I couldn't object to that," he said yesterday. "You know, you've got to let the bride have her way in things of that kind. But, mind you, this is not one of those new style companionate marriages.

"And I got a good woman. I like to tell her age so my friends will know I didn't get one of those flappers."

Mr. Haulenbeck admitted that he was so excited that he didn't remember the name of the minister who performed the ceremony at Elkton. He further said that he was so nervous that he did not give the preacher as much money as he really intended to.

SUBSCRIPTION LIST IS STILL GROWING STEADILY

Number of Republican Readers Is Increasing Every Week.

New subscriptions for The Republican have been coming in "thick and fast" for the past several months, so much so that it is felt there should be some mention made of the fact.

Not a week goes by without a dozen or more persnos either coming or sending in their reservations and stating their desire to obtain for themselves all the news of the county which appears in the columns of The Republican each week.

When it is considered that the subscription list of The Republican is growing so rapidly on the merits of the paper alone, and not by any artificial stimulants, contests, etc., the constant increase in the number of readers is indeed gratifying to the publisher and all others connected with the publication of The Republican.

Those whose names have been added to the subscription list within the past week are: William C. Martin, Oakland; Miss Elsie Benthein, Oakland; Elwood H. Bevans, Horton, Kansas; Mrs. Norma Cuppett, Cumberland, Md.; John Close, Berkeley Springs, W. Va.; Mrs. C. F. Stewart, Manchula, Florida; Miss Alice Campbell, Gary, W. Va.; J. E. Wilson, Oakland; Allen Wilt, Swanton; Mrs. D. M. Merrill, Lonaconing; Edgar Helbig, Richmond, Va.; C. J. Yoder and Geo. S. Warnick, Grantsville; J. M. Menhorn, Akron, Ohio.

"If the subscription list continues to grow as rapidly during the new year as it has in the past several months," the publisher said, "Garrett county will have a newspaper with a larger bona fide circulation than any other weekly paper in this entire section of Maryland, West Virginia and Pennsylvania."

OUT OF A FROZEN RUT

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

FOR seventeen years Louise Potter had lived on the same street, in the same house, the decorous, frugal helpmeet of Tom Potter. She was a healthy, pretty woman, inordinately contented with her home, her husband and herself. Economy was the game that absorbed Louise Potter. Other women played bridge, mah-jongg, even flinch, but she played the game of money with necessary expenditure as her opponent. No matter what occurred she always won and another bit of Tom's earnings and her savings went into the bank.

Tom was a quiet, kindly man who loved his wife, his home, his work and desired no other interests in life. He was noted for punctuality. "Tom Potter's coming home to supper. Time I went home," Mrs. White would say when she had lingered too long somewhere for a neighborly chat. Mrs. Holcomb said she always put her potatoes on the instant she saw Tom appear at the end of the street. The Holcombs lunched at 12:30. "He's that punctual he's better than a clock," Mrs. Holcomb always said.

The Potters had no children. The little son who would have been a tall youth now had died. Mrs. White said that Louise Potter had started in to save for the boy with the purpose of providing for his education and his future and that she had contracted a habit of economy that she could not break.

"She will just go on saving and saving," Mrs. White sighed. "Although they have comfortable means and there's nobody to leave anything to. She has got into a rut and the rut has frozen. She will have to follow it to the end. There is no escape for her now."

Nobody could say that Mrs. White had got into a rut, frozen or otherwise. She was an ample-souled woman whose presence was a benefit to the whole neighborhood.

Suddenly the peaceful Potters were intruded upon by misfortune. It was found that Tom had to go to the hospital, had to have an operation. Some minor ailment long neglected had become serious.

Although the Potters had lived so long and so fully for themselves, people forgave them their selfishness and tried to find something to do for Louise that would help at least to console her. But she seemed impenetrable except once when she said with something like a sob to Mrs. White:

"I'm doing a lot of thinking."

Tom came back in three weeks a little pale, a little weak, but able to take up his work again. Soon he was making punctual appearances on the street, whistling, stepping briskly in the old way. He had, in short, made a complete recovery.

But Louise was changed. One day she was seen driving a new car! Mrs. Holcamb rushed to tell Mrs. White. Mrs. White could scarcely believe it until she herself saw Louise Potter learning to drive a bright new sedan. Louise's face was red, but she looked determined over her task.

Several days of painful struggle followed for Louise. Mrs. White, who had once tried to assist her husband in driving, knew what Louise Potter was going through. There came an evening when both Mrs. Holcomb and Mrs. White went across to speak to Tom, who was mowing the lawn. Louise had not come home to supper. They had watched. She had been gone alone for hours. The worst might have happened. Strange that Tom did not seem more concerned. All he said was: "I guess Lou knows what she's about."

At that moment she arrived. She was pale, perspiring, but triumphant. And the car was without scratch.

"I got into a bad detour," Louise said. "But I learned to drive. You needn't be afraid to go with me now."

Next day she filled the sedan with neighbors. It was a joyous party. She gave an inspiring performance of skill.

After that the Potters' sedan was a source of delight to the whole neighborhood. Louise taught her husband to drive. It was their joke that she, being the braver, had learned first.

Meanwhile the house of the Potters underwent various repairs and improvements. New paint, new paper and new furniture made it quite another place.

The Potters began to entertain. They invited people in for the evening and for dinner. They even gave a party and had everybody they knew.

They were expanding in a way that surprised and mystified everybody. Tom, the repressed and silent, became genial and gay. Louise's generosity began to be talked about. She actually offered cakes and jelly for sociable functions! They were excellent cakes, too. Tom gave ten dollars to the fresh-air fund.

What had happened to the Potters? Or to be exact, what had happened to Louise? For Tom only followed whither she led.

No matter what had happened, the whole neighborhood suddenly discovered that the Potters were nice people to know. They had been tolerated hitherto, now they were enjoyed, liked for themselves.

When poor Clara Bains died and left her little family unmothered, Mrs. White went to Louise Potter.

"There are six children," Mrs. White said. "Poor Henry can look after the four older ones—they are big enough to help themselves, but the twins will have to go somewhere. They are only five." She looked meaningly at Louise and waited.

Louise pressed her fingers to her lips and pondered. She knew what was in her friend's mind.

"If they were two boys," she said. She lifted her eyes to her son's portrait. "And yet—I don't know that I could bear to see a boy in Robert's place."

"Julia Lennox says she will take one and Mrs. Couch wants the other," remarked Mrs. White.

Louise gave a gasp.

"If Julia Lennox, poor as she is and with that crooked back, and Mrs. Couch with seven in the family already can do a thing of that kind, I can too," she said. "I'll take both of them. And I'll do the best I can by them."

Tears came to Mrs. White's eyes. She pressed Louise's hand. It was going to be a comfort to know that the pathetic twin girls were well provided for. Mrs. White was too old to feel like bringing up a child herself, but she had undertaken to find homes for the twins.

"It's nice that they won't be separated," she said. "They love each other so. If you could see them asleep, side by side, little Jane clinging to Mary's hand! But you will see them."

She was going away when an impulse seized her.

"I've always thought of you, Louise, as a woman who was in a rut, with the rut frozen solid," she said. "But you have got out of your rut splendidly."

"You mean I was jolted out—by Tom's sickness," Louise Potter replied. "It came to me then that we were living narrow, stupid lives, that I was keeping Tom out of a lot of enjoyment. If he had died what would my saving and pinching amount to anyway? We're only going this way once, and if you follow a frozen rut—" She smiled. "You send Mary and Jane right over, dear Mrs. White. I'm going upstairs to get the south room ready for them."

Not Likely That City Will Ever Be Rebuilt

In Asia are the sites of many ancient, flourishing cities which now "the cormorant and bittern possess, and where the owl and the raven dwell." We naturally look in that direction for hoary ruins.

But the New world, too, can show ruins—ruins which were not left by vanished native populations, but which were made only a short quarter of a century ago. These ruins were quickly made by a fearful eruption of Mt. Pelee near which nestled the thriving town of St. Pierre on the little island of Martinique, one of the Lesser Antilles. St. Pierre was rich and gay, "the naughtiest city in the West Indies." It possessed the only tram cars in that part of the world. There were fine homes, clubs and amusement places.

In a few short hours the lives of 40,000 people were snuffed out as death was belched from the grim volcano, and St. Pierre joined the category of towns that were.

This happened in 1902. Today the place is still covered with dust and ashes. Cows wander through the broken doorways that formerly gave entrance to splendid mansions. Moss and vines cover the broken and tumbled walls. Banana plants are growing where the children used to gather in the pleasant patios. Mt. Pelee stands quietly in the background looking as innocent and sleepy as a pile of rocks and dirt.

Much of the debris of 1902 has been cleared away and native shacks have risen along some of the old streets. In some places the corners of ruins are inhabited. But there are no signs that St. Pierre will ever be itself again.—Pathfinder Magazine.

The Morning Grouch

A Detroiter, self-styled "student of human nature," remarks that a study of the behavior of street car riders has taught him that people are less apt to be in a humorous mood early in the morning than in the afternoon. "I have watched people on their way to work in the morning, reading the comic strips in the morning newspapers. They rarely smile and hardly ever chuckle over the figured witticisms. But in the afternoon, when they read the 'funnies,' the last picture in each strip always brings a smile or a laugh."—Detroit News.

Got Teddy Thinking

Teddy's uncle was a very tall, fine-looking man, while his father was very small. Teddy admired his uncle, and wished to grow up like him. One day he said to his mother: "Mamma, how did uncle grow so big and tall?"

"Well," said his mother, "when uncle was a small boy he was always very good, and he tried to do what was right at all times; so he grew up big and tall."

Teddy thought this over seriously for a few minutes, then said: "Mamma, what kind of a boy was papa?"—Pearson's Weekly.

Most Valuable Fur

A coat or cloak of genuine sea otter is worth more than its weight in gold. While the skins of the ordinary fresh-water otter have no particular value in the fur market, the pelt of the true sea otter is today the most valuable of all furs. The sea otter was formerly found in considerable abundance off the coast of Alaska, but it is now nearly, if not quite, extinct.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMPANY SEEKS A NEW SLOGAN

Monongahela West Penn Company Announces ompetition Open to All Residents

Announcement was made the first of tho year by the Monongabela West Ponn Public Service Company, which furnishes public utility services to communities throughout Northern West Virginia, that it has decided to offer a prize for the best slogan for company use submitted before March 31 next. The contest is expected to occasion widespread interest because of tho many communities in which the company operates.

As outlined by officials of the company tbe slogan adopted should express as nearly as possible the company's interest in its customers and tbe communities served, as well as the company's desire and ability to render friendly and adequate public service.

The slogan which has been used in the past, "We Value Your Friendship As We Do Your Patronage, it is felt, does not completely express the attitude of the company and its officials, and it is because of this that the competition has been started for a new slogan. It is felt, too, that the new slogan should be shorter and more to the point.

Aside from barring company employes in the competition, tbo company has placed no restrictions on the contest, except that it is limited to persons living in counties where the company renders some utility service. Anyone may submit as many slogans as desired but each should be on a separate piece of papor, with the author's name. Slogans should be sent to the company's general office at Fairmont.

BITTINGER.

The coldest wave of the winter swept over this section at the beginning of the new year when the mercury went doyn to a point fifteen degrees below zero. The intense cold was accompanied by a driving northwest wind, which made existence uncomfortable for those who were obliged to be abroad.

During the afternoon of last Saturday, the last day of the old year, this community witnessed the unusual phenomenon of a midwinter electric storm. The lighning was very vivid and the thunder as pronounced as in a summer storm. Immediately following this storm the mercury began to fall rapidly and by Sunday morning the zero point had been passed.

AMOCO-GAS

will make and break records for You in--- 1928

The year 1927 saw AMOCO-GAS making and breaking records. The Chamberlin trans-Atlantic flight and the Pan American flight—these were on everybody's tongue—and AMOCO-GAS furnished the power. On the speedway Auburn and Studebaker cars made new world's records with AMOCO-GAS. And on the water, too, records were shattered by boats using AMOCO-GAS.

AMOCO-GAS broke other records, too—not as spectacular, perhaps, but even more important to the individual motorist. Records of pick-up, of quick starting, of hill climbing—these are broken every day wherever AMOCO-GAS is sold.

AMOCO-GAS will continue to shatter records in 1928, not only in the air, on the speedway and in the water, but on the highways and byways as well.

GRANTSVILLE.

By G. W. Diefenbach

Cold Wave Strikes Grantsville.

A drop of 57 degrees in the mercury was experienced here on Saturday in less than 15 hours, being one of the mose severe changes experieneed in years. Early Saturday afternoon the thermometer registered 55 degrees above and by midnight it was two degrees below zero. No cases of suffering have been reported, however it has caused many water pipes to freeze and doubtless there has been more or less suffering from the eold by animals not securely housed.

Travelers From Florida Befriended

A traveler with his wife and three children en route to Steubenville, O., from a point in Florida, had to seek shelter in the municipal building here on Sunday night where he was permitted to remain until Tuesday. He reports having gone to Florida upon the promise of a position as stationary engineer, but upon arriving there the contractor offering the employment failed to get the work he expected, thereby leaving the engineer to do the best he could under the circumstanees. His funds became exhausted at Hagerstown, but he reports having sufficient gasoline to complete the trip to his home. The people of Grantsville generously supplied the man and his family with food while they remained here.

14 Below Near Bittinger.

Mr. Ernest Bowser, of near Bittinger, reports that the mercury stood at fourteen below at his place. A continuance of low temperatures for a few days will delight those who are fond of skating, and also those who store ice for summer use. Last year none was taken due to the fickelness of the weather.

Yoder-Wisseman.

Miss Anna Yoder, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Yoder, who has been taking a course in nursing in the Milford Emergency Hospital at Milford, Delaware, was united in marriage with Dorsey Wisseman, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wisseman, of Greenwood, Delaware, at the Amish Mennonite church of Greenwood, on Saturday evening, December 24, by Rev. John L. Mast, of Belleville, Pa. The attendants were Misses Lucy Bender, Dema Miller and Mr. Eli Sehrock, of Greenwood, and Norman Yoder, a brother of the bride, of Grantsville. Mr. Wisseman is a young farmer and former resident of this community, his parents being natives of this locality, but settled in Delaware about fifteen years ago.

H. S. Ag. Club Active.

The Maple Land Agricultural Club of the high school has secured for its benefit and that of the Home Economics Department, an illustrated lecture, given by the use of picture slides, to be shown at a meeting to be held on Thursday afternoon, January 12. The lecture is furnished by the United States Department of Agriculture. The club meets twice each month. Recently a group of new members were taken into membership and properly initiated. Those received were Clyde Bender, Manning Bowers, Alleen Bender, Clark Failinger, Charles Paul, Glenn Folk and Harold Setzer.

School Work Resumed.

All the departments of the elementary and high schools began their work for the new year on January 2 at 9:00 o'clock with enthusiasm. A most eordial and sympathetic relation exists between pupils and instructors, which is not always (but should be) found in school work. This relation has gone far to promote efficient work on the part of the pupil and a love for his work.

Shakespeare Club Entertains

The second year of the Shakespeare Club was brought to a most pleasant elose with an open meeting which was attended by a group of interested visitors and guests on Thursday evening of last week. The program was made up of a review of the plays studied during the past year, they being "As You Like It", "Winter's Tale", "Comedy of Errors", "Macbeth", "Corilanus", "Romeo and Juliet"; also sketches of Shakespeare's parentage, his life and his works. The rooms were decorated with holiday colors. A most pleasant social hour was spent and refreshments were served, including hot posset, a drink common to the time of Shakespeare.

Attends New Year Hop.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Bender, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Gnagey, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Keller, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Diehl, Miss Harriet Stanton and Dr. and Mrs. T. O. Broadwater attended the Knights of Good Fellowship Ball given by that organization at La Vale Inn near Cumberland on Saturday night.

Mrs. Bender Entertains

Mrs. Byron H. Bender gave a delightful six-table bridge party at her home, Little Crossings, on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The decorations were appropriate to the season, being lighted candles on the tables and red and green festoons. The guests from out of town were Miss Helen Stanton, Johnstown; Mrs. Robert Cook, Meyersdale; Mrs. Ernest Livengood and Miss Margaret Young, Salisbury; Miss Marie Conner, Atlantic City; Mrs. James K. Smart, Philadelphia; Mrs. T. D. Maurer, Chicago; Miss Harriett Stanton, Wilmington, N. C. Mrs. J. F. Fahey was winner of high score and Mrs. N. R. Davis, low. Mrs. Bender served a two course luncheon to her guests.

Surprise Party

The friends of Miss Alverta Miller gave a surprise party for her at the Stone House, Little Meadows, on Wednesday evening, being on vacation from her studies at the University of Maryland. The evening was spent in games, contests and dancing. Refreshments were served.

Missionary Society Meeting

The Reformed Missionary Society met in the home of Mrs. Fred Livengood on December 29. The meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. B. H. Bender; the subject was Child Welfare Work of Foreign Missions. Miss Ruth Keller led the discussion. Mrs. Harry Bender sang. There were a number of visitors present. Mrs. Livengood served a two course luncheon.

Bible Conference

Rev. C. F. Derstein, Kitchener, Ontario, Canada, and Rev. J. F. Grove, Mason and Dixon, Pa., conducted a Bible conference at Springs Mennonite church from December 27, to 30, which was well attended by the Amish and Mennonite members of this vicinity, and by the whole membership generally, the building being well filled for nearly all of the meetings.

Church Services

The Congregational meeting of the Reformed church, which was to have been held on Sunday evening, was postponed to Thursday evening, January 5, because of the cold weather. The Sunday school service will be held on Sunday, January 8, at 10 a. m. Lutheran Sunday school at 10 a. m. Worship will be held on Thursday evening, January 12. Methodist Sunday school at 10 a. m., Sunday, 8. Catholic Mass at 10 a. m. The C. E. Society postponed its New Year service until January 8, which will be held at 6:30 p. m.

M. W. Kinsinger's Barn Burns.

At midnight, January 2, the barn of M. W. Kinsinger, located on his farm about two and one-miles southeast of Somerfield, Pa., was burned to the ground with all contents, resulting in a loss, conservatively estimated at six thousand dollars, which was covered by insurance to the extent of about $4,000.

Mrs. Clarence Glotfelty, daughter of Mr. Kinsinger, was awakened by the barking of their dog and upon hearing a noise and seeing a light she thought it was an automobile. However, she awakened her husband, and upon investigation found the barn in flames.. Mr. Kinsinger was awakened immediately, but the barn was beyond saving or anything that was in it. A smaller barn nearby, used for the horse stable, was in the path of the fire and Mr. Glotfelty made a desperate effort to get the animals out of the building, but they were so frantic with fright that they could not be driven from the shelter and were burned with it. A granary standing nearby was saved with much effort.

The loss, exclusive of buildings, consists of two horses, 11 Jersey cows, a Jersey bull and ten Jersey heifers, 4 hogs, about 175 chickens, 50 tons of hay, besides mueh straw and corn fodder, a Ford roadster and all the farming implements except a tractor and a pulverizer, which were not stored inside because of lack of spaee.

The cause of the fire is not known. Incendiarism is not suspected, as Mr. Kinsinger and his family have always been peaceable people and got along well with their neighbors. This is a very severe loss to both families, as they worked hard for five years to bring the farm up to their standards and were succeeding in doing so.

U. OF M. WINS PLACE HIGH IN THE ATHLETIC WORLD

Maryland State University Enjoys Close Relations With Many Big Institutions

The University of Maryland by its accomplishments in athletics during the last few years has won for itself greater distinction in this field than any otbsr institution in Maryland and has become the representativo of the state against ths biggest universities of other states. The most important thing that has come to the university from its excellent record in the various branches of athletics is the splendid relationships it enjoys; no other institution in Maryland has as close and pleasant relationships with other institutions over so broad a territory. It is a member of the Southern Conference and in close touch with every state university and state college in the south. Each year in some sport it meets many of the big northern universities.

In the last few years Maryland has won victories over Yale, Virginia Princeton, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Columbia, Dartmouth, W. Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and many others. This year it is meeting the great majority of these schools again in one sport or another. As was stated in a New York newspaper a few days ago, "The University of Maryland has by its clean play and sportsmanship and the excellence of its teams becoms a welcome visitor to the most select athletic fields in the country."

Each year the state university is compelled to decline many offers of games. For instance, it recently was compelled to turn down an offer from the University of Nebraska for a football game in 1928 because its schedule for next year is completed.

The university maintains varsity and freshman teams in seven sports: Football, basket-ball, baseball, track and field, lacrosse, tennis and rifle shooting. In the spring more than 250 men are out as candidates for these teams. The freshmen are not eligible for varsity competition but have teams of their own which play through schedules of games with the freshman teams of other institutions.

The values derived by students from frequent opportunities to visit other institutions are great; for instance the members of the football team in the season just closed, visited Norfolk, Va.; Richmond, Va.; Charlottesville, Va.; Nashville, Tenn.; Chapel Hill, N. C.; New Haven, Conn., and Jacksonville, Fla. The basket-ball team next spring will take a trip through Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. The relay team each year goes to New York, Boston, Baltimore and Richmond for races.

No other school in Maryland offers as many opportunities for students to take part in sports and if the freshman student has any natural ability at all he can, by perseverence, finally make one or another of the university teams. It is estimated that fully half the members of the freshman class will be members of freshmen squads this year.

The freshman teams also get opportunities to make trips, the football team this year having visited Lexington, Va., and Charlottesville, Va., and next fall will visit North Carolina.

Dr. R. A. Pearson, president of the university, is heartily in favor of athletics. His view is thus briefly expressed:

"Athletics at the University of Maryland, just as at practically all other institutions, form the basework of student activities and consequently play a big part in college life. They help to build character and a strong body and are one of the biggest factors in developing the fine conception of loyalty which marks the average college man.

Athletics also play a big part in developing keen minds, quick reactions and courage, are a real force in establishing college unity, and furthermore in athletics are set standards for individual accomplishment that undoubtedly inspire others to great effort and higher success."

BUS COMPANY PAYS LARGE SUM FOR MOTOR LICENSES

Monongahela Transport Co. Is Heavy Taxpeyer in States

More than $18,000.00 for 1928 licenses for buses was paid the State Road Commission by the Mouongahela Transport Company, which is the bus-oporating subsidiary of the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company, it has just been announced. Because of expansions during the year, this is the largest sum the company has ever paid exclusively for license taxes.

This license tax is exclusive of gasoline, property, gross sales and other taxes which the company pays the state and its various sub-divisions for road, school, municipal and other purposes. Last year the items for gasoline taxes alone for the buses amounted to more than $10,000.00.

Principal lines of the Monongahela Transport Company are from Fairmont to Morgantown, Morgantown to Uniontown, Morgantown to Mountain Lake Park and Morgantown to the Scott's Run section of Monongalia county. Other shorter lines are operated in the city of Morgantown and at Fairmont, Clarksburg and Parkersburg.

GET NATIONAL AWARDS

Two employes of the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company, Jess Morgenstern, of Marietta, Ohio, and Otto H. Grandon, of Parkersburg, have been awarded through the safety division of the National Electric Light Association, Samuel Insull medals for life saving through the Shafer prone pressure method of resuscitation. Each of these men in the last year through the application of life-saving strokes saved a human life from death by electric shock.

The medals were presented at a safety meeting held recently in Parkersburg when all company employes in that section as well as representatives from leading Industries were present. C. S. McCalla, general manager of the Pennsylvania and Ohio Light and Power Company presented the medals on behalf of Mr. Insull.

TWO NEW PLANTS STARTED

New plants providing light and power service generally for the first time have just been opened by the Monongahela West Penn Public Service Company at Grantsville, Calhoun county, and Elizabeth, Wirt county, W. Va. The Grantsville plant was started December 12 and the Elizabeth plant December 22. At both of these places appropriate ceremonies were held in connection with the starting of operations and company officials joined with municipal executives and leading citizens in carrying out the programs. Continuous day and night service will be furnished in these communities as in all others served by the Monongahela System.

Beginning Right.

We ought to be profoundly thankful that the great nation of which we are a part began with God. The Pilgrim Fathers brought God with them to America. They laid the right kind of foundation for our national life; and no structure has ever endured without an enduring foundation.

The Spaniards also came to America. They had the advantage of an earlier start; but it was not a better start. They came seeking wealth. The lust of gold and the lust of conquest were their motives. And the vast empire which Spain staked out in the new world—where is it today? Spain started wrong. Says the historian, Elson, "For gold she slew the red man, for gold she enslaved the black man, and gold proved the ruin of Spain." Spain laid her foundation in the hatred of oppressed peoples. It has proved not an abiding foundation.

The Pilgrims came seeking a different goal. "The Almighty was their treasure, the precious silver unto them." They built their house upon the Eternal Rock; and though the rains have descended in torrents, and though many a flood has come and gone, and though the winds of controversy have raged and shrieked and howled, their house still stands.

Every great task, every worthwhile achievement, begins with God. "Except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it; except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh but in vain." (Psalm 127.)

Here is a thought for the new year—begin each task with God. Commence each project with prayer. If we will make this the rule of our lives the year 1928 will be our happiest and most prosperous.

This rule serves a two-fold purpose. There are some tasks which we could not do with God. We could not build and operate a moonshine plant with God as our partner; nor could we traffic in the product of such a plant. There are numerous jobs and schemes and activities which we know are not in harmony with the will of God nor with the welfare of man. Then we were happier and better off to leave them undone.

But, if a task can be done with God as our partner, if it is a task which will render a genuine service to the community and minister to the welfare of our fellow-men, then it cannot be well done without God. Only in cooperation with the Supreme Architect and Master Builder of the ages can our human talents transcend their human limitations and achieve something enduringly worthwhile. Only when inspired by an Unwearied Power and a Heavenly Vision can we rise above our blind weakness into a life of truly creative energy.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. L. M'GLONE,
Resident County Agent,
Office, Court House.

Legumes Bulk Large In Maryland Hay Crop.

A big increase in the production of the so-called legume crops has been a striking but little noted feature of Maryland agriculture during the past ten years, it is pointed out by crop specialists of the University of Maryland.

Legume crops, which include the clovers, alfalfa and such plants as soybeans and cowpeas are grown principallly for hay but can be used advantageously for pasture. Approximately 155,000 acres of farm land were devoted last year to the production of legume crops for hay and the production was estimated at 242,000 tons of hay.

The figures indicate that Maryland farmers are depending upon legume crops for almost half of their annual hay requirements, it is pointed out, and are profiting accordingly in the superior quality of forage available for livestock feeding.

Livestock specialists have long advocated the increased use of legume hay in feeding rations for most farm animals. The legumes carry relatively large percentages of protein, one of the most costly feeding elements to supply and one of the most essential for successful livestock production.

Legume hays are particularly valuable with corn, helping to balance the protein deficiency in the latter feed. The two together constitute the basis of a well-balanced ration for most classes of livestock. Other feeds are, of course, sometimes necessary but corn and legume hay make a good foundation on which to establish a well-balanced ration for most livestock.

CONCERNING CHRISTMAS GREENS CONSERVATION

State Forestry Department Says 1,000 Acres Would Supply Need

A recent bulletin issued by the Forestry Department of Maryland states that "at this season of the year, well-intentioned but poorly-informed people frequently start movements against the use of Christmas trees, holly and other Christmas greens. From the conservation standpoint, the use of Christmas trees is not important. The trees are small and young and, while the number used each year seems large, it is but a very minute proportion of the trees annually destroyed through forest fires, tree diseases and insects. It has been calculated that if all the trees used in the City of Baltimore were grown in the State of Maryland a thousand acres of land would furnish a perpetual supply of trees sufficient for the needs of the city. A like area would supply enough trees for the counties.

The greater part of the trees used at the Christmas season come from the northern states of New York, New Hampshire, Vermont, Maine and from Canada. Balsam fir is the favorite Christmas tree.

The Department of Forestry considers the trade in Christmas trees a legitimate industry and use of the forest, and, as such, it is interested in its development. Local land owners are encouraged to consider the possibility of growing Christmas trees on idle land. In many instances a combination of Christmas tree growing and forest planting have been profitable. Forest trees of a suitable species are planted at a close spacing of 3x3 or 4x4 feet. In from five to ten years the trees approach a size suitable for Christmas trees. Alternate trees are then removed for this purpose and the remaining trees allowed to develop. In this way it has often been possible to defray the total cost of the planting by the income from the Christmas trees.

The law protecting trees, Art. 27, Chap. 179, Acts of 1918, has an important bearing on the Christmas green question. This law provides a fine for removing trees or shrubs from the land of another without the written consent of the owner. By reason of this statute, pilfering of trees and greens, a very deplorable practice, is discouraged. From another standpoint, the Forestry Department is interested in this law's enforcement. Harvesting of holly, Christmas trees and other shrubs should form a legitimate business and a by-product of the forest, aiding the forest owner to show a credit balance in the operation of his forest business. Forestry progresses only as it become profitable, and, consequently, the Forestry Department desires to see forest owners protected. Placards citing the law and giving warning to maruders may be obtained on application to the Forestry Department.

Oakland's volunteer fire department since November 1, 1926, has responded to approximately twenty calls and in all instances where the alarm was turned in promptly, had the fire under control or extinguished in the minimum time, it has been announced by Fire Chief George Kerins.

In only one instance has the entire buildnig been consumed following the call for the department and that was on Sunday, January 1, when the signal tower at Mountain Lake Park, owned by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company burned. The loss was occasioned, it is stated, by reason of delay in sending in the call for the services of the department.

In addition to several minoralarms, the fire company has responded to the following calls:

Home of Lawrence K. Dixon, Oakland, 10:20 a. m., November 2, 1926. Cause unknown; damage small.

Home of Floyd White, Loch Lynn, November 7, 1926, at 2:00 p. m.

Chemical Engine Used Much.

During this period of time the department had four calls on forest fire alarms and responded each time.

The majority of the fires handled were checked or extinguished by use of the chemical engine and the pumper truck, used on several occasions, did its work to the supreme satisfaction of all the members of the department.

Officers of Department.

Officers of the department are as follows:

Fred. Peddicord, president; Alva G. Gortner, vice-president; Howard P. Stuck, secretary; Walter W. Dawson, treasurer; George Kerins, chief; Emroy Bolden, first assistant chief; W. R. Browning, second assistant cheif; J. J. Sweeney, captain. The officers are the same as those elected last year with the exception of Howard P. Stuck, secretary, who succeeds C. Milton Sincell.

Train Strikes Car at Point Near Altamont.

The Chevrolet cabriolet of John W. Thomas, Deer Park, was badly wrecked Sunday night when it was struck by a locomotive at the bottling works crossing near Altamont on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

The engine struck the car when it was more than half way across the tracks and damaged the rear end and fender of the rear to a considerable extent. The driver of the automobile escaped without injury. The car was brought to the Oakland Garage, Oakland, for repairs.

Messrs. Edward and Leo Helbig To Acquire City Roller Mills

Mr. Andrew W. Helbig, who has operated the City Roller Mills in Oakland for the past seventeen years, is to retire from the milling business on February 1st when he will be succeeded by two of his sons, Messrs. Edward and Leo Helbig.

The Helbig Brothers will conduct the business under the old name, "City Roller Mills," as it has been known ever since its establishment more than thirty years ago by the late George M. Mason, who had the present building erected.

The only change the new proprietors now contemplate making is the conducting of the business on a cash basis. They feel that by doing this they will be able to give farmers better prices and will also be able to keep a larger variety of goods on hand at all times.

Leo Helbig, the youngest member of the new firm, has been connected with the operation of the mill for the past seven years and is familiar with all of the details of the business.

J. Edward Helbig, the senior member of the new firm, has had some experience in the milling business and also in the mercantile business, being at the present time an employe in the general store of G. A. Fraley & Sons.

GARRETT COUNTY WOMAN SHOOTS AND KILLS WILDCAT

Huntress. To Protect Her Home and Property, Exhibits Stamina

The blood of pioneers still courses through the veins of some Garrett countians. The latest evidence of the fact being the achievement of Mrs. Truman Wilt, Sr., told in a news article sent to The Republican on Tuesday, as follows:

Mrs. Truman Wilt, Sr., residing at the northern extremity of the Bear Hill Settlement, near Jennings, Md., was aroused early last Saturday morning by the sound as of someone prowling about the chicken house, located at some distance from the residence.

A couple of hounds, which had been sleeping beneath the porch of the house, also heard the noise and at once started out to investigate and in a very few moments Mrs. Wilt heard a confusion of snarling sounds, followed by the baying of the dogs, as they apparently were following a trail leading toward the mountain.

Paying no further attention to the occurrence, Mrs. Wilt remained in her bed until daylight, but after she had kindled a fire and had begun the preparations for breakfast she noticed the furious barking of the dogs a few hundred yards up the mountain-side.

Determined to see what occasioned the barking of the animals she threw a coat about her and went to the spot where the dogs were and there discovered a very large and fierce-looking wildcat perched high up in a tree.

Remembering that her husband was not at home and no one in the house but her small children, Mrs. Wilt ran back to her home, took the shotgun down from its place above the door and returned to the forest. With consummate coolness and skill she fired at the animal and brought it down at the first shot.

The wildcat was an unusually large one and Mrs. Wilt thought it had come down to her place from the mountain in search of food.

"SEE YOU LATER" TO BE PRESENTED AT MARYLAND

Play to be Given Under Auspices of Oakland Civic Club—All Home Talent Characters

"See You Later", the musical comedy in three acts under the direction of Miss Lucile Mock of the Triangle Producing Company, Greensboro, N. C., will be staged in the Maryland Theatre on this and Friday evenings, January 12 and 13. The play is being given under the auspices of the Oakland Civic Club and will be staged by local talent.

"See You Later" is a musical comedy you will never forget, it is said, and there are laughs galore, thrills aplenty, songs and steps you can never forget. It has its absorbing plot and enough originality to give the amateur players an opportunity to extend themselves.

The various roles of the play have been selected with care and every character is said to be well fitted for the part.

Donald McKay will be played by George H. Hanst; Sollie Goldstein, a partner in the National Contracting Company, a very Hebraic role, James Dodge; Percy Vare, the Englishman, Kenneth Stahl; Mr. Milrox, the millionaire, Edward Kahl; Mary, the heroine, Isabel West; Sally Forth, the frivolous creature, Lavona Blamble; Jeff, Negro janitor and butler, Roland Ready; Speedy, the impertinent office boy, Thomas Gonder; Neverre Spottsem, the infallible sleuth of the Goofus Correspondence School of Detectives, Robert Stemple; Mabie Knott, the primping stenographer, Helen Hinebaugh.

Besides the principal characters, there are about forty more in the mixed chorus, flapper chorus, stenographer's chorus and broom chorus.

There will be a specialty dance by Virginia Fraley and a solo by Reeves Blandford.

The show will start promptly at 8:15 and admission will be 25 and 50 cents.

MARRIAGES ARE FEW SINCE THE FIRST OF NEW YEAR

Number of Applicants For Licenses Far Below the Average

Marriage licenses for the week ending Monday at noon were extremely scarce, according to A. G. Ross, deputy clerk of the circuit court, only eight applications being made. After making a new yearly record of 1300 marriages, the month of January is far below the average of last year. Only nine have been issued so far this month. Last year 67 were issued in January.

Earl Glen Sypolt, 23, musician, of Clarksburg, W. Va., and Opal May Powell, 19, of Monongah, West Va.

Claude Currey, 21, music dealer, and Mary Madelin Meredith, 21, both of Shinnston, West Va.

Fred Patton McCollough, 40, painter, and Lucy Lucille Sypolt, 16 (parents' consent), both of Terra Alta, W. Va.

August Grenke, 53, farmer, and Ella Miller, 23, both of Fairhope, Pa.

Adam McQuain, 28, school teacher, and Frena Myrle Workman, 21, both of Orlando, West Va.

Sale of Tuberculosis Seals in the County May be Above Average

That more money from the sale of tuberculosis seals in Garrett county had been turned in on January 3, 1928, than had been handed the treasurer on the same date last year, was brought out in a service letter issued by the Maryland Tuberculosis Association a day or two ago.

The report showed that on January 3, 1927, there had been $172 paid over to the treasurer, and that on a like date in the present year the sum of $183.94 had been accounted for, giving fair proof that Garrett county will in all probabillty reach her quota.

Garrett county, in 1925, returned $230, and in 1926, $305.61. Allegany headed the list with $4500 already paid the treasurer for the past campaign, which closed on Christmas day. In 1925 and 1926, Allegany county's returns were $4,083.20 and $5,250, respectively.

SWAN JURY SEES MOVIES AND HAS PLEASURE RIDE

Court Spares No Expense To Combat Jury Avoidance With Pleasant Circumstances.

(Sunday's Cumberland Times)

Especially interesting in the light of Judge Albert A. Doub's comments on Tuesday morning in his charge to the Grand Jury for the January term of the Circuit Court for Allegany county, in which he deplored the current unwillingness of residents of the county to perform jury duty, are three bills which were passed on by the County Commissioners to the Court for approval.

A bill of seven dollars for theatre tickets, one of ten dollars for automobiles in which the jury was taken out for an airing, and one for several hundred dollars for food and lodging at the Algonquin Hotel, will be among the costs of the Mabel Swan murder trial which will be presented to Garrett county for payment.

It would seem, from the above, that the life of a juryman might be an altogether comfortable and even pleasant existence, and it is difficult to see just why good jurors are so hard to obtain.

According to the oath administered to the bailiff to whom the jury is entrusted, they are to receive "neither food nor drink" save by order of the Court, until they have reached a verdict. As everyone knowns and as no one could possibly object to, jurors are allowed all the food and drink they desire. And while a few might object to the dining and lodging of the jury at a comparatively expensive hotel, the jurors are certainly entitled to palatable food and clean, comfortable lodging. It may be that there is no less expensive place available to feed and lodge the jury which the Court considers adequate. At any rate, Sheriff Harvey has not asked the jurors to partake of anything less than the best fare and lodging obtainable.

To make their task less boresome the Swan jury was entertained at the Strand Theatre and taken for a long ride in the country. One of its members was taken ill but with prospect of recovery in time to continue the case. Consequently the sheriff took the men for a ride and to see a show, a practice variously reported about the Court House as usual and unusual.

It is interesting to speculate to what length a court may go in order to make jury duty less wearisome. It requires no especially active imagination to picture a future jury enjoying a real holiday as the result of successive steps by a Court to attract good jurors.

It is also interesting to consider if or not Garrett County will pay the costs in the instances enumerated without question, since this particular case was a "guest" case and not one of Allegany County's own trial.

It is said that the desire to avoid the admitted civic duty of jury service is not peculiar to this community but that a similar civic laxity obtains throughout the country.

At first thought it must seem that avoidance of jury duty arises from the general prosperity enjoyed by the average juror when up and about his own work or business, beside which the most attractive jury duty possible must seem irksome.

The question naturally presents itself as to whether courts can best combat the condition by making jury duty as attractive as possible by theatre tickets, rides and fine hotel accommodations, or by education to the fact that jury duty is not expected to be attractive and that it is a responsibility of citizenship to be borne cheerfully and willingly.

Oakland Marine Among Those Embarking for Nicaragua.

Loree F. McRobie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph McRobie, of Weber, east of town, who recently re-enlisted in the United States Marine Corps, is one of the 1242 Marines who embarked Monday for Nicaragua to assist their comrades there in running Augustino Sandino and his followers to earth. Marine McRobie was among the 300 men who sailed from Charleston, S. C., and Norfalk, Va., on board the cruisers Trenton, Raleigh and Milwaukee.

The reinforcements detachments which sailed on Monday will concentrate at Corinto, on the west coast of Nicaragua, necessitating a passage through the Panama Canal for those embarking at Norfolk and Charleston. It has been estimated that the voyage will require a week.

YOUNG MINER HAS BACK BROKEN IN MINE ACCIDENT

Jonas Sines Victim In His Own Workings Last Friday.

Jonas Sines, aged 26 years, son of the late Rev. W. Taylor Sines, of Garrett county, and father of a family, had his back broken Friday afternoon about four o'clock when a mass of rock and slate from the roof of the mine at his home fell upon him.

At the time of the accident Mr. Sines' little three-year old son was with him and the fall caught both the father and son. The former was rendered almost helpless, but with his arms free he worked the slate off the boy's legs and sent him for aid. Mr. Sines' wife summoned some neighbors and a physician and in a short time after their arrival the injured man was conveyed to his home, being taken from thence to the Western Maryland Hospital in Cumberland where he is now a patient.

The mine in which the accident occurred is on Mr. Sines' farm located near Swallow Falls, a few miles west of Oakland.

It is said that should Mr. Sines survive his injuries he will be almost entirely helpless, his lower limbs being completely paralyzed.

Retiring Cashier of The First National Bank Presented With Gift.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the First National Bank of Oakland following their election on Tuesday, Mr. Fred. A. Thayer, president of the institution, presented Mr. W. W. Dawson, retiring cashier, with a fine office chair as a token of the appreciation of the board for the sixteen years' of loyal service which he had rendered the bank.

Mr. Dawson recently resigned the cashiership in order to take up the study of law and was taken somewhat by surprise by the action of his bank friends, as no intimation of the matter had been given him in advance. He expressed his appreciation both for the gift and for the pleasant and kindly relations which existed between the directors and himself during his connection with the bank and which still continue. Mr. Dawson is now associated with Mr. E. R. Jones, attorney.

$150.000 Addition to Hopemont

A new building will be built this coming spring at Hopemont, near Terra Alta, West Va., by the State. The building is to cost $150,000 and will be known as the Children's Unit. It will be fireproof throughout and modern in every detail. Two stories high, it will be 237 feet in length, with a capacity of 100 children. It has been badly needed since children have been received at the sanitarium, as the buildings now being used for this purpose are among the first built and are not suitable.

The sanitarium at Hopemont, which is located about nine miles west of Oakland on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, is fast becoming one of the most up-to-date institutions of its kind in the country and under the supervision of its present superintendent. Dr. Pettit, the institution is used as a model by other States.

MINOR LAW VIOLATIONS CAUSE ARREST OF SEVERAL

Number of Car Drivers Fail To Carry Registration Cards and Driver's License Tickets

Driving with 1927 license tags instead of the new tags required under the law of Maryland, and having license plates obscured, were the causes of the majority of arrests made by State Policeman Thomas Currie during the week.

Car owners with obscured markers being halted for the purpose of a gentle reminder by the officer that such practice was purely a violation of the law, were in most cases found to be without their registration cord or operator's license, and were haled before Justice W. A. Gonder to answer the charges preferred by the officer.

D. W. Shillingberg, of Terra Alta, was fined $10 and costs for having no renewal of his chauffeur's license on Friday of last week.

Charles Wilson was fined $10 and costs on Saturday for driving without a chauffeur's license.

H. L. Lininger, Hazelton, W. Va., was fined $12 and costs on three charges on Monday. He had no license tags whatever, no driver's card and no registration card.

George Kein, Terra Alta, was fined $1 and costs for having no registration card and no driver's license.

Bryson H. Thomas paid $1 and costs on Monday for operating his car without muffler.

Stanley Tibbetts, Westernport, was fined $11 and costs on two charges. He had no registration card and wrong license plates on his car.

W. F. Six, driving a Detroit (Mich.) car, was fined a like amount on the same charges.

W. W. Williams, Terra Alta, was fined $1 and costs for having no driver's license or registration card in his possesssion.

"Practically all of these arrests were made simply because the people arrested had overlooked the necessity of carrying their cards with them," the Justice told The Republican this morning. "When an officer stops a car to administer a reprimand, he must make a report of the occurrence and must question the driver as to his card, license, etc. It is the failure on the part of the operator to produce these necessities that compels the arrest to be made."

Lesson for January 15

JESUS AND SINNERS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:1-17.
GOLDEN TEXT—I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Forgives a Sinner.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Heals and Forgives.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Shows His Sympathy and Power.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus' Power to Make Whole.

I. Jesus Preaching the Word (vv 1, 2).

1. The surging crowd (v. 2).

So great was the crowd gathered about the house where Jesus was stopping, that there was no room to received them. As soon as it was noised about that Jesus was in the house, the multitudes gathered.

2. What Jesus preached unto them (v. 2).

He preached unto them the Word of God. He always preached the Word before He wrought miracles, for to make known the will of God was His supreme mission. Miracles were not an end in themselves, but to authenticate His work. The people came, some to be healed, and some out of curiosity. He gave them that which they needed, regardless of the motive which actuated their coming.

II. Jesus Forgiving Sins (vv. 3-5)

The man brought to Him was suffering from the dread disease of palsy, but his most deadly affliction was that of sin. This miracle was wrought by Jesus in confirmation of His message.

1. Faith coming to Jesus (v. 3).

The actuating impulse of the palsied man and the four friends who carried him was faith.

2. Faith overcoming difficulties (v. 4).

Though prevented by the crowd from coming to Jesus, they ascended the outer stairway and let the afflicted man down through the roof.

3. Faith rewarded (v. 5).

No word was uttered either by the paralytic or his bearers. Their action was enough. The paralytic got more than he expected. He desired healing of the body and he got bodily healing plus forgiveness of sins.

III. Jesus Answering the Scribes (vv. 6-10).

1. Their objections (vv. 6, 7). They asked:

(1) Why does He thus speak? (2) Who can forgive sin?

They were entirely right in their reasonings that only God can forgive sins. Their blunder was in not perceiving Him to be God.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 8-10).

He knew their inner thoughts and reasonings and manifested unto them His essential deity in that He had power to know their thoughts. He inquired, "Which is easier to say, thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say, arise and take up thy bed and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, He saith to the sick of the palsy, I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house." He was willing that His power in the invisible realm should be tested by His power in the visible.

IV. Jesus Healing the Paralytic (vv. 11, 12).

1. His healing was by the direct method—speaking the Word (v. 11). Christ's words are enough. With the command was given the strength to obey. That which Christ commands He gives the strength to perform.

2. The obedience of the man (v. 12).

He immediately arose, took up his bed and went forth before them all. The poor helpless man walked away with his bed upon his shoulder.

3. The people were amazed, and glorified God (v. 12). They said, "We never saw it on this fashion."

V. Jesus Eating With Publicans and Sinners (vv. 13-17).

1. The call of Levi (v. 14). Levi was a tax-gatherer under the Roman government. As Jesus passed by, He commanded Levi to leave his business and follow Him.

2. Jesus dining in Levi's house (v. 15). It seems that Levi, when he found the Savior, invited many of his business associates to eat with him. This gave an opportunity to Jesus to come into touch with these sinners.

3. The perplexed scribes and pharisees (v. 16). They asked, "How is it that He eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners?"

4. Jesus' reply (v. 17). "They that are whole have no need of the physician. I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."

SPARKS FROM AN OAKLAND PULPIT

THE OPEN DOOR.

Revelations 3:8: Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it.

St. John was a prisoner on Patmos, a penal island in the Mediterranean, inhabited by convicts marooned for various crimes ranging from high felonies to Christian discipleship, openly confessed. This island was the cage in which John was confined, the bars of which were bars of water, yet stronger than steel—the sea, the encompassing sea which separated him irrevocably from home and friends and church.

But the prisoner of Patmos, sighing because the door of liberty had been closed upon him, hears a Voice from above speaking of the open door which cannot be closed. Locked in this cage by the key of Rome, he sees in his dream One who holds the key of David, who openeth and no man shutteth; and shutteth and no man openeth.

It is one of the sublimest revelations that has ever come to the human soul. What is true liberty? What is real bondage?

Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;
Minds innocent and quiet take
That for an hermitage.

If I have freedom in my love
And in my soul am free,
Angels alone, that soar above,
Enjoy such liberty.

What human being has not experienced the bitter tragedy of having the door slammed in his face? It may be some poor fellow with a starving family knocking in vain at the employment office. It may be some foolishly ambitious girl who has gone to New York or Hollywood to become a "star", only to be greeted with a shrug. It may be some young man black-balled by the lodge he wants to join, or by the sweet girl he wants to marry. It may be some pathetic woman with a shawl over her head, a baby in one arm, a bundle in another, waiting at Ellis Island to be sent back to the old country from which she had come to rejoin her husband who had preceded her, only to find the quota filled, the door closed. It may be some splendid lad who yearns for a university education, but who has a widowed mother, or an invalid sister to support. Oh, the tragedy of the closed door!

Who has not stood in Moses's stead on Mount Nebo and gazed with wistful eyes at some promised land, just over there, and yet forever out of reach? So St. John stood on the shore of Patmos and looked with yearning eyes across the blue-green waste of waters to the purple hills where lay his home. And who does not need to hear, as John heard, the Voice, as of many waters, "Behold, I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it."

But listen! The same Voice speaks again: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the Door." Christ Himself is the Open Door, the Way, the only Way, to life.

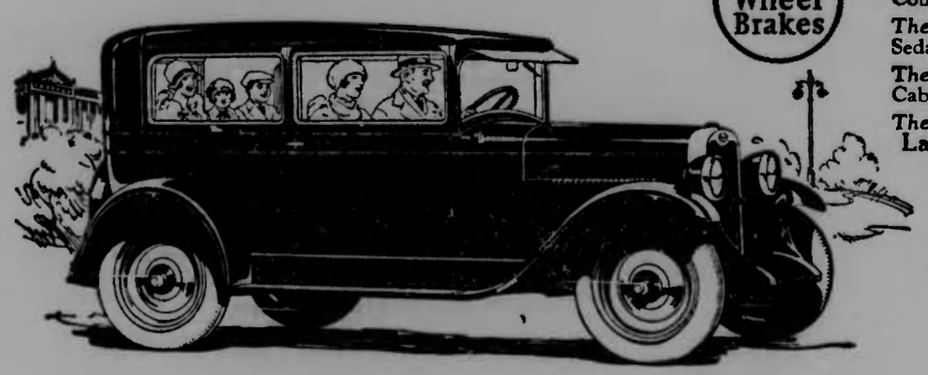
Again, Chevrolet has created an automobile so far beyond all expectations in the low-price field that it constitutes the greatest achievement of America's greatest industry.

Built on a 4-inch longer wheelbase—offering numerous improvements in performance, beauty and safety—the Bigger and Better Chevrolet marks a spectacular epoch in the development of luxurious transportation at low cost.

The engine is of improved valve-in-head design with alloy "invar strut" pistons . . . hydro-laminated camshaft gears . . . mushroom type valve tappets . . . AC oil filter . . . AC air cleaner and a new crankcase breathing system.

Throughout the entire car similar advancements are represented—from the four-inch longer wheelbase and the new semi-elliptic shock absorber springs—84% of the wheelbase, to the marvelously beautiful new Fisher bodies in new Duco colors.

Come in and drive this great new car. Drive it through traffic—and get the thrill of its darting pick-up . . . the smooth, certain action of its non-locking four-wheel brakes! Drive it on the open road—and test every point in the speed range for smoothness and roadability! Try it on the hills—and learn the true meaning of Chevrolet power!



Do that—and you will agree with thousands of others that here is the world's most luxurious low-priced automobile.

BRIDGE CONSTRUCTION RUSHED BY TELEPHONE

Efficiency Of Crews Increased By Modern Communication System

The telephone was the deciding factor in this outstanding engineering feat, the chief engineer states.

In the construction of the new Carquinez Bridge, recently opened for traffic across the Craquinez Straits between Crockett and Vallejo, Cal., the largest bridge of its type in the world, the telephone proved to be an indispensable tool and, in fact, if it had not been for the telephone the bridge could not possibly have been completed so soon.

This bridge is 4482 feet in length, contains two spans 1100 feet each, has a center tower of 150 feet, two anchor arms of 500 feet each, and 1132 feet of approach on the Crockett side. The only bridges that class with the Carquinez Bridge are the Firth of Forth, Scotland, and the Philadelphia and Camden. The Quebec Bridge is neither as large nor as long as the Carquinez.

To facilitate the construction of this gigantic structure the erecting company had a control system of its own with twelve telephone stations. It was necessary to get into communication with the erector crewa on the north side, so a two pair cable was laid on the bottom of the Bay. A ship dragged an anchor through it and it was replaced with another, hut the swift-running current aoon wore it out on the rough rocks.

After the center tower of the bridge was erected, the engineers strung a messenger wire overhead and carried both the telephone and power cables on it. The chief engineer declares that the telephone was the deciding factor in the raising of the two great suspended spans, as they allowed each crew, each foreman, and the chief engineer in charge to be at all times in direct communication with each other, and, therefore, every move was known by all and everything worked in unison.

POLITENESS PAYS

"Why cannot our thousands of religious and social organizations train the people generally in politeness," is the question asked by E. W. Howe's Monthly. The statement follows:

"A sordid commercial company has trained thousands of young women in agreeable politeness.

"The missionary work done by the telephone company is a valuable aid to its business: it helps the girls, for there is no more agreeable virtue than politeness.

"If religious and social organizations would teach politeness as well as the telephone exchange and add a few words as to the equal importance of fairness, industry, temperance, thrift surely God and his angels would approve.

"For it is politeness to get along in this world, and not be a burden or hore to others."

TELEPHONE PRESIDENT STATES SYSTEM'S IDEAL

The ideal telephone service, declares President Walter S. Gifford of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, and the aim of the Bell System is a telephone service for the nation, free, so far as humanly possible, from imperfections, errors or delays, and enabling, at all times, anyone, anywhere, to pick up a telephone and talk to anyone else, anywhere else, clearly, quickly and at a reasonable cost.

In many small towns in France, telephone exchanges are closed between the hours of noon and 2 o'clock, which is the luncheon period, and between 6 P. M. and 8 A. M.

IRELAND FOLLOWS U. S. EXAMPLE FOR FARMERS

A recent report to the Department of Commerce from the United States Consul at Dublin says that "the Irish farmer will soon be able to enjoy the luxury of a party line telephone if plans of the Free State Post Office Department work out. * * * The Post Office Department has made good progress in carrying out its $2,433,000 scheme of telephone development. * * * About 80 new exchanges have been opened, bringing the total to approximately 320. In January, 1926, there were 750 public call offices in operation, and the number of telephone subscribers was 22,000."

TO BESTOW RANK OF PAGE ON CLASS OF CANDIDATES

Pythian Initiatory Ceremonies Are to Begin Friday Night

The rank of Page will be bestowed on a class of candidates of Garrett Lodge, No. 113, Knights of Pythias, at the weekly meeting on Friday evening, according to officials of the organization. This will be the first class of candidates to receive a degree in 1928 and it is the desire of the officers of the lodge that every member will be present and participate in the proceedings.

Public installation of the newly elected officers was very largely attended on last Friday night, according to Singleton Townshend, Chancellor Commander, many ladies and visitors being among those present. Those who were installed by District Deputy Grand Chancellor A. G. Gortner were S. L. Townshend, chancellor commander; M. W. Mann, vice chancellor; R. T. Hoffman, prelate; Paul B. Naylor, master of work; D. W. Walter, master of finance; Walter Hardesty, kecper of records and seal; E. P. Kahl, master at arms; I. R. Rudy. inner guard; E. T. Hardesty, outer guard.

A two and a-half dollar gold piece, was awarded to Mrs. Emma Altstetter. Refreshments were served just before the meeting adjourned.

Bus Driver Is Back Again.

L. F. Smith, who was transferred from the Mountain Lake Park-Morgantown bus line to the Morgantown-Fairmont route one day last week, has been again transferred to this end of the line. The reason for the change is said to have been entirely satisfactory to all parties concerned.

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop.

It Affects All the Same.

"Woman in Night Clothes Soaked by Fire Water," read a headline in a Cumberland paper. This is probably some of the same stuff that old friend Henry Hudson gave to the Indians of New York State.

* * *

I'm Not Adam, the Head Man.

A one-armed paper hanger with the hives has nothing on Scoop this week, for besides a few basketball games and being "head man in that show", Scoop also has to turn in a little bit of copy to the boss else he will receive the farewell message.

Well, this will fill up a little space and I didn't have to think very hard to say this much.

* * *

Hard on The Eyes.

Scoop has heard of basketball being hard on the wind, liver, back and heart, but he heard another fault of basketball when an eye specialist took a look at Scoop's eye which hod connected with a head much harder than his. "Basketball for you is hard on the eyes," he exclaimed. He would say something like that. But we had the expressed sympathy of one friend anyhow.

* * *

Strange, Indeed.

"Rail, Broken by Intense Heat, Wrecks B. & O. Train," reads a current headline. That doesn't sound so funny until you know that the rail was broken during the last cold wave when the thermometer was standing below zero.

* * *

Anything Can Happen In India.

"Woman Battles Smoke to Death While Flying Over British India," is another current headline in a Cumberland newspaper.

* * *

Why Is An Asset?

Unless the County Commissioners have made a mistake, Scoop will win the prize offered by another newspaper for solving Garrett county's greatest asset. It is about $14,000,000 but in case the judges do not see fit to honor this accurate statement Scoop might also add that Garrett county's other asset is noble women and good men. The award may be sent to Scoop care of The Republican and it will be spent for a worthy purpose.

A WAYSIDE SERMON

The thought of God is a gleam of light piercing the darkest clouds of earth.

WE ARGUE WITH YOU—

It is bad business to argue with a customer. Anyone will tell you that, and the average store follows the policy that "the customer is always right."

There is the merchant,however, who advertises only when business is good. During January and February, when business is not so good, this merchant will tell you that it doesn't pay to advertise because there is no business.

But the wise merchant knows that there is a certain amount of business during the dull months, and that the advertiser will divert this business to his store, to the detriment of the non-adveriser. It is a natural and logical conclusion.

During the Christmas rush all the stores got a certain increase in their business. The advertiser gets the most. But after Christmas is when real salesmanship counts. There is a certain amount of money to be spent and the shrewd buyer watches the advertising columns. Then is the time to advertise heavy.

Big business figures three per cent of gross sales as the proper amount of money to spend on advertising. This allows the local dealer with sales of $20,000 during the year to spend $600 per year for advertising. How much better it would be if he scattered this $600 over the entire twelve months instead of bunching it up at Christmas 'time when he's going to get an increased business anyhow?

The advertiser doesn't pay for advertising. Its the non-advertiser who pays the bill in lost sales. Advertising when you haven't got the business, but advertising only when you have a good business is like going fishing when you have a house full of fish!

A farmer bought an indoor heater from one of Keyser's most progressive business men the other day. The dealer started to explain the advantages of the heater and the farmer said, "You don't need to do that; I've already decided on this heater because I've read all about it in the Mountain Echo."

That's the kind of advertising that pays. * * —Mountain Echo, Keyser, W. Va.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. L. M'GLONE,
Resident County Agent,
Office, Court House.

Many Plantings Need Protection in Winter.

Operating on the theory that the plants of every other section are better than those of his own, nearly every gardener includes in his own ground plantings some specimens which need protection to bring them through the winter unharmed, says W. R. Ballard, landscape specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

In some cases selections of half-hardy types is justified because of the fact that they are quite distinct from the hardy forms and are often of great beauty, it is asserted.

Much of the winter injury to plants of this character is due to alternate freezing and thawing. Plants in regions where low temperatures prevail throughout the winter are often less injured than those in more temperate climates because of the protective blanket of snow. In late winter many plants have completed the rest period and are ready to burst into active growth with the first prolonged warm spell. When such weather is followed by freezing temperature, as is often the case in Maryland, plants stimulated to growth are likely to be injured. Cold, drying winds are also injurious when the ground is frozen deeply so that the roots are unable to supply the exposed twigs with moisture.

Muleh beds of half hardy bulbs with from four to six inches of leaves or cover with evergreen boughs. Delay mulching until freezing weather sets in to avoid inviting field mice which are fond of certain of the bulbs.

Rhododendrons and similar broad-leaved evergreens are best planted on a north slops or where they will be shaded more or less from the winter sun. Muleh heavily with leaves which should be permitted to rot down and thereby maintain the acid condition of the soil so essential to the well being of this group.

Burlap fastened to stakes on the windward side of conifers will afford considerable protection. Figs, crape myrtle and similar types might have corn stalks or straw tied loosely about them.

Monthly roses such as hybrid teas are best protected by mounding the earth up around the bushes. Climbers are sometimes laid down and covered with earth.

Protective coverings should be removed very cautiously in spring, and gradually if possible. Sometimes mulches left on too long cause the plants to make a very tender and spindly growth rendering them more susceptible to injury than if unprotected.

OAKLAND A. A. WINS AND LOSES IN WEEK'S GAMES

Defeats Kingwood 41-19, But Loses to Fairmont 52-25

Oakland A. A. broke even in this week's games, winning from Kingwood on Monday night at Oakland, 41 to 19, but losing to the Fairmont Y. M. C. A. at Fairmont on Tuesday evening, 52-25.

In a preliminary game on Monday night Oakland High School defeated Thomas High School by the score of 20-10.

Michie, Sehrader and Turnley, of the Fairmont Y, put the ball in the basket from all angles of the floor, making seven, eight and five goals respectively. The long shots of the Fairmont team completely baffled Oakland's defense.

To Play Here Tuesday.

A return game will be played at Naylor's Hall, Oakland, this coming Tuesday, January 17, and the local team is going to see to it that they get revenge for the severe drubbing they received. ## TIMID BACHELORS ARE PREPARING FOR DEFENSE

Fortifying Themselves Against Expected Attack of Proposals

To many the year 1928 will be just like any other year except that after the 28th of February they will forget and wrtie March 1 instead of February 29. Nineteen hundred and twenty-eight is not likely to seem any longer than 1927, in spite of its additional day—except to people to whom time drags away.

But bachelors—as some say—will begin immediately to prepare a defense agains the subtle (or straightforward) advances of unattached women. According to tradition Leap Year is a time when a maiden may without breaking rules, say, "Will you be mine?" or which is more to the point, "May I be yours?"

They do say, though, that Leap Year now is just as unnecessary as mistletoe, so the significance of the 366th day may go unnoticed.

It has never been established whether a woman may propose on any one of the 366 days or whether it is more ethical for her to pop the question on February 29. If the open hunting season were limited to that one extra day it would of eourse be a cinch for the sought-after bachelors to escape into their lairs.

The rumors about Leap Year's exceptional privileges have never been actually verified. There are some men who have boasted of receiving proposals, but not many men want to admit that they were too backward to do the proposing themselves, or too slow witted to get away before the eruenal moment.

A Maryland sage, residing at Keedysville, Washington county, predicts that there will be more marriages in 1928 than in the past year—because there is an extra day for marrying. But the Maryland sage refuses to be quoted on the subject of women proposing.

HEALTH BUREAU FLYING DISEASE STORM SIGNALS

Mothers Warned Against Neglecting Children With Colds.

Like the weather man who sends a warning up and down the coast when storms may be expected, Dr. R. H. Riley, Chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the State Department of Health, reminds mothers all over the State that during the winter months, when children are brought together in large groups in school or movies and elsewhere and when they play less frequently in the open air, measles, whooping cough, diphtheria and other diseases that often follow them, particularly bronchitis and pneumonia, are likely to be prevalent. He accordingly urges Maryland mothers to safeguard their babies and the young children, to whom such diseases are especially dangerous, from exposure to them.

"The old idea that children's diseases do not amount to much," Dr. Riley said, "and that it would save time to let the baby stay in the room and play around with Jack and Betty when the older ones come down with the measles or whooping cough or with any of the other catching diseases, so that they may all have it together, and 'have it over' has gone into the discard, since health departments have been keeping careful records of when and where and to whom such diseases occur.

"The records of the Maryland State Department of Health," he continued, "like those of other health departments throughout the world, show that these so-called children's diseases, and in fact, nearly all catching diseases, go especially hard with babies and the youngsters under school age. It is most important, therefore, that babies and young children be protected against these diseases until the period of greatest danger is over.

"A glance over the reports of the Departments will show why this advice is given. The records of measles, whooping cough, diphtheria and pneumonia all tell the same story of the greater danger of these diseases to very young children. For example, over half of the deaths from whooping cought that are recorded each year, occur among babies less than twelve months old and four-fifths among children under three. Measles, too, takes its heaviest toll among children under three, and that is only a part of the damage done by this treacherous disease which often opens the way for a fatal pneumonia.

"When either of these diseases can be warded off until after the children are five, the danger is considerably less. But even though the danger may be less to older children, at no time should children be needlessly exposed to any catching disease."

Oakland High School Notes.

On Monday, January 9, Oakland High basketball team defeated Thomas High by the score of 20-10. The entire team played a good game. Sanders and Stemple played the best for Oakland.

The Oakland team was defeated by the Catholics by a score of 17-18 on last Friday evening. This was a very exciting game.

The girls of the O. H. S. have organized a basketball team under the direction of Miss Jean Hollar. The faculty of O. H. S. also expects to organize a team.

Examinations in the O. H. S. will be held during the week of January 23. It would be wise if the parents would insist upon their boys and girls to carefully study from now on. If they do not pass in the mid-year examinations it is very difficult to make the work up before the end of the school term.

The O. H. S. basketball team and as many others that can will leave Oakland at five o'clock Saturday evening, January 14, for Masontown, W. Va., to play the high school at that place.

W. R. OFFUTT TO DEFEND GARRETT COUNTY WOMAN

At Webster Springs, West Va., Who Is Charged With Murder

Former State's Attorney William R. Offutt, of Oakland, left here yesterday morning for Webster Springs, West Va., where he will defend Mrs. Annie McKenzie, who with Seymour Smith, stand indicted charged with the murder of Mrs. McKenzie's husband, a former Garrett county farmer whose body was found hanging from a laurel bush at their Upper Glen (W. Va.) home during the first week in October. Smith is a youthful railroad worker. The trial will be taken up in the West Virginia court this morning.

Mrs. McKenzie, the mother of nine children, and Smith were held without bail from the time of their arrest and were confined in the Webster county jail.

Smith is reported to be engaged to Miss Ruby McKenzie, eldest daughter of the dead man.

McKenzie's body was found by one of his children on the night of October 1. The authorities believe he was slain the day before. An axe, believed to have been used in the murder, was found nearby. There were four cuts in the dead man's head, any one of which could have produced death, according to the testimony of the physicians who were examined at the direction of the State at the preliminary hearing immediately following the discovery of the crime.

The body of the dead man was discovered hanging by the chin from a laurel bush with both hands tightly clasping a branch. Bloodhounds soon led the investigators into the McKenzie home and to the bed where Smith was sleeping.

No motive has been assigned for the killing by the authorities, altho they claim that there is evidence of a quarrel having taken place between the man and woman.

The McKenzies were married 27 years ago, Mrs. McKenzie then being 17 years old. Both were from near Frostburg and residents on farms near the National Highway in Garrett county. McKenzie was at times both a lumberman and a farmer. For a number of years he conducted a lumberman's camp in the Blackwater region, near Davis, W. Va.

After taking up his residence near Webster Springs, McKenzie was a timber cutter in addition to working on his small farm. He left Garrett county about thirty-five years ago. His six brothers and five sisters are all residents of Garrett county.

WITH the approbation of her parents, Barbara Holden had become engaged to Benjamin Littlefield. That ought to have settled it.

Then Canfield Rogers cast his eye upon Barbara and saw that she was fair. He investigated her father's financial standing and saw that it was fairer still. Then he began to hunt for points against Ben and stumbled across something which afforded him ghoulish glee.

Rogers and Ben had been in the same class at college and among their classmates had been a certain Harry Butterworth who had been appointed later United States consul at Porto Gulfo, a little banana port on the Central American const. Ben and Harry had been not only classmates but friends, belonged to the same college fraternity, etc.

The little republic in which Porto Gulfo was situated was lively all out of proportion to its size, and Harry wrote Ben such graphic accounts of the tropical scenery and of his own weird experiences that Ben, having nothing to do, took ship and went down to visit his old college chum. Having done that he came back and, a year after, fell in love with Barbara Holden.

It was after Rogers had gazed upon Barbara and upon her father's financial record and had become filled with a longing to possess them both that he chanced to meet, in a New York club to which somebody had given him a card, the former United States consul at Porto Gulfo, now returned home and awaiting an appointment, which had been assured him, to a more important post.

"Hullo, Butterworth," said Rogers. "Well, how is the rising diplomat? Got an embassy yet?"

"Why, it's Rogers, isn't it?" replied Harry. "Ever see any of the old boys now? Good old Ben Littlefield comes from your part of the country. Do you see much of him? I haven't seen him since he paid me a visit at Porto Gulfo. For the last year he hasn't written only at rare intervals. When you see him ask him about his wife. If he has ever heard of her since they parted at Gulfo? Ha, ha! That's a good story. I'll tell you how it was. You see—" Just then a telegram was handed to Butterworth. "Great Scott!" he cried as he read it, "I must try and catch the next train for Washington. Ask Ben to tell you the story of his dusky bride—Inez Castellon. Ta, ta!" And he was gone.

Within a few days Rogers rang Barbara's front door bell at an hour when he was assured he would find the lovers together. They received him politely, though not enthusiastically. He was benming, jolly, full of jokes. "Oh by the way," said he at length, "I have just got back from New York. Met Harry Butterworth at the club. He talked a lot about you, Ben. Told me to be sure and ask you if you had heard from your wife, Inez Castellon that was, since you parted from her at Porto Gulfo. Seemed quite anxious about it."

Barbara sat pale, rigid—her eyes wide and anguished. Ben looked confused at first and then said with a laugh: "Oh, it's quite a story."

"Never mind now, old top," replied Rogers. "Some other time. I've delivered my message and must toddle."

As the door closed behind him Ben turned and looked at Barbara. For the first time he realized the seriousness of the situation. "Barbara," said he, "what is the matter? You surely don't believe—"

"I don't know what to believe—what to think," she faltered. And then with "Oh, Ben! Oh, Ben!" she burst into tears and rushed from the room.

Ben tried to tell himself that Barbara was unreasonable. But then was she—very? He must furnish an explanation, that was clear. He went and worked the long-distance telephone, at last getting what he wanted. Then he wrote a note to Barbara saying that he would not see her again until he had a full and satisfactory explanation to offer which, he calculated, would be within two or three days.

On the evening of the day specified Ben called at Barbara's house. With his card was sent up to that young lady the card of Harry Butterworth, late consul at Porto Gulfo. Barbara appeared, still pale.

Butterworth told his story. When Ben was at Porto Gulfo there was a revolution on—as usual. Inez, President Castellon's daughter, was in Gulfo about to embark for Panama and safety. The rebel general tried to catch her and hold her as a hostage. She took refuge in the American consulate. The revolutionary general demanded her—she was a native, not entitled to sanctuary. "Oh, you can't have her," said Butterworth, inspired with a happy thought. "She has just been married to this gentleman here, an American citizen. And the wife takes the nationality of the husband."

"It was a lie out of whole cloth—but it went. Inez was smuggled on board the Panama steamer that night and the next morning Ben took a fruit steamer for New Orleans. The fair Inez subsequently returned," concluded Harry, "and is now—what do you think? The wife of the revolutionary general who tried to kidnap her—and the general is President of the stormy republic!"

MISS WINTERBERG CHOSEN GRANTSVILLE CLUB HEAD

New Board Elected by Community Organization of Old Pike Town Wednesday Afternoon

The Women's Community Club meeting, held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Miss Ethel Broadwater at Grantsville was the largest regular meeting held during the past year. There were twenty members and two visitors present, all interested in continuation of the club work. The meetings continue to be interesting and instructive for home makers.

The meeting was conducted by Miss Dorsey and the election of officers was held, resulting as follows: President, Miss Christina Winterberg; vice-president, Miss Mollie Dorsey; secretary, Miss Ethel Broadwater; treasurer, Mrs. Harold Miller. Chairmen of the following committees were appointed by Miss Winterberg: Nutrition, Miss Mollie Dorsey; clothing, Mrs. John H. Folk; social welfare, Mrs. Joseph F. Fahey; recreation, Mrs. C. A. Bender; publicity, Miss Ethel Broadwater; membership, Mrs. Annie Getty. Miss Elsie Benthein, county demonstrator, was present and gave a splendid talk.

This was the last demonstration in the clothing program for the year. Miss Bentheim will spend the week of January 16th at Maryland University and will then receive the program for this year's club work from the Home Extension Department of the State to begin at the February meeting.

Tea and cakes were served during the social hour and a rising vote of thanks was given to Miss Mollie Dorsey who has so faithfully served as president for two years.

There were two one hundred per cent members in attendance and answering to roll call during the year, they being Miss Dorsey and Mrs. Annie Getty.

The meeting which all enjoyed was closed by a song, "Blest be the tie that binds." The February meeting will be held at the Casselman Hotel.

Thank Offering Service.

The thank offering service and congregational meeting was held at the Reformed church Thursday night. A splendid meeting was in charge of Mrs. Byron Bender, president of the Missionary Society.

Rev. Beck had charge of the congregational meeting, at which C. A. Bender, deacon, and Noah Warnick, elder, were re-elected. The reorganization of the Reformed Sunday school was held on Sunday morning at which Mrs. Fred. Livengood was re-elected superintendent; Miss Fern Folk, assistant superintendent; C. Oliver Bender, secretary, and Byron M. Bender, treasurer.

Friendsville Bridge Club Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Welch entertained the members of the Friendsville bridge club at dinner at the Casselman Hotel on Thursday night. Two tables were in play and the prize was won by Mrs. Earl Guard.

Mrs. Keller Entertains

Mrs. B. F. Keller delightfully entertained at bridge Thursday afternoon. Miss Ella Keller won high prize and Miss Mollie Dorsey the consolation. Refreshments were served.

School Operetta.

The primary grades of the Grantsville public school, under the direction of Miss Ida Fries, will present "The Quest of the Pink Parasol" on January 20 and 21 in the W. O. W. Hall. An additional feature of the entertainment will be the Rhythm Crowd. The proceeds from this entertainment will be used to purchase books for the elementary library.

A Correction.

In reporting the fire loss of Milton W. Kinsinger's barn on his farm near Somerfield, Pa., in last Thursday's Republican, it was stated that the farm tractor and pulverizer were not burned in the fire due to lack of storage space. The facts in the case are that the tractor, a Ford truck and oils were stored in a separate building at a safe distance from the barn. Mr. Kinsinger finds tha this loss will exceed eight thousand dollars instead of six thousand as originally estimated.

Bank Elections.

The boards of both the First State and the First National Banks of Grantsville were reelected by the shareholders of these institutions at meetings held on Tuesday afternoon. In the First National the directors are U. M. Stanton, W. E. Stanton, C. A. Bender, Lewis Hockman and A. C. Stanton, with U. M. Stanton, president; C. A. Bender, vice-president; A. C. Stanton, cashier, and Mrs. Vadne P. Stanton, assistant cashier.

In the First State Bank the directors are C. A. Bender, H. P. Miller, F. W. Bender, C. E. Ellithorp, Lewis Hanft, S. S. Miller and J. A. Beachy, with J. J. Bender, president; H. P. Miller, vice-president; C. O. Keller, cashier, and W. D. Getty, assistant cashier.

Ice Cutting Accident.

Last Saturday morning Walter Collier and a horse belonging to Lyman Folk were suddenly thrown into the icy water of Spring Valley Lake at the Spring Valley farm, five miles west of town, while engaged in cutting ice for storage. The horse was used in drawing a cutter, and in some manner the animal and its driver were suddenly submerged in about fifteen feet of water. Both had to fight for their lives. Mr. Collier was quickly drawn out of his precarious position by fellow workmen, but the horse was not so easily handled. The animal managed to keep its nose above the ice and with ropes placed around its neck and used as a guide it was steered into the channel used to float the cakes of ice to the storage house where it gained a footing and got out.

Sugar Camp Improvements.

Joseph Livengood, the son of Sugar King Elijah Livengoods farm, and now the owner of the property of his father, is making extensive improvements in the sugar making equipment. He is doing everything possible to deserve the name of "Sugar King" in this community. The old sap house has been replaced by a new one containing the very latest evaporating equipment and of very much larger capacity than the old one. Mr. Livengood has two tracts of sugar trees, one on the east side and the other on the west side of Casselman River. The boiling equipment on the east side of the river has been abandoned and a pipe line will convey the sap to the new equipment on the west bank of the stream. Covers are being provided for the sap buckets, thereby shutting out the rain water and dirt, two of the things which lower the quality of the manufactured product.

Church Services.

The regular quarterly meeting of the M. E. church will be held at ten o'clock at Jennings M. E. church next Sunday, January 15.

AMOCO-GAS
will make and break records for You in--- 1928 ---

The year 1927 saw AMOCO-GAS making and breaking records. The Chamberlin trans-Atlantic flight and the Pan American flight—these were on everybody's tongue—and AMOCO-GAS furnished the power. On the speedway Auburn and Studebaker cars made new world's records with AMOCO-GAS. And on the water, too, records were shattered by boats using AMOCO-GAS.

AMOCO-GAS broke other records, too—not as spectacular, perhaps, but even more important to the individual motorist. Records of pick-up, of quick starting, of hill climbing—these are broken every day wherever AMOCO-GAS is sold.

AMOCO-GAS will continue to shatter records in 1928, not only in the air, on the speedway and in the water, but on the highways and byways as well.

CATHOLICS FORGE AHEAD IN BASKETBALL LEAGUE

Win from Local High School Friday Night in Fast Game.

The Catholics were victorious over Oakland High School in the second basketball game of the evening played at Naylor's hall last Friday night, and consequently go into first place in the League standing. The final score was 18-17.

The entire game was filled with close guarding and at no time did either team lead the opponent by more than four points. Scoring for both teams was very evenly divided among the players.

In the opening game of the evening the Presbyterians took a hard game from the Lutherans, 25-20. By virtue of the victory the Presbyterians go into third place. McComas was the high scorer with eight field goals and three fouls to his credit. Kahl played well for the Lutherans.

The next game will be played on next Thursday evening beginning at 7:30 o'clock when Mountain Lake Park will meet the High School and the Catholics will meet the Lutherans. There will be no games on Friday due to the Civic Club play, which is being given in the Maryland Theatre. Admission to Tuesday's games will be 15 and 25 cents.

HOW MARYLAND MEETS ITS STOLEN CAR PROBLEM

Ninety-six Per Cent of All Autos Falling Into the Hands of Thieves Are Recovered.

While a large numbor of automobiles are stolen in Maryland every year, few of them stay stolen. Records show that more than ninety-six per cent of all cars which fall into the hands of thieves are recovered.

In proportion to the number of motor vehicles in the State, thefts are fewer by far than they were seven years ago, but far more striking is the improved percentage of recoveries—a difference of about forty-four per cent.

An illuminating explanation might be made at the outset; the recovered machines are not always in the best of condition when they are returned to their owners—as a matter of faet some of them bear little resemblance to motor cars. This leads to the correct conclusion that few automobiles are stolen for resale in toto.

The young crook, choosing his profession nowadays, apparently seldom enters the automobile theft business with a view to trading in complete assemblies. True, he dabbles in it, but only as it provides him portable goods or serves him in his main line of endeavor. He learned long ago that the element of risk is too great and the chance of profit too small.

To those who can hark back a decade and remember with what qualms they left the family gas buggy at the curb, the study of this situation is extremely interesting, for then there was an even chance that when the mechanical servant did disappear it never would return to the fold.

The greatest deterrent to the stealing of motor cars is the titling act and is acceptance by most of the States in the Union.

Maryland pointed the way to this greatest of all anti-theft expedients. It was back in 1920 that the late Osborne I. Yellott, then general counsel for the Automobile Club of Maryland, drew up the statute and pushed it through with the backing of he club and of State department heads. This made it impossible for a car to be sold in Maryland without its vendor showing a title, the lack of which immediately aroused suspicion.

Quick to sense the advantages of the law, other States fell into line, until now there are only a few which have not copied the act. So a line of protection has been thrown around Maryland. He who sells a stolen car must run a hot gauntlet before he can reach New York, the nearest State having no titling law.

While locks never prevailed against the determined thief in years gone by, the automobile manufacturers today have developed coincidental systems which make circumvention a hazardous and tedious job. These locks cover ignition, transmission and steering.

Not so long ago the favorite sport of the auto thief was picking locks, which, for many years, covered only the ignition. All sorts of clever schemes were devised whereby the locking device could be undone.

It is told that on a certain day in 1916 a man climbed into a big car on one of the streets of Baltimore, fumbled in his pockets for a time and finally accosted a policeman, who was standing nearby.

"Officer," he said, "I have lost my keys. Would you mind giving me a hand for a moment while I file this lock off?"

The burly bluecoat stepped into the breach, handing tools to the man and offering much advice. Finally the job was done and the man, with very hearty thanks to the policeman drove away. Five minutes later another man came out of a doorway, clapped his hand to his head and shouted to the patrolman:

"Officer, somebody has stolen my car!"

But the thieves learned eventually that it was not necessary to waste time and take chances by picking the locks. They found that they could run a wire in a moment from the live terminal of the horn to the distributor and complete the circuit so carefully locked. A long piece of wire with clamps on each end was used for this purpose.

Then a manufacturer came out with a great spike which could be locked around the tire. This spike set up a terrible racket as the car bounced along, besides leaving a clear track which could be followed.

One thief jumped into a car on another street in Baltimore one day, started the motor and began to drive away. He bumped along for a qarter of a block, lost his nerve under the surprising racket and fled, leaving the car in the middle of the street. He was caught by a pursuing crowd.

This device worked splendidly until the thief found he could let some of the air out of the tire, turn the spike around to the inside of the wheel and drive on.

One gang discovered that it could reap a rich harvest by towing cars away from the curb. The gangster rigged up a service truck and set out. Pulling up to a curb where a new car was parked a towline would be flung out and the car pulled away, while the pseudo-owner sat at the steering wheel.

But with the passage of the titling acts automobile thieving became dangerous. It was almost impossible to sell a stolen car in Maryland and subsequently in neighboring States where similar acts were passed. The thieves found it necessary to run their loot across several States before they could find a market. Meanwhile, the alarm, becoming general, encompassed the crook with danger.

So the underworld gradually gave up the idea of pilfering motor cars for resale. Some few crooks keep up the work but most of them are caught. Occasionally one of these men takes a chance and drives away at night to try to make a safe State in short order. Sometimes they succeed.

Another trick which has netted some few cars is that of substituting the title of a wrecked car for that of a new stolen one. This is a "white collar" job in auto thievery.

Here is the procedure:

A car of a certain make is wrecked in an accident. A service job to rebuild it would be to expensive, so it seems that the machine is slated for the junk heap. Some one, however, offers a small price for the wreck and the owner lets it go, with much relief. He transfers his title to the purchaser and forgets the incident.

The wrecked auto finds the junk heap, but the new owner has other plans for the title. He looks about until he finds a car of the same make, year and model, steals it and changes the number on the title by clever manipulation. He offers the stolen car for sale at a bargain, with a title that apparently is legitimate, making quite a nice profit on his deal.

But these constitute a very small percentage of the stolen cars, hence the large number of recoveries.

Another reason why thieves are afraid to take cars nowadays is that individuality is too well marked. Until a few years ago ninety per cent of the automobiles in the United States were either black or of very sombre hue. Conventions were adhered to, with few thoughts of new departure in line or color.

Thus a thief might ride away in a car, perfectly safe in the knowledge that he was not attracting attention.

Nowadays it is different. Clear descriptions can be given of automobiles that makes them recognizable long before the numbers on the license plates can be deciphered.

While there are any number of light blue cars, a description such as this is clear:

There are only a certain number of such cars sold by Blank Six dealers, so the police first may look for a machine bearing the general description. The blue will turn up at a glance and the detail will be filled in a moment later. So many combinations of colors also offer a better chance of recognition by police.

Still, a large number of cars are stolen. In proportion they are not nearly as numerous as in 1920, but they are numerous when conditions are considered. There are three and a-half times as many cars now in Maryland as there were seven years ago. In 1920, 606 cars were stolen and 413, or about 68 per cent recovered. Last year 2,447 cars were stolen and 2,356, or about 96 per cent, recovered.

But, if the autojack cannot sell the car, he will sell as much of it as possible, piecemeal. One does not need a title to dispose of a tire, a set of tools, a meter or any other form of automobile equipment. Consequently, a big haul is reaped by crooks who steal a car, run it into a clump of woods and strip it of everything of any value. The remains of the car are found and it is registered at police headquarters as "recovered."

Stolen motor cars also serve bootleggers and rum runners well, particularly where an important deal is on. Now, under the law, a car taken in the liquor traffic may be confiscated. A shrewd "bootie" does not intend to take chances with his own car. He steals a car and if he has to abandon it in a chase he at least does not lose his automobile. If he completed the deal then the car is left somewhere on a road or street.

Few bandit operations are conducted without the aid of a stolen car. By lifting a powerful car from a curb, instead of using a member's machine, the gang runs one less chance of recognition and a car is absolutely necessary for the purpose of a quick getaway, since loot means hampered movements on foot.

The "joy-rider" also is marked down as one of the chief problems in stolen car operations, although he, like the bootlegger and the bandit, leaves the car to be found by the police.

Ever so often the skeleton of a car is found by a roadside, consumed by fire. Reported stolen, these cars are marked "recovered" and the owner collects his incurance.

Boiled down, the problem is not one of recovering stolen cars, but of recovering them with all of their equipment and in good condition.

Of course, the titling acts have done more than any other thing to stop the theft of automobiles and they will do even more when every State in the Union has passed such an act, but they are not enough to baffle the bootlegger, the bandit and the joy-rider.

The police have developed sharp eyes and they watch the traffic stream closely, but every car cannot be stopped and its driver queried. When automoblie manufacturers can devise means of making machines theft-proof then they will have stopped the stealing of automobiles. That day is not yet in sight.

MUSICAL COMEDY PLEASES AUDIENCES AT MARYLAND

"See You Later" Presented Last Thursday and Friday Evenings Under Civic Club Auspices

A clever comedy, made up of many laughs, thrills, songs and steps one can't forget, was the production of the musical comedy "See You Later," presented Thursday and Friday evenings of last week in the Maryland Theatre under the auspices of the Oakland Civic Club.

Composed of a competent cast of about fifty local people, the play attracted large crowds both evenings, and although the participants had just one week in which to learn their parts, with the assistance of Miss Lucile Mock, of the Triangle Producing Company, who also directed the play, there was very little hesitancy in the presentation of the plot and numerous musical selections.

The comedy was in three acts and opened in the office of the National Contracting Company where the three partners, Donald McKay(Geo. Hanst), Sollie Goldstein (James Dodge), and Percy Vere (Kenneth Stahl) are gathered talking over business, which is indeed in bad straits. The plan of a little frame-up upon the person of Mr. Milrox (Edward Kahl), a New York millionaire, in order to help their business. Their plot gets them in wrong during the final acts and finally establishes the real identity of Sally Forth (Lavona Blamble), and Mary Milrox (Isabel West). The remainder of the cast included Helen Hinebaugh, Robert Stemple, Thomas Gonder and Roland Ready.

Throughout the second and third acts laid at McKay's summer home in the mountains, much comedy is injected into the play by Spottsem, Jeff and Speedy. The curtain falls when the various characters get the women of their heart and the lost lucky piece is returned to the owner.

Choruses Are Pretty.

The choruses, both of the little girls and the older and more experienced boys and girls, were very pretty and effective. All taking part in these were beautifully costumed. Mrs. Jas. P. Treacy played all the numbers on the piano in which the choruses and members of the cast sung, the Oakland Orchestra, under the direction of R. R. Gilbert, played between the acts. The music was excellent.

The mixed chorus was composed of Misses Margaret Fraley, Cecelia Lawton, Irene Smouse, Adeline Sincell; Messrs. Robert Hoffman, Wiley Welling, Russell Brown and Reeves Blandford.

Flapper chorus, Misses Evelyn Bosley, Mary Louise Helbig, Vivian Clary, Helen Leighton, Dorothy Stevenson, Betty Gonder, Byrldine Fulk and Margaret Canty.

Stenographers' chorus, Misses Arbutus Hershman, Geneva Winters, Betty Broadwater, Ardith Hinebaugh, Alice Butt, Emma Nair, Alice Walter, Marian Brock, Mary Linn McIntire, Helen Giessman.

Broom chorus, Little Misses Mabel Hinebaugh, Wilma Morris, Pauline Wolf, Carrie Hershman, Lorita Warnick, Virginia Mason, Nettie Wolf, Loretta Frantz, Gertrude Casteel, Regina Compton, Alice Whorton, Elsie Shrout, Ruth Shrout.

Between acts Mr. Reeves Blandford, who is well known locally as a singer of more than ordinary ability, rendered selections, which were well received and appreciated by the audiences both evenings of the entertainment.

Mrs. W. W. Grant, of the Civic Club, in a most entertaining manner, explained the work which is being done by the organization in connection with the crippled children of the county and what will further be done with the proceeds of the entertainment, and also further thanked those who had in any way contributed to the success of the undertaking.

The sum of $50 will be cleared from the play, it is estimated.

Aberdeen-Angus Cattle Sold.

Mr. John Kirtz, of Johnstown, Pa., who also owns the Jonas Glotfelty farm located at McHenry, purchased the herd of Aberdeen-Angus cattle comprising sixteen head, from V. O. Bowman at McHenry on Saturday. Mr. Kirtz expects to keep this herd on his farm. The cattle are said to be the only purebred Angus in that locality. The bull of the herd weighs 1700 pounds, is four years old and exceptionally gentle, according to the former owner.

DEGREE OF ESQUIRE TO BE CONFERRED FRIDAY NIGHT

Pythians To Give Second Seance To Class of Candidates.

The rank of Esquire will be bestowed on a class of candidates in the Knights of Pythias lodge on Friday evening, according to officials of the organization. This will be the second class to receive this degree since the beginning of December, and a large attendance of th emembership is requested by the regular attendants at the sessions of the lodge.

The candidates received the rank of Page last Friday evening. The weekly award, this week a box of stationery donated by the Mountain Democrat, was awarded to C. W. Wotring, of Crellin.

The recently installed officers have taken up their work exceptionally well and are serving with the ability of veterans, according to members of the organization,

Every member of the local lodge is particularly urged to make a specail effort to attend the weekly meetings.

EXPECT PROSPEROUS YEAR FOR LOCAL SCOUT TROOP

Scoutmaster Lists Accomplishments of Past and Gives Forecast For Coming Season.

The 1928 registration cards and the new Troop charter have just been received by the local Scoutmaster. Thirty-two regular Scouts and three associates, making a total of thirty-five, have been registered for the current year. Several Scouts have dropped out during the past year, but their places have been filled by new and more ambitious boys, making the total number of members about the same as at the beginning of last year. In some cases maintenance of troop membership was impossible for very good reasons. The Scout officials were obliged to send in a list of nine names of those who had dropped out for insufficient reasons. In some cases the cause listed was "indolence" and in others, "lack of parental co-operation."

The troop officials are very much pleased to add the name of Rev. Linaweaver, who is now a duly registered assistant scoutmaster, to the list. He is well known and well liked by the people of this community as well as by the scouts. He has been a scout himself and is well acquainted with scout work and will prove a valuable asset to the troop.

The troop spent two weeks in the new permanent camp on the shores of Deep Creek Lake, so generously provided for them by the citizens of this community. At the camp a great amount of scout work was accomplished.

This troop has just completed its third year of existence. During that time about 60 names have appeared on the troop record. This includes the 35 now enrolled. Of the 15 charter members, 10 are still enrolled. Thirty boys have been invested with first class rank.

December 26, 1927, was the date of the last session of the Court of Honor. This was the twenty-seventh consecutive monthly meeting of that body. In the past two years they have issued a total of 503 merit badges to members of this troop and 36 to members of other troops, the latter being summer residents in this community. One visitor and eight members of the troop have been given Eagle Scout rank. Four scouts now lack only two or three badges to qualify for that rank. Seven scouts (all charter members) have more than thirty merit badges each.

To the boys who have stood by the troop and tried so hard to make something good of it and of themselves, the officials extend their hearty congratulations. They feel that the time and effort extended has been well spent and that to a great extent success has already been achieved.

Presents were exchanged by members of the Oakland Rotary Club at the weekly meeting at the William-James Hotel on last Friday evening. The presents represented the classification of the various members and were awarded by number. Some were quite amusing hut all suggestive of the classification of the members presenting them. The Republican drew a bottle of dandruff cure which is of no more use to us personally than the crying doll drawn by Paul Naylor.

GARRETT HAS GREATEST TEACHER IMPROVEMENT

Percentage of Trained Instructors Has Been Raised From 7 to Eighty-one Since 1921

Garrett county, since 1921, has the record of having shown the greatest improvement in the percentage of trained teachers, according to statistics compiled by the State Department of Education. In 1921 the county had only seven per cent, while now it has eighty-one per cent. Out of 169 teachers, 136 of them have first-grade certificates.

An increase in 1927 over 1926 of 6.9 per cent in white elementary school teachers in the State holding first grade certificates, which are given on graduation from normal schools or equivalent training, is shown also by these statistics.

There are now 2,597 such teachers employed in the twenty-three counties of the State, compared with 1,228 holding certificates in 1921.

Queen Anne's is the only county in the State which has every elementary teacher on its staff holding a regular first grade certificate. Baltimore county, however, with six times as many teachers in the elementary schools as Queen Anne's, is a close second with all except one having the requisite training.

Looks For 100 Per Cent Soon.

Of the 3037 white elementary teachers employed this scholastic year, 85.5 per cent have first grade certificates, while 78.6 per cent of the teachers during the last school year held such certificates. According to Albert S. Cook, State Superintendent of Education, the increase will grow steadily each year until the teachers throughout the State will be one hundred per cent first graders, in accordance with the requirements.

Higher Pay For Teachers

"Teachers of better training command higher salaries and the financially poorer counties have been able to secure this larger number of trained teachers without increasing their county tax rates abnormally, because of the aid from the State Equalization Fund," Mr. Cook said. "Many factors have brought about this desirable improvement. The county high schools have been sending one-fifth of their girl graduates to the normal schools, The normal schools have been graduating larger classes of students, who have returned to fill vacancies in their own counties and nearly half have taken positions in the one and two-teacher rural schools. A bonus of $100 is paid to normal school graduates who are in charge of one and two-teacher schools. The State Equalization Fund makes it possible for the counties to employ normal school graduates, if available, in every vacancy which occurs.

"By bringing trained teachers to an increasing number of schools, the opportunity for a good elementary education is being given to an increasing number of pupils in Maryland each year."

Large Capacity Condenser Now In Use at Local Creamery.

A modern condenser, double the capacity of the one formerly in use, has been installed by the Oakland Creamery Company and is now being used, according to George D. Sprague, local manager. This condenser is capable of handling approximately a thousand gallons of milk each day, and is of sufficient size to take care of a growing industry for several years to come,

In addition to the installation of the condenser, a new office building has been added to the already four times enlarged plant. This addition was constructed adjacent to the old office, which will now be utilized for other purposes,

Gracie attended him at the Cumberland hospital.

MAN ON PAROLE, NABBED IN BURGLARIZING STORE

Theodore Stephens Arrested On Saturday Morning While Robbing Miller's Meat Market

Theodore Roosevelt Stephens, arrested Saturday morning about three o'clock when he was caught burglarizing Miller's Meat Market, will be taken to the Maryland House of Correction some time during the present week where he will serve a three-year term imposed at a recent term of the Circuit Court but paroled during his term of good behavior. Stephen's departure from the straight path and his promise to the Court that he would lead an exemplary life having been violated, he will have to do his bit.

Christmas Eve a year ago the young man, son of respectable parents, was arrested for selling liquor unlawfully. He was tried at the following term of Court, found guilty, fined and paroled for a period of three years or during the time of his good behavior, Saturday morning at three o'clock Policeman Sam Aronhalt and William Glotfelty, owner of the Quality Lunch Room, located diagonally across the street from Miller's Meat Market, saw him inside the store building and he was placed under arrest.

Upon placing Stephens under arrest he was searched and it was found that upon his person was concealed a .32-calibre revolver and some merchandise. These articles, upon further investigation, were found to have been taken from the store of Louis Gortner on Second street. The Gortner building had been entered from the cellar and from it goods valued at more than $100 had been carried out and stored in an abandoned building in the rear of the Gortner building, all of which were recovered and returned to the owner.

Following the burglarizing of the Gortner store it is said that Stephens entered the Frantz Hotel where he broke the cash register open with a pinch bar and then visited the taxicab office of Wm. Shaffer where a pane of glass was broken out of the door, but before he could enter he was frightened away. He obtained nothing in the hotel office.

Entrance to the Miller store was effected by breaking the glass from a door in the rear and with this obstruction removed the lock was opened by reaching through the hole thus made and turning a knob.

Stephens was given a preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace E. I. West on Saturday morning. He entered a plea of not guilty. He alleges there were others with him when he was caught, but no evidence of the presence of a second party was discovered by the officer making the arrest.

AGED MAN, DEAF, STRUCK AND KILLED BY FREIGHT

Jesse Diehl, Mountain Lake Park, Lost His Life Thursday.

Funeral services for Jesse Diehl, 78, of Mountain Lake Park, who was killed almost instantly late last Thursday afternoon when he was struck by a locomotive drawing an east-bound freight train on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad near the site of the signal tower which was burned on the first instant and where a temporary telegraph office was being installed by a group of workmen, were held from the residence of his son at Keyser, W. Va., on Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock. Rev. W. A. Wilt officiated, with interment in Queen's Point cemetery.

The aged man, whose hearing was impaired, walked in front of the approaching train as he watched the workmen engaged at the railway crossing and apparently did not hear it as it bore down upon him.

Drs. N. I. Broadwater and H. W. McComas pronounced him dead upon being summoned to examine him,death being caused from a fracture of his skull and internal injuries. The body was brought to Oakland and prepared for burial at the Bolden undertaking rooms and was then shipped to Keyser, the home of his son, Parley Diehl, who is an employe of the Baltimore and Ohio Railway Company.

The dead man is survived by his wife, who was sent to the State Hospital for the Insane at Sykesville, last fall; by four daughters, Mrs. H. P. Nesbitt, of Cumberland; Mrs. W. T. Conway, of West Newton, Pa.; Mrs. H. W. Shahan, of Rowlesburg, W. Va., and Mrs. Daniel Jones, of Houston, Texas, and by two sons, Messrs. Parley and John Diehl, both of Keyser.

STANLEY COAL CO. BUYS THE PRESTON RAILROAD

Purchase Consummated Yesterday In Philadelphia by Chas. W. Ream, President Coal Co.

Upon his return this morning from Philadelphia, Mr. Charles W. Ream, President of the Stanley Coal Company, operating mines near Crellin, announced that the Preston Railroad, with a Baltimore and Ohio connection at Hutton, had been purchased by his company, the new owners taking over the property today.

The Preston railroad was originally built as a lumber carrying road and was constructed by the Preston Lumber Company with branches running south to tap the large timber holdings of the lumber company in Preston and Tucker counties, West Va. After the timber had all been cut out these branches were practically abandoned but the road from the mines of the Stanley company as well as those located at Freeport, has been kept busy all the time transporting coal to the connecting point with the Baltimore and Ohio.

The purchase by the coal company includes the right-of-way and the equipment consisting of locomotives and other rolling stock, buildings, repair shops, etc.

Extensive repairs to the road are contemplated by the new owners who will place it in the best possible condition to meet the needs of the increasing business incident to the coal mining industry in the fields through which it operates.

DEER PARK WOMAN KILLED WHEN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Mrs. Philip Hess, Daughter of Geo. Marley, Sr., Met Instant Death Near Cumberland.

Mrs. Anna Virginia Hess, 50 years old, daughter of George Marley, Sr., of Deer Park, and wife of Philip Hess, formerly of the same town, the mother of eight children, was instantly killed last night about 7:00 o'clock when an automobile Cumberland bound, crashed into her and Mrs .Elizabeth Miller as they were standing on the National Highway near Allegany Grove, four miles west of Cumberland.

Mrs. Hess was hurled several feet and was found to be dead when passing motorists reached her lying in the ditch along the highway. Mrs. Miller was not seriously injured.

Herman Steppe, 26 years old, of Cumberland, driver of the car which caused the death of Mrs. Hess, was arrested at nine o'clock last night at his home in Cumberland whence he had fled following the accident. An inquest over the remains of Mrs. Hess will be held tonight.

The Steppe car, thrown into the roadside ditch by the impact, was abandoned by the driver, who rode to Narrows Park, on the outskirts of the city, on a coal truck and then went on into the town on a street car.

Steppe was attempting to pass a bus when the accident occurred. He made no effort to report the accident, police said, and he fled from the spot without offering aid to the victims. Later he told the police that he "lost his head" and did not know just what his actions were.

Will Be Buried at Deer Park.

Mrs. Hess was the wife of Philip Hess, a plasterer, and had resided in Cumberland for the past ten years following the removal of the family from their former home to the city. She was a sister of George Marley, Jr., Mrs. Daniel Hinebaugh and Mrs. Robert Thrasher, all of Deer Park. Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed, the interment, however, will occur at Deer Park.

Besides her husband she is survived by eight children: Mrs. Esther Campbell, of Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Genevieve Bartley, Cumberland; Ernest, Marie, Willa, Leona, Mamie and Roland, of LaVale, Cumberland, where the family home is located.

ZIHLMAN BEING PUSHED FOR RACE FOR SENATE

Drive Said to be Gaining Momentum in Western Maryland

(Baltimore American)

A formidable drive to enter Congressman Frederick N. Zihlman as the Republican opponent of Senator William Cabell Bruce in the Senatorial race this fall is gaining momentum in Western Maryland.

He is said to be one of the best Republican vote getters in the State.

Zihlman is a friend of W. Bladen Lowndes leader of the anti-Wellerites, and through him would probably have the support of William P. Jackson, Republican National Committeeman and Eastern Shore leader.

If the Weller and Lowndes groups agreed to his nomination, it is believed the Broening-Merchant forces would fall in line. The Baltimore organization has been reported considering the availability of John W. Garrett.

In the Sixth district Zihlman is practically unbeatable. He has weathered successfully every campaign for re-election since 1914.

St. Peter's Five Noses Out St. Thomas' Quintet.

St. Peter's five nosed out the St. Thomas five at Thomas, West Va., last night in a contest which required an extra five minute period to decide the winner. The final score was 24-20. Wolf, E. Maroney, J. Maroney and J. Rice played for Oakland, with DeVore, O'Day Yarr, Deer and Parks playing for Thomas. Field goals—Maloney, 4; Wolf, 5; Maroney, 3; O'Day, 3; Yarr, 4; Deer, 1; Parks, 1.

Lesson for January 22

JESUS AND THE LAW

LESSON TEXT—Mark 2:18-3:6.
GOLDEN TEXT—Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets. I am not come to destroy but to fulfill.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Doing Good on the Lord's Day.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How to Use the Lord's Day.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Obeyed the Law.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Declares the Higher Law.

I. Jesus and Fasting (vv. 18-22).

1. The questions asked (v. 18).

The scribes and pharisees seeing Jesus eating with the publicans and sinners, raised the question as to why He did so. When Jesus heard their question He declared, "They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick." Another question was then asked as to why Christ's disciples did not fast when the disciples of John and of the pharisees did fast? John the Baptist was now in prison, therefore his disciples were mourning for him.

2. Christ's answer (vv. 19, 20).

In explanation He raised the question, "Can the children of the bridechamber fast while the bridegroom is with them?" He then declared that as long as they have the bridegroom with them they cannot fast. The time will come, however, when they would fast. He is now away. Fasting, therefore, is appropriate.

3. New wine in old bottles (vv. 21, 22).

The bottles mentioned here were made of skins of animals. In the fermentation of the wine there was expansion which stretched the skin. To put new wine in the bottle after it was stretched would cause it to be rent asunder when fermentation took place. The same thing in principle would be realized if new cloth were used on old garments. The teaching designed was to show the foolishness of imposing old customs on the new age.

II. The Disciples Plucking Ears of Corn on the Sabbath (Mark 2:23-28).

1. The charge made against the disciples (vv. 23, 24).

Perhaps they were on their way to the synagogue to worship when they plucked the ears of corn. For this act the pharisees accused them of lawlessness.

2. Jesus defends them against the charge (vv. 27-28).

(1) He cites a precedent (vv. 25, 26).

He showed them that the very law which they charged the disciples with breaking recorded the fact that David the great king of Israel had gone into the house of God and eaten the bread which should be eaten only by the priests.

(2) He shows the nature of a Sabbath law (v. 27).

The Sabbath was made for man, therefore its right use is to be determined by the good of man. The laws of honesty, truth, purity and love differ from the law of the Sabbath and there is no circumstance or condition under which they may be departed from.

(3) Jesus is the Lord of the Sabbath (v. 28).

It was He who instituted it when creation was finished, therefore He had a right to use it as it pleased Him for man's good.

III. Jesus Healing a Man's Withered Hand on the Sabbath (3:1-6).

1. The place—the synagogue (v. 1).

Jesus' example shows what He did on the Sabbath. He went to the place of worship. The presence of the man with a withered hand gave Jesus an opportunity to administer a rebuke to the pharisees.

2. The pharisees watching (v. 2.)

They knew that Jesus would be interested in this helpless man. They surmised that some work would have to be performed to heal him.

3. The man made an example (v. 3).

Jesus wanted the case to be open to all, so He commanded the man to stand forth where all could see him.

4. The question asked (v. 4).

"Is it lawful to do good on the Sabbath day, or to do evil, to save life, or to kill?" He made the issue clear; He plainly showed them that to fail to do good, to show works of mercy, to save life, is to be guilty of wrongdoing, even of murder.

5. The man healed (v. 5).

Christ healed him by speaking the Word, so they could not accuse Him.

6. The result (vv. 4, 6).

The pharisees were silenced. There was no ground upon which to accuse Him. But since their hearts were bent upon His destruction they sought how they might put Him to death.

Commenting on the value of courtesy in business, L. W. Horning, chief clerk to the superintendent of the American Railway Express Company at Indianapolis, writing in the Express Messenger recently, gives a few facts on the subject in an interesting way.

"Yesterday afternoon," he writes, "A patron telephoned to complain because one of our agents assessed storage charges against his express shipment.

"True, there was no street address on the shipment; his name was not in the city directory or the telephone book. But didn't everybody know that John Jones was the new president of the Blank Ice Co.! Hadn't our own hand clerk read in the newspapers that he had just moved here from Detroit?

"That fellow was very discourteous—he refused to reason and I am sorry to say he hung up the receiver still mad, after doing everything hut give me a 'cussing'.

"That was near the end of a nerve-racking dny—everything it seems, went wrong yesterday, heginning early in the morning when I cut my chin while shaving. Before leaving the office, however, I had an important long distance call to make. The time was short, and the business urgent—I had to get that call through quickly.

"It had been a hard day, too, no doubt, for the telephone operator at the company switchboard, hut as I heard her soft, pleasant voice over the wire, I was impressed with the courtesy and the cheerfulness of this unseen helper. And I thought of the telephone operators, those gracious workers on duty hours after most of us consider ourselves entitled to a well-earned rest; of their unfailing tact and politeness.

"And I pondered over the potentialities of that power given to every employe of the company who answers the telephone—not tho gift of song, perhaps; not the genius of the orator or the glory of the singer; just the simple, kindly, heart-warming influence of the human voice—that 'organ of the soul'—that mirror of an inner character that bridges the gap of unseen miles and sends its message of helpfulness and courteous efficiency to unknown listeners—the voice in the telephone.

"Then I glanced at my phone and the little card hnnging on the mouthpiece which says: 'Be courteous—It Pays'. It seemed to mean a great deal more to me in that moment of reflection. I wonder if we employes all give heed to those little suggestions—I wonder if we realize that to the fellow at the other end of the telephone wire we are the American Railway Express Compnny? What we say over the phone in business hours seldom, if ever, acts for or against us personally, hut it means a lot to the company.

"If we are courteous and pleasant in our telephone conversations, if our voice has a smile in it, we make friends for the company; otherwise, enemies. Who wants enemies, anyway? But who doesn't want friends? It is within our power to make either one."

TELEPHONE TROUBLES REDUCED BY SCIENCE

Wire Chief Now Measures Line Electrically And Gives Repairman Location

The telephone repairman making his morning test.

"Never trouble trouble till trouble troubles you" is an old adage that telephone repairmen cannot take literally, for other people's troubles make it necessary for them to look for trouble.

When a telephone line is reported in trouble, it is up to the wire chief and repairmen to restore the service as promptly as possible. Trouble on telephone lines is brought about hy numerous causes. Wind, rain nnd electric storms and snow and sleet, are among the principal agencies resulting in hreaks in telephone lines and cahle.

In the early days of the telephone industry, when a line was reported in trouble, the repairmen started on a still hunt to locate the fault. In many eases this caused a great deal of lost time owing to the slow modes of traveling and hecause the facilities for ascertaining the nature of the trouble were limited. If the trouhle was not easily apparent to the eye and the fault was overlooked hy the repairman on the first trip, it was sometimes necessary to walk over the line several times. This not only worked a hardship on the repairman, but also kept the suhscriber from the use of his telephone.

Today, this condition has heen remedied hy scientific development and research, and the wire chief, a specialist in telephone trouble, measures the line electrically with apparatus located in the central office. With this equipment he is able to tell the repairmen whether the telephone is in trouhle in the central office, in the cahle, along the line of open wire, or in the telephone on the premises of the suhscriber. With this information in hand the repairman travels to the approximate location given by the wire ehief and in the greater number of cases, finds the trouble and restores the telephone to service in a short period of time.

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop.

THIS IS A COLUMN COMPOSED OF JOKES, IDEAS, LUDICROUS MISTAKES OF ANY PAPER, AND OTHER THINGS—Composed this week mostly of "other things," jokes and ludicrous mistakes all combined.

* * *

It is with tears in the eyes that Scoop discovers that readers of this column have been taking seriously all that appears herein.

* * *

Stranger still is the fact that, although they have seen the mistakes of other papers commented upon, they have never seen the comments made about errors in The Republican which seemed "conical." Any amusing mistake in this paper has been printed as readily as other paper's errors. It was all for amusement--yet some did not think so, witness the editor of the Democrat.

* * *

As to "Other Things"

Now as to other things. It seems all very well to question the veracity of statements appearing in The Republican, (just the same thing as calling the writer of the statements a teller of falsehoods), and then say it is the desire of the editor of the Democrat to cooperate.

As his front page article was entirely unethical and out of place, being under the disguise of a news article, so an answer to it would be entirely out of place, except in this column of jokes, ideas, etc.

Front page articles of belittling comment of one's contemporary passed out of good usage shortly after the time of Horace Greely many years ago. Therefore, in bad taste.

As the article in question was full of doubts, Scoop in turn doubts very strongly the assertion that the Democrat has averaged four new subscribers each week since the close of their campaign.

The Republican two weeks ago published a list of fourteen names which had been added to the subscription list within that week. The editor of the Democrat, besides questioning this statement said that if that number were added during each week for the next two years, the present circulation of the Democrat would be reached. Then, according to his own figures, his subscription list contains 1456 names, several hundred below the circulation of The Republican. Scoop really did believe that they had more than that.

* * *

And now that Scoop has all that off his chest, he can say "Let the truth be known," and he'll bet that there won't be a difference of 150 papers in the two subscription lists----but anyway, who cares about that?

* * *

As a parting suggestion, Scoop might repeat that this column is liable to contain almost anything, and that it is the individual thoughts of the writer and of the writer alone. Now we'll all sing that glorious little ditty suggested last week, "Let's cooperate."

* * *

Your Home Town Paper.

No, the editor didn't tell me to write this! He doesn't know anything about it until it is stuck on his copy hook. But I'll bet a good, homemade apple pie, made according to my mother's best recipe against a week-old bakery doughnut that he prints it. I don't get anything extra for writing it, either. I'm doing it beause I really BELIEVE in the home town papers, as contrasted with the city sheet from out of town that is so anxious for a big irculation that it is trying to crowd the local sheets off the family easy-chair. How much space does that city paper give your annual flower show that is the big thing of the year to your flower lovers who have potted plants for months just for this occasion? Possibly four or five lines. The home paper gives it a column on the first page, with all the prize winners, and the best exhibits described in detail, and an appreciative word for everybody who has worked hard to make it a success. Who knows, when they read the outside paper what deeds of valor the local boys performed in the volunteer fire department while extinguishing the bog grass fire north of town; or of the entertainments for visiting friends from over the state line or what the local wise men think of certain educational reforms; or who have been chosen to teach the township schools? These things are important to you and your neighbors—and you can't read them anywhere but in the home paper. Nor can you find your home merchant's bargains, your home theatre's programs, your local club announcements, or the hundreds of bits of "human interest" news contained in the country correspondence and classified advertising columns. Blessed be the home paper, say I.—Alice Lindsey Webb, in Estes Park (Colo.) Trail.

Mr. E. W. Kelso, Sojourning in Las Cruces, New Mexico, Writes of the Country He is Visiting and Gives Some Interesting Facts—His Son is Three-Times Mayor of the Town.

To the Editor of The Republican.

I have been browsing around and for a change I will act in the capacity of a pencil shover for a short time, and hope that I may be able to present some information that may be of interest to some of the readers of The Republican.

I arrived in El Paso, Texas, December 23 and was met here by my son and his wife with a car and motored forty miles over a good concrete road to Las Cruces, New Mexico. The population of this town is 7,000.

The city is thoroughly modern in every respect, with paved streets, adequate water supply, sewerage and lighting systems, hotels, restaurants, tourists' camp grounds and other civic improvements and necessities.

It is the county seat of Dona Ana county. Las Cruces is situated on the Santa Fe Railway. Here are located huge cotton compresses which press the original cotton bale to one-half its original size in order to save space in cars for shipping purposes and also the cost of shipping. In the town are cotton gins and cotton seed oil plants. An oil refinery and other things in connection with the cotton-growing industry is also in operation here, thus making a good pay-roll for labor.

Las Cruces has department stores as well as stores of all other kinds handling the different lines of merchandise to satisfy the human needs and demands.

The town is well supplied with public school buildings, all being large brick structures and located in the center of a city block, the unoccupied portion of the ground being used as a campus. I am told there are seven of these buildings in all with one high school building costing $150,000. Loreta Academy is an excellent boarding school for girls, it being under the direction of the Sisters of Lereta. New Mexico Agricultural College, at Messilla Park, is three miles south of Las Cruces.

I am told there are ten churches in Las Cruces, all of different denominations. Among them is a Spanish M. E. church where I attended service. I am not a Spanish scholar, nevertheless I was an interested listener.

When I entered the church the Sunday school was in session and the minister met me in the aisle. He shook hands and showed me to a seat. I noted that he acted in the capacity of Sunday school superintendent, organist and leader in the singing. He is a man of small stature, light brown complexion, black hair and neatly dressed. Prior to the preaching service a testimonial meeting was held. All present spoke without hesitation and were apparently sincere in their faith.

I suppose the preacher delivered a splendid sermon if I may judge from his gestures and the earnestness with which he spoke. The singing was beautiful but somehow I could not get the rhythm of the notes.

Old Mesilla, three miles from Las Cruces, is the spot where the Gadsden purchase was consummated. It was also at one time the citadel of the Southewest Territory when that was a vast empire of legend and mystery.

In this town, Stephen G. Elkins, of West Virginia, practiced law in his early life and it is said he was a great friend of the common people. After he became prominent as a national figure he made occasional visits to this locality and when his coming was announced the people turned out in great numbers to do him homage.

Albert Fall, former Secretary of the Interior, also practiced law in his early career in Las Cruces and was rated as a shrewd lawyer and was also an athlete. On one occasion, it is said, that when he was in his office and unarmed, a man came in with a pistol in his hand, threatening to kill him. Fall sprang at the man and said, "I will kill you," and it so unnerved his assailant that he failed to use his weapon. Fall disarmed him and threw him from the office and his method was not unmixed with pugilistic maneuvers.

Fall's parents resided in the next house to that occupied by my son. His mother died here and the father moved elsewhere. I am told that he also is dead. About 25 miles north of Alamargordo, New Mexico, I passed through a small town in New Mexico called Three Rivers. In the immediate vicinity is located Mr. Fall's much discussed cattle ranch.

On account of the lightness of air, distance in this locality is very deceptive. Organ Mountains, 16 miles distant from Las Cruces seem to be only two miles away. With some friends we motored to the mountains and stopped in the gap where the altitude is 6,700 feet and on each side the mountains take on an added elevation, reaching 9,000 feet. Weatherbeaten for centuries and erosion for as many centuries have bared the mountain of every living thing, leaving its sides and top in many fanciful shapes.

Prior to the time when the Elephant Butte Dam was built, farming in the Rio Grande Valley was a very uncertain proposition. The farmers had ditches made, but at times the snow in the mountains melting so rapidly with the warm June rains on the far-away source of the Rio Grande River, had the effect of raising the river and with the overflow on the lower lands deposited the sediment thus making the river bed higher than the adjacent farm lands, thus changing not only the course of the stream but in many cases wiping out vast farms which became the stream's bed.

Many of these old river beds may yet be seen in different parts of the valley. And when the overflow had drained away there was no water left to irrigate the crops.

But all this has changed since the dam was built and farmers can now irrigate when they need to and be sure of a crop so far as moisture is concerned. The dam is 306 feet high, 1585 feet long and contains more than 600,000 cubic yards of concrete. The cost of the dam alone was $5,000,000.

The reservoir has a capacity of 2,600,000 acre feet or sufficient water to irrigate for three years even if there should be no fall of rain or snow in that time. The lake is 44 miles in length. Some places it is three miles wide and is held in check by projecting bluffs into the river valley.

There are several diversion dams which are used to regulate the flow of water into the main channel.

What is termed acre feet is one foot of water over an acre and measured by the flow through a small gate per minute to cover an acre one foot deep. The land is irrigated three times during the growing season at an average cost of $2.18 per acre for the three irrigations.

Cotton is the big money crop and productions runs around 85,000 bales annually in the valley, of an average of one bale per acre. Corn, wheat, barley ,oats, rye, are also grown. Alfalfa is the main forage crop, with four to five cuttings each season.

Dairying in the valley is very profitable and trucks deliver milk to El Paso at a very remunerative price.

Practically all kinds of vegetables and many different fruits are grown in the valley. Of course no attempt is made to produce oranges and grapefruit.

The climate here is dry and invigorating. December 30 was the only windy day since I came here. December 31 was calm and a beautiful day—quite a contrast to zero conditions the same day in other parts of the country.

Sunday morning, January 1st, the mercury stood at 18 above, which is said to be as cold as it ever gets here. Since this date the weather has been delightful. The nights are cool on account of the 3800 feet altitude here in town, but it becomes warm early in the day.

A WAYSIDE SERMON

Do you merely live IN your community, or do you live FOR it?

DECIDE FOR YOURSELF.

Since the last meeting of the Mayor and Town Council, which was held on January 2, when the advisability of extending Wilson street across the Baltimore and Ohio tracks to connect with the State road at the entrance to the baseball field, was discussed, there have been many voices heard both for and against such a move.

Those in favor of the proposition say that it will benefit Rosedale by making the distance required to reach it somewhat shorter and that it will also affect the people of Oakland residing on the north side of the B. & O. when they have occasion to use the roadway in reaching points west of town.

Those against the proposition point out the needlessness of another crossing over the tracks of the railway company, the dangers involved and the urgent need of repairing what streets Oakland already has before adding more. Specifically these men and taxpayers use the argument that the paved streets need repaving in places, the straghtening of the curb stones which project at many angles in the streets and other less expensive repairs.

The Republican thinks there is justice to both arguments and that both sides should be considered seriously before the petition is passed around asking for the opening of the street in question. It is something that is to be settled entirely by the people. Make up your mind, one way or the other.

DON'T MISUNDERSTAND.

Last week West Virginians had a very good excuse for believing that they were not welcome in this part of the country, a though entirely foreign to the true state of affairs. From the number of arrests made by State Policeman Thomas Currie for minor violations of the motor law, it will be observed that the majority of the violators were West Virginians.

Now, The Republican is not inclined to censure the officer. He was merely doing his duty, and it happened that his reprimands fell upon drivers of West Virginia cars. Perhaps this week most of the arrests made were of unfortunate Marylanders. But the fact that most of the arrests last week were of people from West Virginia, the conclusion might easily be drawn that they were not wanted in Maryland or in Oakland.

That conclusion is just opposite from the true state of affairs. Oakland and Garrett county welcome people from West Virginia or from any other section of the nation. The residents of town or of the county are not out to arrest and have them fined—in fact they had nothing whatever to do with the arrests made last week. Yet, people without giving matters of this nature mature thought would blame the town of Oakland for their troubles.

It just happened that way, so in the words of the town's philosopher, "think nothing of it."

TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS FOR STEALING $2.50.

Two New York boys held up a pedestrian one night and robbed him of $2.50. The other day they were sentenced to 27 years in prison for the crime.

At first glance this sentence seems out of all proportion. But when you consider it closely we believe you'll agree there was justice in it.

The boys, to begin with, carried weapons. Suppose the man had resisted; it is logical to assume that they would have used them. It was the operation of chance, not their own wills, that kept them from being murderers.

In the second place, suppose their victim had had $10,000 in his pocket instead of $2.50. If you read that two men had been given 27 years in prison for robbing a man of $10,000 you wouldn't have thought the sentence particularly excessive. Yet their crime, even though it involved only $2.50, was just as great.

We are going into this case at this length because it is typical of many cases which are seized on by sentimentalists. People who feel that we abuse our criminals are fond of comparing the dollars and cents involved in such cases with the sentences imposed. These people need to realize that it isn't the amount of money taken that makes a robbery serious; it is the act of highway robbery itself.

ADMIRABLE SENTIMENT.

Owen D. Young, eminent lawyer and diplomat, adviser of great corporations, member of President Wilson's second industrial conference, and the choice of at least one leading Southern newspaper for the Democratic nomination for President this year, attracted the interested attention of thoughtful people by an utterance in the course of his recent New England Society address. He applied the Scriptural parable of the unused talent to nations as well as to individuals, and in part said:

"Let not the greatest (nation) stand dumb when it should speak. Let it not be idle when it should act. Let it have courage and sympathy and vision. Let it assume the responsibility of a leadership commensurate with God's great gifts to it. Let it be unafraid for itself and unsupicious of others. Let the paralysis of small views and the selfishness of littleness be condemned in our politics at home and never become a part of our policy abroad."

This is admirable sentiment. But as a vision only of what ought to be, it takes no note of formidable difficulties and obstructing realities. A nation as a nation in its relation to other nations is not its best and most forward-looking public; it is merely a government or group of men in power, inevitably influenced by party politics and the demands of a dominating industrialism. Therefore, as to the aspiration both toward national and international leadership inspired by "courage, sympathy and vision,' it must ever, unfortunately, contend with "the paralysis of small views and the selfishness of littleness.'

Aggressive Christianity.

A traveler in Mexico said that the strangest thing he observed was a Singer sewing machine in almost every home. There may have been nothing else in the huts, no chairs, no stove, perhaps not even a bed, but there was almost sure to be a sewing machine. This was especially strange because, in that tropical climate, where clothes are more or less unnecessary, a sewing machine was the one article of furniture of no conceivable use.

This is simply an illustration of the aggressiveness of modern business—the power of advertising and salesmanship to make people want things which they do not need and buy things which they do not really want.

Aggressiveness is one of the secrets of success in business. But when it comes to the Fathers business, whose agents we all are—oh, dear, how tired we feel! If we serve our employer as we serve the Lord, we should be fired immediately. For each of us there will be a day of reckoning when the Business Manager of the universe calls us to account for the use we have made of our talents. Shall we then hear the divine word of approval: "Well done, good and faithful servant?" That will depend upon whether we are now devoting our talents—our abilities, our energies, our possessions—to the service of our fellowmen and the upbuilding of God's Kingdom, or burying those talents in the graveyard of neglect.

We ought to live so that we may be able to testify, like Job, "I was eyes to the blind, and feet was I to the lame; I was a father to the needy, and the cause of him that I knew not I searched out."—Job 29:16. His was aggressive love, not waiting for cases of need to come to him, but searching out the unknown cause. Job practiced the fine art of neighborliness with a sensitive sympathy quick to hear the unwhispered petition and quick to answer it, tactfully.

In the battle of life, our only safe defense lies in the strategy of attack. We cannot stand still; we must either go forward or go backward. When we stop using a muscle, it begins to wither away. When we cease to use a mental or spiritual faculty, it begins to rust away. The forces of decay are relentlessly attacking us; and when we cease to struggle, we surrender. The only safe defense is in constant aggression.

What the Red Queen said about the Looking Glass country is true also of our country—it takes a great deal of strenuous running just to keep in the same place. The athlete must be continually running around the cinder track in order to keep in the same condition he was in last year. The musician must be continually running up and down the scale to keep his technique where it was. The landlord must be continually running to the plumber, the carpenter, the painter, the paperhanger, to keep his property in as good shape as it was in last season. Nothing in this world stays just where you put it. Nothing remains exactly as it was. It takes a great deal of running just to keep in the same place.

OAKLAND TRIMS FAIRMONT IN THRILLER ON TUESDAY

Extra Period Required To Down Visiting Team—McComas Led In Oakland's Scoring.

Tied at the end of the game at 28 all, an extra five minute period was needed by the Oakland Collegians to send the Fairmont Y. M. C. A. team of basketball players down to defeat on Tuesday night at Naylor's Hall in Oakland. The final score was 32-30.

Oakland's final spurt in the last quarter enabled the teams to be deadlocked at 28 all at the close of the regulation game, but in the extra period Oakland won the game by scoring four points, while the visitors were garnering but two.

Fairmont led at half time, 16-11, and continued in the lead until the third quarter, when Oakland rallied and tied and then passed the Fairmonters. The "Y" men came back, however, to tie the count just before the whistle blew.

McComas, center on the Oakland team, was high scorer, with eight field goals to his credit. Kirchman, of the visitors, with his six field goals, led the scorers for Fairmont. The victory Tuesday night avenged the 52-25 trimming which the Fairmont registered against the local team at Fairmont just a week before.

In the preliminary game the High School reserves soundly thrashed the Christian Endeavor boys of the Lutheran church. The lineups:

| Oakland—32 | | Fairmont—30 |
|---|---|---|
| Killen | F | Schraeder |
| Wolf | F | R. Hanst |
| McComas | C | Turnley |
| Nally | G | Strimer |
| G. Hanst | G | Kirchman |

Substitute: Fairmont, Chor for R. L. Hanst. Field goals, McComas, 8; Kirchman, 6; Schraeder, 4; Turnley, 2; Wolf, 3; G. Hanst, 2; Nally, Killen, Strimer and Chor, 1 each. Fouls, Killen, 1-1; Hanst, 3-3; Schraeder, 1-2; Kirchman, 1-2. Referee, Parsons. Timekeeper, J. Maroney. Scorer, Douglas Helbig.

OAKLAND HIGH'S QUINTET DEFEATED IN TWO GAMES

Cumberland Junior High and Masontown Are Victors.

Oakland High School basketball team lost two games during the past week, Masontown (West Va.) second team defeating them, 12-10, on Saturday night, and the Green Street Junior High of Cumberltnd handing them their second defeat on Tuesday night, 36-26.

In Tuesday's game Oakland led during the first periods and was leading at half time 19-14, but in the third quarter the Juniors started to find the basket. Stemple, with four field goals to his credit, was Oakland's high scorer. The lineups:

| Jr. High—36 | | Oakland—26 |
|---|---|---|
| Lindsey | F | Stemple |
| A. Willison | F | Stanton |
| Somerville | C | Sanders |
| Beyolkey | G | Lohr |
| E. Twigg | G | Stahl |

Field goals—Stahl, 2; Sanders, 2; Stanton, 3; Stemple, 4; Lindsey, 3; Willison, 4; Somerville, 8; Beyolkey, 1. Oakland's foul goals were Stahl, 2-4; Sanders, 1-3; Stanton, 1-3.

Special Program Oakland 4-H Club, January 28.

The Oakland 4-H Room Improvement Club will hold a Club Achievement Day program on Saturday, January 28, at 2:00 p. m., in the office of the Home Demonstration Agent in the Court House. There will be a display of articles made in the year's project on "Own Your Own Room."

Sunnyside Grange To Elect

Election of officers of Sunnyside Grange for the ensuing term will be held at its next meeting on January 25, it has been announced, and all grangers are urged to attend and vote.

At the meeting on January 11, a mock court was held. Mr. Doolittle was charged with stealing four chickens from William Brown. The case was tried before a jury of 12 men, and following the testimony, a verdict of not guilty was rendered. All grangers are asked to notice that Sunnyside Grange meets every second and fourth Wednesday of each month.

BOWLERS TO HOLD FIRST OF A SERIES OF BANQUETS

General Get-together Meeting to be Held Thursday, January 26, at Manhattan Hotel.

The first of a series of banquets for members and friends of the Bowling League of Oakland will be held on Thursday, January 26, at the Manhattan Hotel in Oakland, "Bill" Gibson, manager of the league, announced yesterday.

"This is following out the program inaugurated last year of having several dinners throughout the season where everyone can get together for a good time and discuss any question that might have arisen during the competition," Mr. Gibson said. "The dinner will be served for $1.00 per plate, and I must know at least two days in advance just exactly how many are expecting to attend. So send in or give me your dollar. I expect at least seventy-five this year. Last year we had as many as sixty-nine at these banquets."

The lead between the first and second place in the league has been narrowed considerably in this week's play, the Postoffice losing three out of their six games played, and the K. of C.'s winning three straight.

The Brotherhood raised their average considerably with seven wins out of nine games. The Merchants also won two games from the Methodists this week.

Dr. S. A. Myford, of the Brotherhood team, rolled the highest score of the week in three games, and also the highest individual score. For three games he averaged 410; his individual score was 161.

Women Bowl Also.

One of the much-enjoyed features on the Recreation alleys is the club formed by several of the young women of Oakland, who bowl on Friday evenings. Last Friday the "Theys" won from the "Wes" in a four-game set 749 to 717. The "We" team is composed of Misses Mary Harsh, Bernadette Hart and Nell Nethkin, while the "They" team's roster contains the names of Misses Marie Maroney, Rose Murphy and Julia Rowan. These young women average between 60 and 70 for their games, Miss Maroney rolling a score of 85 for one game. Miss Nethkin rolled a total of 293 for four games.

The standing of the men's league on Friday was as follows:

MARYLAND NOW HAS 50 PUBLIC HEALTH NURSES

Twenty-five Years Ago There was Only One, She in Baltimore

Over twenty-five years ago the first public health nurse in Maryland put on her blue uniform and began her work in Baltimore City. That event and the establishment of the State Nurses' Association will be celebrated during the annual meeting of the Association in Baltimore, January 25, 26 and 27. At first nearly all of the "visiting" nursing, as it was called, was done in Baltimore City. Later it was extended to the counties. In 1920 the number of public health nurses working in the counties was eight. Now there are fifty, three of whom are colored. The colored nurses are engaged in work among their own race.

"A good idea of the scope of the public health nursing work can be gathered from the monthly reports of the nurses," Mrs. John Paul Troy, Advisory Nurse of the State Department of Health, said. "Here is one taken at random from those of December. It is typical of all of them. In each section the nursing work is adapted to the needs of that particular district and is carried on under the direction of the Deputy or local Health Officer, but the underlying purpose is the same everywhere, the prevention of disease and the promotion of health. So, if you want to form a mental picture of the work the nurses are doing throughout the State in assisting in the control of communicable diseases; in the school; for mothers and babies and children under school age; for crippled children or for others in need of special care, just multiply this account by fifty.

Here are the main items from this nurse's report:

"'Communicable diseases: Under the direction of the county health officer, completed the administration of three courses of typhoid vaccine to families in which there had been illness from that disease and to neighbors who had been in contact with them. Sent two tuberculosis suspects who had been in contact with a person ill with tubercuolsis to the monthly clinic for an examination.'

"'School Work: Under the direction of the county health officer, gave toxin-antitoxin to 167 children to immunize them against diphtheria. The children in all of the schools except two in this district have been protected against diphtheria. Assisted at two dental clinics. Assisted at a mental hygiene clinic at which fourteen children were examined. The reports were turned over to the superintendent who is starting classes for retarded children.'

"'For Mothers and Babies: Referred one mother to a hospital. Visited seven sick babies. Held one prenatal clinic. Am trying to reach the expectant mothers in groups.'

"'Social Service: Interested the local Kiwanis Club in promoting a program for the care of the crippled children in the county.'"

"Chang" Praised to Skies by Metropolitan Editor.

It is not often that metropolitan editors stop to praise a motion picture. Therefore, the following editorial appearing in The New York World a few days after Merian C. Cooper and Ernest B. Schoedsack's Paramount production "Chang," showing at the Maryland Theatre tonight and tomorrow night, had opened, should be of interest to film fans:

"To many of us the new moving picture 'Chang' will be worth more than a dozen superproductions which cost $2,000,000. For this picture has one quality which most pictures lack, and that is reality. The trouble with the average movie, more than the relatively trivial question of art, is the irritating artificialty that hangs over it; no matter how ingenious the story or how beautiful the photography, an intelligent person finds it hard believe the events which transpire on the screen. But no such weakness inheres in this picture. You can no more doube it than you can doubt your own eyes. And this is becauhe those who made it went straight to nature for their materials.

"Like the picture 'Grass' in which Mr. Merian C. Cooper also had a hand, it deals with the struggle of primitive people against elemental things. In 'Grass' it was the laborious journey of Asiatic nomads to follow the grass which fed their herds. In 'Chang' it is the dangerous battle of Siamese savages against the jungle. And this jungle, with the leopards, monkeys, constrictors, bears, tigers and elephants which inhabit it, could not be faked. It had to be stalked honestly, patiently, and often at great hazard; and the result is one of the greatest photographie documents that has ever been made. Perhaps the greatest thrill of all is where a herd of elephants, numbering many score, stampede right into the camera's eye. What a feeling when the field goes dark and those great legs pound right over you.

"It is magnificent stuff. May the movies give us more of it."—Advertisement 48-1t.

WILL TAKE GLENN DIXON TO H. OF C. THIS WEEK

Sheriff To Make Trip To Penal Institution in a Day or Two.

It is the intention of Sheriff W. D. Casteel to take Glenn Dixon to the Maryland House of Correction some time during the present week, along with others who will probably be sent to that institution by the court.

Young Dixon, who resides near McHenry, was sentenced to serve three months in the House of Correction following his conviction before Justice W. A. Gonder the latter part of December for driving a car while under the influence of intoxicants. Dixon's car collided with that of Francis McGettigan's at the Sebold farm, Mrs. McGettigan being painfully injured as a result.

Walter Smith Gives Bond.

Walter Smith, another occupant of the Dixon car at the time of the collision, who was not arrested until later, furnished bond in the sum of $700 for his appearance at the June Term of the Garrett County Court and was released from jail the early part of the present week.

At the time of his arrest Smith waived a hearing before the Justice and in default of bond was remanded to jail until a day or two ago when bond for his appearance was produced.

At the December term of Court, Smith, who had been indicted for the manufacture of intoxicants, forfeited his bond of $700 when he failed to respond when his case was called for trial.

Wilbur Cooper Arrested.

Wilbur Cooper, of Loch Lynn, was arrested Friday on a charge of stealing chickens and meat from a home in Loch Lynn. He was given a preliminary hearing before Justice E. I. West who held him under $200 bail for his appearance at the June Term of Court. The bond was furnished and Cooper released.

SUSPECTED "ROBBERS" ARE CHASED INTO PASTURE LOT

Deputy Sheriff and Policeman "Run Down" The Culprits

Walking peaceably along the upper end of Second street, "the section of beautiful homes," a resident was somewhat startled to see Policeman Sam Aronhalt and Deputy Sheriff Joy Griffith, in company with one of the residents of that section stealthily searching the premises. It was yet quite early and a very unwise hour for anybody to contemplate unlawful proceedings, and the onlooker was quite at a loss as to the reason for the actions of the officers of the law.

The noble citizen in the vicinity where the officers were engaged was preoccupied at the time, although he had a strong desire to aid in the search for the culprit. It had always been his desire to run down a burglar and see him locked up in the hoosegow but his good manners prevailed and he continued on his way with his more timid companion.

The next morning being Sunday, he was still curious and inquisitive and asked the deputy sheriff if he had found the robbers.

"Yes, we found them," Joy said. "We locked them up in a pasture field. Every year when people's lawns are the softest and easiest to tear up somebody's cows invariably break loose and delight in playing hide and seek on them."

And then the citizen, who had lost several hours' sleep the night before, wended his way homeward in peace and contentment.

Worth All Sorts of Money

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

LAURA said it was the hent, when Malcolm asked her why her cheeks were so pink, meeting her in one of the Impersonal little reception rooms in the Girls' club that July evening.

"You think I've been using rouge," Laura accused good-naturedly. "But I swear I haven't—don't have to. But why should you object if I did?".

Malcolm sat down rather uncomfortably on one of the cheap thinly upholstered chairs. "I have no right to object," he said. "Only I can't bear the thought of having men stare at you. You're enough to make them stare anyway. It makes me boil sometimes—to think of having you sit there in that office with every Tom, Dick and Harry coming and going. That's why it is such h— to be poor. It isn't that I want more money for itself, but I want money so that I could arrange things decently."

"What would you do if you had all sorts of money?" asked Laura. "Bet you don't know. Most people think they know—and then when they get the money they make a mess trying to spend it. You know, or think you know, when you are poor and then it comes and you don't know."

"Oh, what's the use," said Malcolm rather sulkily. "I wouldn't care if it weren't for you—I'd be content being poor—just ping away where I am till the chance came for something better. I'm no genius but I'm coming along—ten years from now I may have a good income—but loving you the way I do I can't wait ten years."

"That's not playing my game," teased Laura. "Just suppose you suddenly had all sorts of money—what would you do?"

"Funny girl," said Malcolm smiling in spite of his dejection. "Well, to start with," he said after a moment's hesitation. "I think I'd just go on exactly as if nothing had happened for five or six days—just to get my balance. Then I'd leave the office one day at about five o'clock and I'd go to the agency of some tip-top car and I'd get the best little car for two they had in the place—and I'd drive right out and over here and I'd ask you to take a drive with me—and then I'd tell you the glad tidings and I'd say: 'Laura, everything is all right. I'm worth all sorts of money. Let's get married right away,' and you'd say: 'All right, Malcolm—how about tomorrow?' Is that the way to play the game?" asked Malcolm, pleased with the ripples of laughter that his remarks had caused.

"Lovely—" said Laura, "only you forgot that you couldn't ride right out with the new car. You'd have to get a license and plates and everything."

"Don't spoil my story," objected Malcolm. "Why bother over a few facts when it's all a fairy yarn?"

It was a pleasant night and Laura suggested that they should walk the mile to the moving picture theater. "We ought to save the pennies," she said, and when Malcolm went to the window where the fifty-cent seats were sold Laura protested. "You can see just as well from the twenty-five-cent seats," she said.

It was five o'clock in the afternoon just five days later and Malcolm, seeing that all the rest of the office force had left or were about to leave for the day, drew down the top of his roll-top desk. He had known there would be nothing to keep him late and so earlier in the day he had tried to get Laura at her office. He had planned to suggest having dinner together at an inexpensive little restaurant he had heard about. They would have time for a bus ride before they had dinner. Laura always liked that. But when he telephoned to her office the young woman who answered simply had said: "Why, she's left." Yet the night before when he had seen Laura she had said nothing about leaving work early.

So as Malcolm was pulling down the top of his desk he looked up to see Laura entering the office. She asked him to go out and have a ride with her. "Great minds run in the same channel," quoth Malcolm. "I was going to suggest a bus ride myself—and dinner afterwards."

He took his hat from the clothes tree beside his desk and hurried after Laura, who seemed impatient. At the curb stood a car so new, so completely equipped and so obviously expensive that four or five young office workers were loitering beside it out of sheer admiration. A perfectly liveried young chauffeur sat at the wheel, and to Malcolm's amazement Laura opened the door of the tonneau and entered, sinking back luxuriously on the pearl-gray seat. Malcolm, dumbfounded, followed and sat beside her.

"Through the park, please," Laura murmured to the chauffeur. Then she turned to Malcolm and pressed his hand with hers.

"Malcolm, everything is all right," she whispered. "I'm worth all sorts of money. Let's get married right away."

"But, but, b—" Malcolm stammered.

"You must say, 'How about tomorrow?'" Laura told him. "You see, I knew five days ago—it was an old oil well father bought before he died. I hadn't sold it because no one would buy it—and so when you told me what you'd do I decided I'd do the same thing. Only I had to arrange for a chauffeur until we can learn to drive."

After His Own Heart

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

WHEN Adam Laird discovered he had been cut to the heart by the perfidy of Minerva Jones he decided to become a confirmed bachelor. Adam was wealthy enough to play the part and romantic enough to embellish the role with those touches and graces which fiction gives it.

At forty Adam Laird was known as a woman hater. He was known also as a handsome man who owned a large home in which he lived a life of ease. The few men who had been invited to join him at cards or discussion reported his library was as comfortable and handy a place as a man could wish. In Tannerville there were many who, in the stress of domestic affairs, yearned more than once for a retreat like that of Adam Laird. It was assumed by these men that Adam was riotously happy.

Adam tried to take comfort in his sadness. He was fond of imagining that Minerva Jones would look upon the wreck she had made of his life and shed bitter tears. "I am accountable to no one but myself," he mused, "and therefore I am happier than any man in Tannerville." But for all of that, the hours were slow in passing.

The bachelor took to chess as a companion to his loneliness. With a rule book, he studied the moves and on a board before him conducted games with an imaginary opponent. Then he subscribed to a chess magazine and in time considered he was an expert. There was no one in Tannerville with whom he could play.

An idea came to Adam after reading a chess problem in his magazine. It was signed C. Y. Riddle, Minnowville, a name he had seen attached to many another communication on the subject. Adam wrote Riddle proposing that they carry on a game by mail. He even offered a silver cup for the winner.

Before the month was out the game was on, and it was a game to thrill the soul of the ardent chess fan. Abner had a whole day in which to decide his move. Then he mailed a postal card to Riddle carrying the decision and waited until he received the card which revealed the manner in which his play was countered.

Riddle was a good chess player. Adam consulted his books, studied hours over his board, and played as if his life and reputation were at stake. It took six months to play that game and Riddle won. Exhusted Adam went for a vacation in the woods. He would return and have his revenge.

Adam sat before his chess board undecided as to the opening gambit. "At last I have put Minerva and women out of my mind. I will live for a higher purpose. I will give my life to chess!" Before he went to bed he mailed his card to Riddle and the second great game was on its way.

The bachelor was enough of the chess player to realize that C. Y. Riddle was a player after his own heart. As the game progressed there came the desire to meet the man, to play with him over a common table. So Adam wrote, including the words: "You are a player after my own heart." And Riddle accepted on condition the other would make the trip.

"I find," wrote Riddle, "I will not be able to leave Minnowville. Let me know when you expect to come."

The adventure started off in a disconcerting way. When Adam rang the bell at the Minnowville address he was welcomed by a calm-eyed woman of thirty.

"I am looking for C. Y. Riddle, a gentleman with whom I was playing a game of chess."

The woman smiled. "I am Carolyn Y. Riddle," she answered, "and you are Adam Laird? You cannot imagine how I have enjoyed our game!"

Adam gasped. His chess route to happiness was blocked by a woman! He should have guessed it, he told himself. They were everywhere. But this woman who smiled with so much of understanding could play the game as well, if not better than he. She was—and this was his consolation—an extraordinary woman.

"I thought you were a man," he apologized, "and yet I might have known by the—er—delicate way you handled your rooks." He blushed and told himself he was talking like an idiot.

"Suppose," said C. Y. Riddle, "we start on that game."

Adam, at the chess table, looked at the waving brown hair brought almost into his face as the girl leaned over the board. He could not fix his mind on knights, bishops, pawns and the rest. It seemed to him somehow that this was what he had been wanting for a long time, a girl to sit opposite him at a table, at chess, breakfast—any kind of table.

Every evening for a week he called to continue the game and all the while he knew he was beaten.

"It is all up," he said when she checkmated him. He looked at her and thought he read his future in the gaze she returned.

"I think"—and he heard himself speaking as if from a distance—"I think that if you were to marry me and come to Tannerville we could have some fine games of chess."

The girl laughed. "All right, partner," she said, "you know you said I was a player after your own heart."

Attended Sales Conference.

According to Messrs. Charles U. and Harry C. Edwards, who attended the annual sales meeting of Chevrolet dealers in the Washington Auditorium last Friday afternoon, the Chevrolet Motor Company is planning to break all production and sales records in the history of the company. Nearly 800 Chevrolet dealers who attended the sales meeting heard H. J. Klinger, general sales manager of the company, sound the keynote of the biggest campaign ever undertaken by the corporation. Mr. Klingler outlined the plan for the sales of more than a million units in 1928. "Never before did a Chevrolet meeting create such unbridled enthusiasm as was displayed over the prospects for the year," Mr. Edwards declared. Detroit, regional and zone officials of the Chevrolet Company assisted Mr. Klingler in conducting the meeting which took the form of the most comprehensive sales presentation of its kind ever made by an automobile manufacturing concern. Talks were illustrated in the form of playlets, depicting the proper procedure to be followed in the successful operation of a retail automobile business. Immediately following the meeting the dealers were guests of the motor company at an elaborate banquet in the Mayflower Hotel. An added feature of the banquet and something that was much enjoyed was a gorgeous entertainment by Bob Iula's orchestra and John Mealy's singers and dancers, interspersed with group singing led by Mr. Mealy. Mr. A. C. Stanton, cashier of the First National Bank of Grantsville, was the guest of the Messrs. Edwards at this conference and banquet.

Mrs. Isabel Durst.

Mrs. Isabel Durst, widow of the late John Durst, died at the home of her foster daughter, Mrs. Richard Durst, on Negro Mountain, on January 12, death resulting from paralysis and the infirmaties of advancing years. The funeral was held on January 14 from her late home, Rev. J. E. Wells officiating, with burial in the family cemetery. She was over 95 years of age and a member of the United Brethren church. She was the foster mother of three children and made her home with one of them, Mrs. Richard Durst.

Attends Teachers' Conference.

Christian Endeavor Election.

The Christian Endeavor Society held its annual election recently, reelecting Mrs. H. C. Edwards, president; Mrs. James Younkin, Mrs. S. I. Diefenbach and Miss Ethel Broadwater, vice-presidents; Mrs. Willis Younkin, secretary; Mrs. C. U. Edwards, treasurer. G. W. Diefenbach is appointed junior superintendent and corresponding secretary; Mrs. Marshall Beachy, chairman of the social committee, and Mrs. James Younkin, chairman of the prayer meeting committee. Reports show the finances of the society to be in a flourishing condition and the work of the organization has been very good. A number of things were done at Christmas-time to make life a little happier for the more unfortunate of the community and a year-round program of helpfulness has been planned.

Zeller Business Purchased

G. W. Diefenbach recently purchased the grocery business of C. S. Zeller and took a lease on the storeroom occupied by Mr. Zeller. The new owner will move his dry goods stock to the Zeller location in the near future and handle both groceries and dry goods. His present location in the Hone building has become entirely inadequate for the business. Mr. Zeller has not decided upon any particular course as to his future activities as he desires a rest and time to survey the field of business possibilities.

Joint Meeting of Departments

With Miss Eva Falkenstein, instructor in the Home Economics department of the Grantsville High School, in charge, a joint meeting of her department with that of the Agricultural department was held Thursday afternoon. All high school students and members of the faculty were invited as guests. A splendid address on "Why Hot Lunches Should be Served in School" was given by Miss Freida Wiley. Her talk was illustrated by slides, which were loaned by the Agricultural Department of the State and added much interest.

Emerson Bishoff, instructor in agriculture, was also a speaker at the joint meeting. He gave a talk on "Renovating an Apple Orchard," which was likewise illusrtated by the use of stereopticon slides. Mr. Bishoff's talk was quite instructive and very beneficial to the class and others who had the opportunity of hearing him.

Thursday was the first time the school had had the opportunity of illustrating with slides and all were delighted with the success attending the meeting of these two departments.

THOMAS JOHNSON, FIRST GOVERNOR OF MARYLAND

War Ruler of State Won Commendation From Washington Among Other Leaders.

A review of "The Life of Thomas Johnson" by Edward S. Delaplaine, of Frederick, appeared in the book review section of the New York Times Sunday last under the heading: "Thomas Johnson — A Neglected 'Founding Father,'" as follows:

When a political personality fails to be amply recognized by his own generation it is difficult for a biographer to establish his prestige with a future generation. Mr. Deleaplaine has attempetd to perform this service for the first Governor of Maryland, who was also a warm friend of George Washington, a member of the Potomac Company,lawyer of parts, an amateur soldier, an iron founder, a speculator in real estate, an Associate Justice of the United States Suprome Court, a Commissioner of the Federal City of Washington, and perhaps also something of a philosopher. A life lived in these eapacites should have been exciting as well as significant. But Mr. Delaplaine, though he has evidently made a thorough study of his material, does not quite succeed in making Thomas Johnson vivid.

The reader is not certain whether this is Mr. Delaplaines fault or Mr. Johnson's. Mr. Delaplaine is at least not lively and sometimes he is ingenious. For instance, he observes:

"In the early days of the State the legislators were not bound by blocs or cliques. These were the days when, regardless of friendships, men voted their own personal convictions."

Practical Man.

Statements of this sort may still appear in elementary textbooks but they have ceased to be a feature of history or biography intended for adult minds. The fact is, on Mr. Delaplaine's own showing that Johnson honest and public-spirited man though he was, was not unaware of his own interests. As a delegate to the State Convention of Maryland he got through a law in the interests of his own Potomac Company. As a Commissioner of the Federal city he bought land for a rise in value and involved himself in unpleasant litigation. When supply agents for the Continental troops were buying flour in Maryland at what were thought inflated prices he took the eminently practical view that the main thing was to get the flour to the troops at whatever price the market demanded.

That he had unusual ability was manifest. He was one of a committee appointed by the Maryland Convention in 1774 to concert measures with Pennsylvania and Virginia. He served on numerous important committees of Congress. John Adams said of him:

"Johnson of Maryland has a clear and a cool head, an extensive knowledge of trade as well as law. He is a deliberating man, but not a shining orator; his passions and imaginations don't appear enough for an orator; his reason and penetration appear, but not his rhetoric."

Mr. Delaplaine makes an important point of the fact that it was Johnson and not Adams who nominated George Washington for the command of the Continental armies. But as Mr. Delaplaine himself concedes, Johnson did not make the nomination until after Adams had pushed the suggestion with all his influence and eloquence. Adams' allusions, in fact, "became so pointed that Colonel Washington, who was occupying a seat near the door, darted with characteristic modesty into the library. The actual nomination by Johnson, though an act of friendship, seems to have been stragetic, for Maryland held the middle ground between Virginia and New England.

Johnson had the caution and conservatism of a thoroughgoing business man. He is said to have told the royal Governor Eden of Maryland that "the first Hessian soldier who puts his foot on Maryland soil will absolve me from all allegiance to Great Britain. But when the pinch came he stood with Jay and Dickinson for reconciliation and against what he considered a premature declaration of independence. Whether or not he would have voted for the Declaration had he been present in Congress at the time is a question. Mr. Delaplaine believes he would. But Mr. Delaplaine also believes that the Declaration was actually adopted on the Fourt of July—an error of which modern scholarship long ago disposed.

As a war Governor of Maryland, Johnson was energetic and earnest. His friendship with Washington as well as his reluctant conversion to the cause of independence made him cooperate with the Federal Government more heartily than did most of the State officials of the Confederation. He seems to have been a most capable executive. He had his moments of fire, as when he threatened to hang an officer of militia who hesitated to take up the march. And there is an agreeable anecdote of the sentry outside Washington's headquarters in February, 1777, who attempted to stop "a little red-headed man" who "says his name is Tom Johnson and bedamned to you and that he is bound to come in." But usually Johnson did not do these things with a flare. He was slow, solemn, methodical and a "business man by preference." Though he lived to be 87, the last twenty-five years of his life were passed in almost complete retirement.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. L. M'GLONE,
Resident County Agent,
Office, Court House.

Extension Workers Plan Farm Market Program.

All the counties of Maryland are represented by county and home demonstration agents in the annual conference of the agricultural Extension Service at the University of Maryland which began Tuesday and will end tomorrow. The conference is being devoted to an exhaustive review of the farm marketing situation in Maryland.

Practically all phases of farm marketing in Maryland are being considered at the conference with a view to planning a strong marketing program for the Extension Service during the coming year.

The conference opened on Tuesday morning with an address by Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the Extension Service; Dr. R. A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland; Miss Florence Ward and Lloyd Tenney, of the United States Department of Agriculture; Prof. Boyd H. Bode, of Ohio State University; and J. R. Howard, former president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Other promient speakers on the program during the conference include I. W. Heaps, secretary of the Maryland State Dairymen's Association; Thomas Stitts, of the United States Department of Agriculture; Dr. H. J. Patterson, director of the University of Maryland Experiment Station; Jas. B. George, secretary of the State Board of Agriculture; John McGill, secretary of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association; Dr. F. B. Bomberger, executive director of the Del-Mar-Va Eastern Shore Association; W. E. Lewis, R. R. Slocum and W. A. Lloyd, of the United States Department of Agriculture; State Senator Frank Mish, of Hagerstown; Jas. W. Davis, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau; George I. Gardiner, manager of the Maryland Tobacco Growers' Association; M. M. Stewart, secretary of the Maryland Farm Bureau; and J. V. Morrow and Reuben Brigham, of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Specialists of the Extension Service and county agents also will participate in discussions of the various subjects on the program.

J. L. McGlone and Miss Elsie Benthein, of Garrett county, are both attending the conference.

Turkey Raising Safer by Artificial Methods.

Contrary to the general belief that turkeys cannot be raised successfully by artificial methods, the incubator and the stove brooder have not only proved their practicability for turkey raising but have strong points of advantage over the natural method of entrusting eggs and young turkeys to the mother bird, says W. Rice, poultry specialist for the University of Maryland Extension Service.

Management is the keynote to successful turkey production, says Mr. Rice, and as this fact becomes more generally known turkey raising in Maryland should show considerable expansion.

If properly operated, an incubator can be expected to do as good a job of hatching turkey eggs as a hen. Furthermore, its use frees the hen from the long and tedious ordeal of hatching and rearing her brood and permits her to concentrate on the more important task of laying.

Artificial brooding is equally practical. The chief superiority of artificial hatching and brooding, however, is that the young turkeys do not come in contact with the old birds and consequently are less likely to contract the dreaded blackhead disease and are less subject to parasitic infestations.

One of the most important factors in successful turkey raising is the selection of a range which has not been used by other poultry, particularly chickens, for a period of three years. It is particularly important that young turkeys be kept away from contaminated soil as it has been shown that the blackhead disease is carried by chickens. The young stock should be handled in separate broods and should at all times be segregated from older fowls.

Good breeding stock to begin with is, of course, essential for success in turkey production as well as proper feeding.

Inspection Valuable at Shipping Point

Shipping point inspection was provided for 1,682 carloads of Maryland fruits and vegetables last year by the State Department of Markets in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture, it is announced by S. B. Shaw, chief inspector for the farmer organization.

The inspection covered 471 cars of apples, 104 cars of peaches, 1,022 cars of Irish potatoes, 49 cars of sweet potatoes, 6 cars of cucumbers, 17 cars of tomatoes, and 13 cars of pears.

Shipping point inspection, according to Mr. Shaw, has provided a real service for both shippers and buyers and has steadily grown in favor among both groups during the past few years. Misunderstandings and losses all along the line of distribution are minimized on shipments that have passed the critical examination of the inspectors, it is pointed out.

When a carlot shipment of fruit or vegetables is examined, its condition, its quality and its grade are noted on a certificate that accompanies the shipment. The shipper thus has a definite guarantee of his product to offer the buyer while the latter has an equally good guarantee of the quality and condition at time of shipment of the produce he is buying.

In addition to this definite service, shipping point inspection has had an important effect in improving the standard of Maryland fruit and vegetable shipments, it is said. This is made clear by figures which show that of the total number of cars shipped last year, 1,137 were passed as U. S. No. 1. In other words, five per cent more cars went out last year as top grade than the year before.

MOVEMENT TO PRESERVE HISTORIC SPOTS IS BEGUN

West Virginia, the Panhandle state, is so full of historic and scenic spots that many movements are on hand to preserve these to the state and to the thousands of motorists expected there.

For West Virginia hopes to become one of the country's greatest motoring meccas. It offers its hills and valleys of a beauty few other states can surpass. It recalls the history events that took place there. It is preserving the remains of pioneer days for the education and entertainment of future generations.

In order to make all these attractions accessible to motoring visitors, the state is speeding up its road building program and already has produced some of the finest roads in the country. Wide, well-paved highways take the mountain sides in easy grades, so that any car can cover the state without trouble.

The Midland Trail, U. S. 21, at Parkersburg and Charleston, U. S. 19 at Morgantown, and U. S. 11 over the Virginia border. This, and the Huntington-Bluefield road, cross not only historic and natural sights for which West Virginia is noted, but take the motorist through the heart of a billion dollar coal district.

National Routes Enter.

In the eastern panhandle, the Lee highway, the Northwestern turnpike and the National pike bring the tourist army from the north and scatter it throu, districts that are rich in historic lore. The colonial atmosphere pervades the air while, from a utilitarian viewpoint, there are vast peach and apple orchards, great grain fields and some of the greatest limetone quarries in the country to intrigue the newcomer.

At Harper's Ferry, where the Potomac and Shenandoah unite, is the lowest spot in the state, and one of the loveliest. Here John Brown and his fellow abolitionists made their illfated effort to arm and free the slaves.

The Northwestern turnpike, U. S. 50, from Parkershurg to Winchester, is typical of the early roads that followed the tracks of white trapper and pioneer hunter or the trail of Indians and huffalo. This road appeals to the traveler today as the best route from Washington to Cincinnati and St. Louis because of its easy grades and a saving of 75 miles in distance.

To Preserve Landmarks.

Throughout the state efforts are being made to preserve the historic and scenic spots for the future. A commission is to report on the needs of the battlefield at Phillippi, where the first land battle of the Civil War was fought. Another group wants to preserve the site of the home of Nancy Hanks in Mineral county.

Other organizations want to locate the site of Daniel Boone's cabin in Kanawha county and to preserve Ashby's fort in Mineral county, one of the few remaining log block houses of pioneer days.

Monuments have been placed throughout the state in memory of the men who did great things for West Virginia as well as the rest of the country. Besides these historic shrines a number of parks and forest areas are being urged for state use, and camps for motorists are being dedicated.

Altogether, therefore, West Virginia offers a splendid attraction to tourists passing through the east.

Hill Hurkholder Again Behind Prison Bars.

Detective Buckman, of Berlin, and Constable W. T. Herring, of Somerset, Pa., armed with search warrants, traveled through zero weathr to Negro Mountain in Somerset county, Pa., a few days ago, and at a point near Center Church arrested William Burkholder, who was suspected of taking nine doors, which were the property of the Quemahoning Coal Company at Rockwood. The officers found the missing property on Burkholder's premises and took both him and the doors to Somerset where Burkholder was committed to the county jail.

He is an old offender, having served three years in the Allegany workhouse and was but recently released from the Maryland Penitentiary where he completed a term for stealing and slaughtering cattle on the Stone House Farm near Grantsville.

MARYLAND AUTOMOBILE GAIN SAME AS IN YEAR 1926

Percentage of Increase In Registration in 1926 Was 8.8.

Maryland gained 8.8 percent in motor vehicle registrations during 1927, according to figures compiled by the Goodrich Rubber Company and just released.

West Virginia leads all the states in this section in the amount of increase, the percentage being 10 as compared with Pennsylvania's 7.8; Virginia's 4.5; Delaware's 5; Ohio's 5.5 and Maryland's 8.8.

There were 23,579,002 motor vehicles registered in the United States during 1927.

Motor vehicle production for 1927 is estimated at 3,540,000, indicating a heavy replacement business. This figure added to the registration shows only 23,579,002 motor vehicles in use, the difference, or 2,224.641 would indicate the number of motor cars scrapped or discarded. Replacements during the year were 9.4 per cent of the total registration.

New York Still First.

New York State still holds first place in number of motor vehicles, but California is running a very close second. New York's percentage of increase was 9.8, while California's registration climbed only 5.5 per cent On the other hand California possesses a motor vehicle for every two inhabitants, or an average of two per family, which is figured at 4.6 persons, while New York possesses one car for every 5.2 persons, or not quite one car per family.

For the first time in the history of the automotive industry four states showed a drop in registration. Florida leads with a loss of 10.4 per cent over 1926. Maine was second with a loss of 5.8 per cent.

Washington and the District of Columbia made the highest gain of any locality with 17.5 per cent increase in registration. Mississippi takes second place in percentage of gain with 12.9 per cent increase to its credit.

Same Rate for Maryland.

It is coincident that the percentage of increase in three states was identical to the percentage of increase obtained in 1926. New York, Maryland and New Hampshire each showed the same percentage of increase in 1927 as was shown in 1926.

Taking the registration total and dividing it into the estimated population of the United States shows one car for every 4.9 persons, or approximately one car per family. The 1927 registration total also provides 7.9 motor cars for every square mile of area in the United States.

An estimated registration of motor vehicles on farms shows 19.9 percent of the total or 4,770,000 motor cars and trucks. Over 19 per cent of the total highway mileage in the United States has been surfaced for motor vehicle traffic, a big gain in surfacing having been made in 1927. Gasoline consumed by motor vehicles in 1927 amounted to 9,697,000,000 gallons; 84 per cent of all the crude rubber imported was used in making tires and accessories for the motor car industry.

O. G. S. Extends Thanks to Doctors and Merchants

1816 WAS THE "WINTER OF THE DEEP SNOW"

Fortunately for this Generation Such Storms Are Not Common

The big storm which gripped the country recently recalls famous blizzards of other years. One came in 1846, during the "winter of the deep snow," as it was known by that generation.

Cappers Weekly has an Illinois newspaper report of that storm from Relph Hildreth, Pharr, Tex. It was on December 20 that a sinister-looking black cloud rolled up from the northwest. The morning had been rainy. The cloud brought a driving snow and bitter cold. Temperature fell about 100 degrees in 24 hours. It was 50 below zero the next morning.

Two men started on horseback from Danville to Chicago. They were J. H. Hildreth, ancestor of Ralph Hildreth, and a man named Frame. The blinding storm overtook them about 2 p. m. They were soon lost in the sparsely settled wilderness and death by freezing stared them in the face.

They wandered on until night overtook them. Certain of freezing to death without shelter for the night they resorted to a practice then common among frontiersmen. Killing the larger horse, they took out the "innards" and both crawled into the carcass. By 4 a. m. the dead horse was frozen stiff and the men were forced out by the extreme cold, almost too numb to move. A stupor came over Frame and Hildreth could not keep him on his feet. Efforts to rouse him failed and Hildreth was forced to abandon him.

Hildreth mounted the remaining horse and let it have its way. Whether by instinct or accident it came to a stream, across which in the early dawn Hildreth saw a cabin. He was barely able to crawl over the threshold and fell in a faint before the fireplace. Part of his fingers and toes had to be amputated. His feet gave him trouble as late as 1853 and he had them amputated. He became weaker after the operation and died in 1959.

The storm took many lives. Frozen hands and feet were common. Men who had worked in the rain found their clothes frozen stiff in a few minutes. Cattle and hogs caught outside were frozen fast in the mud.

Andrew Meredith, another pioneer, with several neighbors, was driving a herd of hogs from Springfield to St. Louis. The men left their hogs to their fate and sought shelter in a farmhouse. Returning next day they found the dead porkers piled in a pyramid. The hogs had huddled together and those underneath were smothered while the top ones were frozen.

It was all a part of the price paid by our forefathers to develop a wilderness which has become the garden spot of the world.

Oakland High School News.

Parents, do not forget to caution your children about examinations. They must pass the mid-year examinations, because if they do not it will be hard work for them to make up the work before the end of the term. Examinations take place January 25, 26 and 27.

Four basketball teams have been organized by the girls of O. H. S. under the supervision of Miss Jean Hollar. The girls must have the written permission from their parents if they wish to play.

The high school team of the school went to Masontown Saturday evening last to play the high school there. They lost by two points, 12-10.

On Tuesday of this week our boys went to Cumberland where they likewise lost 26-36 to the Green Street Junior High.

GREEK WORD "TELE" HAS A NEW MEANING

The word "tele" comes from the Greek. Originally it meant "far" or "distant," but in the modern meaning of the word it has come to mean "near".

The telebolos or shouting orator of the Greeks, whose range was limited only by the power of his voice, has been succeeded by the telephone which brings near the voice of the party far away. The teleskopos for the far-seeing observer of the Greeks has been replaced by the telescope, which brings far off objects near at hand. Then there was also the telemachos or far-casting bow, the telepompes, or the man who had visited far lands, the telekleitos or far-famed hero and the telegonos or far-born foreigner.

The telephone, the telegraph and the telescope, however, have entirely altered the meaning of the original Greek word "tele." Last of all comes television which, allied with the telephone, completely annihilates distances so that both the object and the voice are brought near at hand, even though they are hundreds or thousands of miles away.

TELEPHONES TO LINK BYRD WITH HIS BASE

When Commander Richard E. Byrd makes his flight to the South Pole, he will take along with him several telephones which will be installed at the major base in Discovery Bay in the portable houses which are to be brought from Norway and are to serve as homes and workshops for the thirty scientists, mechanics and flyers who are to take part in the expedition. A radio station, operating on a short wave length, is also to be established at that point.

TREAT A FRIEND RIGHT

A desk telephone should always be held upright. When tipped forward or backward, the voice does not carry so well over the wires because the little carbon granules in the transmitter are disturbed.

SERVICES FOR ACCIDENT VICTIM HELD SATURDAY

Mrs. Anna Hess, Killed on Highway Near Cumberland Wednesday, Buried At Deer Park.

Funeral services for Mrs. Anna Virginia Hess, 50 years old, formerly of Deer Park, who was killed Wednesday evening near Allegany Grove, on the National Highway, near Cumberland, by an automobile, were held at her home at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening, Rev. Thomas M. Dickey. pastor of the Park Place M. E. church of Cumberland, officiating. The body was removed from the home to Deer Park Saturday morning. The funeral left the Cumberland home at eight o'clock and upon arrival at Deer Park services were held in the Methodist Episcopal church at that place with interment following in the village cemetery.

Driver of Car Held for Manslaughter.

Herman Steppe, 26, of Cumberland, who was held on a manslaughter charge for the action of the April grand jury on recommendation of a coroner's jury Friday night in connection with the death of Mrs. Hess, was released on $1000 bond Saturday afternoon. Relatives were his bondsmen.

The coroner's jury found that Mrs. Hess had received an injury producing a fracture of the skull, which caused instant death, and that Steppe was not operating his car with proper care at the moment of the accident; that he disappeared from the scene without making any effort to render assistanee or report the accident to the proper authorities.

The two women were enroute to Park Place M. E. church to attend the evening service at the time of the accident, it was sated. Five witnesses testified. It was brought out that Steppe's driving license had been revoked on May 30, 1927, when he had been convicted on drunken-driving charge.

Steppe had been held in jail following his arrest after his automobile had struck Mrs. Hess and Mrs. Philip Miller, a neighbor, standing on the side of the roadway. Mrs. Miller was knocked down but escaped serious injury. Mrs. Hess was hurled to the side of the road and physicians who examined her body said she had been killed instantly.

The Hess family moved to LaVale from Deer Park several years ago. Besides her husband, Philip R. Hess, the deceased is survived by eight children. Her father, George Marley, Sr., now more than ninety years old, a brother, George Marley, Jr., two sisters, Mrs. Daniel Hinebaugh and Mrs. Robert Thrasher, of Deer Park, also survive.

WILL ORGANIZE POTATO CLUB IN GARRETT COUNTY

County Agent and Railroad Official to Start Project Soon

Plans are well under way for the organization of a Baltimore and Ohio Potato Club in Garrett county, according to L. S. Hartley, agricultural agent for the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, who was in Oakland last Wednesday conferring with County Agent J. L. McGlone, regarding the details of the project which is to be carried on in co-operation with the county agent and the railway company.

According to the plan ten boys, who make up the club membership, will each be given enough certified seed potatoes to plant one-quarter of an acre, this seed being furnished by the railway company. The boys will grow their crops in accordance with the best practices under the supervision of the county agent and they will keep complete and accurate records of their project and make an exhibit at the crop at the county fair, where they will compete for cash prizes which are also to be offered by the Baltimore and Ohio.

The object of the project is to show the value of using good seed and good practices in the growing of potatoes.

This project is being carried on in co-operation with various county agents in the States of West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Indiana, having been in progress in Indiana for the past few years where it has been an outstanding success and of inestimable benefit to the potato growing industry in that State.

Oakland High School Notes of Public Interest.

Examinations take place Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, January 25, 26 and 27, at the Oakland High School. Are your boys and girls at work so that they may pass with high marks in the various studies? Every pupil should study at least two hours outside the school every day. It pupils did this every day in the school year, examinations would not worry them in the least.

The end of the examination period will be celebrated on Tuesday, January 31 by ? ? Watch for the news.

You should see the O. H. S. girls play basketball. They are certainly first-class atheletes.

ALLEGED ROBBER CAUGHT; IS HELD ON TWO CHARGES

Sheriff Casteel Wrecks His Automobile in Snowstorm Returning to Jail with Man

Charged with robbing an elderly gentleman of $61 and of passing bad checks, James Rhodes, about 25 years of age, of near Westernport, was brought to Oakland last Friday night by Sheriff William D. Casteel, who had gone to Rhodes' home earlier in the day with a warrant charging him with the crimes above recited.

Rhodes was given a hearing on the bad check charge and was remanded to the County Jail for the action of the June grand jury in default of bond in the sum of $500.

The preliminary hearing upon the robbery charge will be heard by Justice of the Peace E. I. West this afternoon, it was stated by the jail officials.

Sheriff Wrecks His Car.

Returning from Westernport with his prisoner, Sheriff Casteel was caught in a severe snow storm and the roadway becoming obscured as a result he ran his Dodge touring car into a culvert head at a point just east of Grantsville on the National Highway. Neither the officer nor his handcuffed prisoner were injured, but it was near morning when at last they arrived in Oakland. The car was brought to town later.

Martin Carney Arrested.

Martin Corney, 25 years old, of Hutton, is in jail following his arrest on Monday on the charge of passing bad checks. Several garages in Oakland are said to have accepted and cashed the worthless slips.

Carney was given a preliminary hearing hy Justice West on Tuesday who held him under a bond in the sum of $200 for his appearance at the June term of the Circuit Court. Following his failure to procure the bond, he was returned to the Garrett County Jail.

To Give Benefit Picture For Volunteer Fire Department.

"This is a regular 50-cent picture," Walter Dawson said, "but Mr. Gonder has consented to turn the proceeds over to the department as he did last year for a 35-cent picture."

The picture will start at the usual time, it was stated, and the officers of the department are especially desirous of having a record turnout on both nights.

CHILD BREAKS THROUGH ICE; HEROICALLY RESCUED

Three Men on far Side of Stream Get Rope To Him—Was in the Water Fifteen Minutes

Heroic efforts on the part of three men saved the life of little Bobbie Tibbetts, son of Mrs. Katharine Tibbetts, Water street, after he had broken through the ice of the Little Youghiogheny River at one of the deepest points about a hundred yards above the dam of the Oakland mill on Sunday afternoon.

The lad, who is seven years of age, attempted to cross the stream on the thin ice then covering it when his weight caused it to break just as he was in the center of the channel. With rare presence of mind he clung to the edge of the ice as some other children on the opposite side of the stream called for help. Three men, Paul Beckwith, Elmer Shaffer and Samuel Butler, responded to the cry on one side of the river and Mr. Ernest Townshend, the boy's grandfather, and several others, on the opposite side.

As Mr. Townshend called directions to the boy the men on the side nearest him succeeded in rescuing him, first by attempting to reach him on a board thrown over the intervening space between the broken edges of the ice, and then by tossing a rope to him.

When the little fellow's head began to droop it needed only a call from Mr. Townshend "to hang on and the men would reach him," to bring him erect and redouble the strength of his grip on the ice.

It was at least fifteen minutes from the time of his immersion until he was finally pulled to the shore by a rope. He was immediately taken to Mr. Butler's home and given a vigorous rub-down and later taken to his own home on Water street where he was further eared for. So far no bad after-effects have developed except a slight stiffness in his legs, it was stated.

Oakland High to Play Cumberland Team Tomorrow Night.

Oakland High School basketball team will meet the Green Street Junior High team of Cumberland tomorrow evening at Naylor's Hall in Oakland. The Green Streeters defeated Oakland at Cumberland on Tuesday a week ago 36-26, and the locals will attempt to avenge this defeat. There will be a preliminary game between the sophomore girls and the senior girls of the local high.

Car Is Partially Destroyed

A car, belonging to Albert L. Lee, treasurer, was partially burned on Sunday morning at 11:50 o'clock, at his home on the State road just north of town. The Oakland Fire department responded to the call. The damage was slight, according to report.

"HOW TO SIT TIGHT", A ONE-ACT DRAMA, PLAYED BY THE CHURCH-GOERS OF OAKLAND SUNDAY MORNING

What To Do When One Is Unable To Do Anything, Is Explained By Calm Citizens.

What to do in case of fire in the community when the morning services are being conducted in the local churches, can be told by about four hundred women and men, who were supposedly listening in peacefulness and quietude to the various pastors of Oakland when the fire siren on the city hall gave vent to a weird note last Sunday morning about 11:50 o'clock. (The four hundred is not actual count. Had this been done it probably would have been much less.)

Residents who had left their homes an hour previous with no undue misgivings about the furnace fire, etc., suddenly remembered about the draft which was wide open, about the gas stove allowed to remain burning in the bathroom over which various articles had been hung to dry, about the kitchen range, which might have become overheated, and this anxiety, mingled with wondering where the fire was, if it didn't happen to be in their home, caused more fidgeting in ten minutes than had been experienced during the entire year 1927.

The sound of the sirens on the fire department's trucks dashing northward out Third street relieved the minds of those living in the direction of Liberty street and Oak street, but only served to further agonize those living in the north end of town.

And during all this time the pastors continued elaborating on their various subjects, outwardly unaware of the extreme restlessness of the members of their respective congregations but inwardly knowing and thankfully praising the fact that their better judgment had overcome their anxiety.

The ten minutes' left in the hour of service seemed longer than the period Job's boils lasted and all thoughts of peace and contentment had fled. They busied themselves in imagination and the thoughts of many were far from pleasant or reassuring.

An almost insane desire to make one's exit arose in the minds of the people. One man, having the advantage of occupying a back pew in one of the churches, did make his escape but those waiting for his return were in an uncomfortable state of mind while occupied in gazing at the pew he had deserted.

Came the closing anthem, and one of the members of the choir of a certain church, filled with thoughts of the wide-open draft on the furnace at home, had a solo part. But self-control won the day for the choir members as it did for all the others of the various congregations.

Isn't it awful, though, to be in such a predicament? They say that's what makes one's hair turn gray. If you don't believe it, go to church regularly and it might happen to you some time.

FIRST ROUND OF THE CITY LEAGUE ENDS ON TUESDAY

Catholics Win First Division With No Defeats.

The curtain of the first round of the city basketball league will be drawn on next Tuesday evening when the Presbyterians will meet the high school, and the opening of the second round will get under way the same evening when the Mountain Lake Park team meets the Catholics in the second game of the night's entertainnment.

The Catholics won the first division with four victories and no defeats, with high school in the second place. The Presbyterians broke even with their games, the Lutherans won one of their four games and Mountain Lake lost all four of their engagements.

The Catholics decisively defeated the Lutherans last Thursday night, 38-15, and Mountain Lake was beaten by the High School quint, 15-10. The Catholics seemed to find the basket from all angles of the floor and couldn't be stopped. Douglas Helbig and Nally scored six and five field goals respectively and were the main cogs in the offense. In the Mountain Lake-High School game, Bill McRobie played best for the Park, while Stemple was the leading scorer for the High School.

MARRIAGES DURING WEEK AGAIN LESS THAN NORMAL

Only Fifteen Receive Permits—One Applicant Refused.

Fifteen marriage licenses were issued from the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland during the week ending Tuesday at noon, according to A. G. Ross, deputy clerk in the office. This makes a total of forty-four for the month, which is 23 behind last year's mark for the same period. With only seven days left in January, it seems unlikely that the record will be broken.

Two of the licenses issued were marked "don't publish," and one applicant was refused a license on account of the youthfulness of the would-he contracting parties.

Telephones Increase in Maryland

According to a statement just made by Eugene Bowers, manager, the C. and P. Telephone Company of Baltimore City now serves 194,542 telephones in Maryland, which was an increase of 5,707 during 1927. To make this net gain Mr. Bowers states that the company installed 32,659 and disconnected 26,952 telephones. This means that it was necessary for the company to install more than five telephones to make a net gain of one.

STATE GRANGE WILL HOLD ANNUAL MEET IN OAKLAND

Dates Set For August 14, 15 and 16 At a Special Meeting of The Executive Committee

That the annual meeting of the State Grange of Maryland for 1928 would be held here on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, August 14, 15 and 16, was decided at a special meeting of the executive committee of the organization held at the Rennert Hotel, in Baltimore on Monday, January 16, according to J. L. McGlone, who extended the formal invitation to the committee and also to the members of the Grange at its recent meeting held on the Eastern Shore.

Mr. McGlone, in his invitation, assured the members of the Grange and those of the committee that the citizens of Garrett county were all wishing for an opportunity to entertain the annual meeting and that the business and professional men of Oakland were deeply desirous of being hosts to the men and women who attend the meeting.

The members of the executive committee to whom Mr. McGlone extended the invitation were State Senator A. G. Ensor, master; Mrs. Ensor, Ceres; John Black, former state master; Howard Price, overseer; Mrs. Maude Hudson, secretary; T. Roy Brooks, organizer; Mrs. M. E. Hopkins, D. G. Harry and Homer Remsburg.

Also Presented at Conference.

The invitation was also presented at the County Agents' conference held at College Park on January 17-20. Mr. McGlone told the members at that meeting of the great natural beauties of Garrett county, of the hospitality the grangers would receive here and of the advantages which all would receive by making Oakland the headquarters for the three-day session this year.

Immediately following the State Grange meeting at Easton last fall, when Mr. McGlone first made mention of the fact that Garrett county would be delighted with entertaining the next annual meeting, the Oakland Commercial Club and Mayor Lawrence Fraley both extended written invitations to the executive committee and Senator A. D. Naylor assisted by writing a personal letter to Senator Ensor asking that he use his influence to bring the meeting to Garrett county.

Would Bring Many People Here

The meeting will bring over three hundred people to Oakland for the three-day session, it is estimated, and a committee, appointed by the president of the Oakland Commercial Club, T. A. Gonder, consisting of Howard P. Stuck, C. N. McIntire and George D. Sprague, has made plans to secure accommodations for this number of visitors.

KEYSER'S "NIGHT HAWKS" NEXT FOE OF COLLEGIANS

To Meet At Naylor's Hall, Oakland, Monday Night, at 8:15.

Oakland Collegians will attempt to add to their list of victories on next Monday night, January 30, when they will meet the Keyser Night Hawks, leading amateur team of Keyser, W. Va., at Naylor's Hall, Oakland, at 8:15 o'clock.

Since winning their last home engagement against the Fairmont Y. M. C. A., the local players have been diligent in practice and they are now out to continue their winning streak, according to the manager of the team.

The NightHawks have thus far won nine games and lost four. Their lineup includes Johnny Newhouse, Mahlon Leatherman, Paul Davis, Keeny Davis, Gus J. Daskal and Johnny Hines, who were all former high school stars.

Oakland will use the same line-up as in former games with the possible exception of one man. "Pudge" Parsons may be added to the forward line in place of John Wolf, who has gone to Cumberland.

There will be a preliminary game starting at 7:30, the manager states, between two local teams. Every lover of the sport is asked to come out and support the team. Prices will be 25 and 35 cents.

The regular business meeting of the Oakland Civic Club will be held in the women's waiting room at the Court House on Tuesday afternoon, January 31. Miss Kinniek, grade supervisor, will address the members of the body.

Lesson for January 29

THE GROWING FAME OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 3:7-12; 6:53-56.

GOLDEN TEXT—"The common people heard him gladly."

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Followed by Crowds of People.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Growing Fame of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why the People Followed Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Secret of Jesus' Fame.

I. Jesus Ministering by the Sea (3:7-12).

1. Why He withdrew. It was because of the murderous plotting of the Pharisees against His life. So violent was their hatred against Him that they conspired with the Herodians, whom they regarded as traitors to their nation and country, to put Him to death. Their opposition was aroused when Jesus claimed to have power on earth to forgive sins (2:10). It grew in intensity when He mingled with publicans and sinners (2:16), and was fanned into a violent flame when He set at nought their false interpretations of the Sabbath law (2:23-28). Criticism and harshness causes Jesus today to withdraw from our presence.

2. To whom He ministered (vv. 7,8.)

A great multitude, representing a wide stretch of territory. They came from Jerusalem and Idumaea on the south, from beyond Jordan on the east, and from Tyre and Sidon on the northwest. Jesus was the magnetic attraction—the hero of the hour. The interest of the whole country centered in Him.

3. The result (vv. 9-12).

(1) So great was the pressure that lives seemed endangered by the thronging of the multitudes. Some came out of curiosity "when they heard what great things he did" (v. 8). Others came for physical benefit, to be healed of their diseases. To escape from the throng He ordered the disciples to secure a little boat for Him.

(2) The unclean spirits prostrated themselves before Him (vv. 11, 12)

They confessed Him as the Son of God. They had no doubt about His deity. This testimony He refused to receive because (a) the time for His declaration was not yet ripe. (b) They were not the beings to make Him known. He would not receive tribute from such a source. He would be proclaimed only by those who loved and honored Him.

II. Jesus Ministering at Gennesaret (6:53-56).

1. Jesus recognized (v. 54). The people quickly recognized Him because they had witnessed His mighty works. The feeding of the 5,000 was doubtless still in their minds. Perhaps many of them had witnessed His works in Capernaum and nearby places. They had doubtless heard Him teach also. He was recognized wherever He went. When He rules in the lives of believers today, those who come into touch with them recognize the fact. They take knowledge of them that they have been with Jesus (Acts 4:13).

2. The people ran to see Jesus (v. 55). They did not go about this in a half-hearted way. Those who really come into touch with the Lord Jesus Christ have called forth from them unusual energy. The degree of reality of our contact with Him is expressed by our enthusiasm.

3. They searched the whole region for those in need (v. 55).

Those who were found to be sick and in need were carried in beds to Jesus. Those who have come to know Christ will go about earnestly seeking for the lost to bring them to Christ. It matters not what effort is required.

4. They were made whole by His touch (v. 56). The only touch which is needed for the healing of the human soul is that of faith. When the individual is brought into touch with Him by a vital and living faith, sin is vanquished and sickness and death lose their power.

Honor

Honor is like the eye which cannot suffer the least impurity without damage; it is a precious stone, the price of which is lessened by the least flaw. —Bossuet.

The "Yes" and "No"

You are what you are today because of what you were yesterday. You are the product of the "Yes" that you have said, and the "No."—Margaret Slattery.

Good Christians, Citizens

Stepping Stones

The Library of God

Few, but full of understanding, are the books of the library of God.—Tupper.

As for Beth's Duty—

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

WHEN Beth Raynor set out that June morning to collect the dues of the Private library, of which she was treasurer, she had no idea that she was about to meet the most trying period of her life.

The doctor's wife, Mrs. Penny, had promptly brought out a fat pocketbook and paid her dues, with a cheery laugh about some book that she had recently read, and which she recommended to the pretty young treasurer.

Mrs. Bleak had given Beth a dainty blue check to cover the amount of her dues as a library member, and when she had received the receipt and put it away in her desk, she had returned to her chair and leaned confidentially toward Beth.

"My dear," she began in a low tone, "I understand that you are engaged to marry Donald Blake?"

Beth blushed and admitted that it was true, at the same time remembering that Donald worked in Mr. Bleak's office.

"Of course, that is quite lovely, my dear," said Mrs. Bleak cordially, "but of course you will not be getting married just yet?"

"We did speak of next winter some time," murmured Beth, with a sudden, horrid feeling that Mrs. Bleak did not quite approve of the engagement.

"So soon?" the lady lifted her hands in horror.

"Why not?" asked Beth bluntly.

"My dear," purred Mrs. Bleak, "I was just thinking about what my husband said about Donald's career!"

"What about it?"

"I am really quoting my husband, and he would be very angry with me if he knew that I had told what he confided to me—but I feel that you should know, Beth—it is a woman's duty to make sacrifices, you know!"

"I know," said Beth dully.

"Well, I will be perfectly frank with you, trusting that you will not mention a word to Donald—Azariah told me last night that he was much pleased with Donald's work during the past two years—said that he wanted to advance him to a junior partnership provided Donald can raise the necessary money for investment in the firm—merely a matter of form, you know, my dear!"

"Yes, of course," said Beth calmly.

"You may have heard that Mr. Bleak does not approve of young men marrying when they are too young, or before they are really settled in business, and he went on to say that if Donald really intended to marry very soon, that he would not offer him the partnership but give it to Ferdinand Piper, who, as you know, is a confirmed bachelor!"

Another moment and Beth was out of the house and going down the prim walk, her mind a chaos of doubt.

Why, she had planned to be the greatest help to Donald! Beth was an accomplished housekeeper, and she had always worked at home with her mother in the old-fashioned way. Her father had a very good business that provided a comfortable living for the three of them, and a balance in bank.

That night after she arrived home, Beth talked with her parents. She never told a word of what Mrs. Bleak had said to her, but she suggested that she would like to go to the mountains where her aunt had a summer school, and teach there! And they consented, and when she told Donald the next day, and casually explained that she wanted a change, he, too, cordially agreed with her—and so Beth Raynor went, and left Donald free for his promotion.

Toward the end of September, when the summer school ended, Donald Blake got into his motor car and with a word to Mr. and Mrs. Raynor, started for Beth's mountain retreat.

Beth was walking in the woods, when the trees were flaming with the first frost touch. She had in a way enjoyed the summer, though she had missed her parents, and she had cruelly missed Donald.

Donald had already saved the money for their house, and the first year's living had been planned with the thriftiness which had been a birthright. Had Mrs. Bleak really spoken the truth or was it only a woman's silly gossip?

It was then that Donald Blake appeared and took Beth in his arms. "We want you at home," he told her gravely, and when at last she had taken farewell of her aunt, and they motored down the mountain roads toward home, he told her how he had missed her.

When they reached the town, Donald insisted on driving her through the business center, and suddenly he pointed up to the new tall brick block that had grown during her absence. "My offices are up there," he told her. "During the summer, I decided that I could do better alone, and my office is rushed. Old Bleak was furious—told me I was making the mistake of my life to get married just now, and so—I just went ahead and had our house built according to our plans—" and just then they turned another corner and there was Beth's old home, and next door was the prettiest new bungalow, waiting for the finishing touches and Beth's opinion.

As for Beth's duty—it seems to be entirely in her own home and that of her parents, while young Donald's business is nearly equal to that of Azariah Bleak's!

A WAYSIDE SERMON

Do you merely live IN your community, or do you live FOR it?

JUSTICE—SILENCE—DARKNESS.

The recent kidnapping and murder case in Michigan has elements of unusual interest.

All the other murders of note in recent months have been dealt with in a spectacular and dilatory way. They have been exploited by cheap lawyers, cheap office-holders and cheap newspapers to the point of nausea. They have been fought out according to a professional code that takes more account of the technical rules of the game than of justice. Sentimentalism has been carried to sickening extremes. In the end, the offenders have usually gone free, or gone to prison under conditions that promised early freedom. The victims have been forgotten. Judicial dignity has been flounted. Criminals and attorneys and tabloid newspapers have made our courts a laughing stock at home and objects of scorn abroad.

This Michigan case was handled differently. A sort of Jekyll-Hyde, a church elder and carpenter, pietist and pervert, kidnapped and horribly murdered a little girl and was caught after a quick, effective man-hunt. Here were all the elements for a judicial farce-tragedy of more than usual dimensions. And behold what happened.

In three days from the time of his arrest, that criminal had been arraigned, tried, convicted, sentenced and deposited in prison for life at hard labor. And that really seems to be the end of him. It was done so quickly as to take the public's breath away: First a blaze of excitment and horror, and then silence and darkness.

Perhaps the offender should have been hanged or electrocuted. But there need be no quarrel over that. "Vengeance is mine, I will repay, saith the Lord." Michigan forbids capital punishment. Perhaps Michigan doesn't need it. The essential thing is to get such human beings out of the way. That has been done with admirable dispatch. It is not conceivable that the state which put him away so neatly will ever let him loose again for other crimes to commit.

This is something like the way to deal with such monsters. No fake heroics. No sentimentalism. No jury monkeying. No browbeating of the judges. No delay. No feeding the self-esteem of a half-crazy criminal. Nothing to move other weak heads and rotten hearts to similar crimes. Nothing but swift justice, silence and darkness.

America has been seeking a remedy for violent crime. Perhaps this is it. The formula is recommended to every State and community in the land.

SWANTON.

Miss Margaret Chaney, of Swanton, spent the week-end in Cumberland.

Quite a number of people of this section were present at the serenade given Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lowman, Mrs. Lowman being before her marriage Miss Olive Friend. The festivities took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Friend on Saturday night.

Mr. Leonard Sweitzer, of this place, was a visitor to Oakland Friday.

Mrs. W. T. Warnick, Miss Mollie Friend and Mrs. Carrie Wigfield called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Howell at Stricker one day last week. Mr. Howell has been quite ill for some time.

Mrs. Jerry Sweitzer and sister Miss Mollie Friend spent the week-end at the home of their hrother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alpheus Friend.

Mrs. J. G. Friend and granddaughter Betty Simons spent the week-end in Cumberland.

There will be preaching service in the U. B. church in Swanton at 2:30 Sunday afternoon by the Rev. Sherman Westfall.

SPARKS FROM AN OAKLAND PULPIT

REVERENCE.

Psalm 1:1—Blessed is the man that sitteth not in the seat of the scornful.

As we look about us, the most arresting characteristic of American life today is the spirit of irreverene—irreverence of children for parents; irreverence of parents for children, who indeed are no longer children but "just kids"; irreverence of all for authority, for the church, for the law of the land and the law of God.

Sacred things are treated with a careless familiarity which breeds contempt. The priceless racial heritage of faith, of knowledge, of culture is regarded with a bold flippancy that tramples pearls under foot and turns to rend the Giver of them. Here is a fact to ponder—a portion of the constitutional law of the land furnishes the butt for ninety per cent of the jokes of minstrel end men, vaudeville comedians, Main Street smart Alecks and Mr. Average Citizen.

It is an ominous mood which promises no good for the future of our country. It is the lack of reverence for authority which turns masses of men into lawless mobs which disgrace the name of America, and put us on a level with the lowest savages. It is the lack of reverence for the deep things of God, if it continues unchecked, will cancel all the spiritual gains of the Christian centuries and culminate in a reversion to barbarism and chaos.

Without reverence there can be no true friendship either with man or God. Without reverence, life is a shallow thing. Without reverence, we shall remain forever strangers to all that is finest and best in this world and the world to come.

MANY TO ATTEND BOWLING LEAGUE DINNER TONIGHT

Approximately Sixty-five Will Surround Festive Board.

Approximately sixty-five men of Oakland, representing almost every trade and profession, have expressed their determination to attend the first of a series of banquets for members and friends of the Oakland Bowling League, which will be held tonight at the Manhattan Hotel.

Questions that have arisen in regard to the League will be discussed and settled and talks will be made by interested participants and friends of the league is a part of the program.

Gortner was stopped in their attempt to overcome the league leaders when the Ramblers, the lowest team in the league, won two out of three games from them on Monday night. The Ramblers failed to show up on Tuesday night, however, and the Postoffice won three games from them by reason of their absence and consequent forfeiture of the games.

Knights of Columbus and Merchants maintained their standing by defeating the Rotary Club and Brotherhood, respectively. "Bill" Gibson, member of the Rotary team, rolled the highest individual score of the week—178, and the highest score for three consecutive games—451.

SCHOOL COSTS MOUNTING WITH INCREASED DEMANDS

Main Consideration For Taxpayer Is That He Gets Results For What Is Paid.

In referring recently to the rise in the cost of education, Mr. Franklin E. Rathbun, Superintendent of Education in Garrett county, called attention to the survey being made of Boston schools by the Harvard Graduate School.

The ever increasing cost of educating American youth, so much discussed and questioned today, will continue to rise; but this curve of expenditure will rise even more rapidly unless present uneconomical methods are surveyed and eliminated, indicates the Boston school-study report of Leslie O. Cummings, professor of the graduate school of education of Harvard, prepared at the request of the Boston Finance Commission.

The presentation of Professor Cummings' preliminary study of the Boston school system marks the first outwardly manifest step by the Finance Commission to revise the system in the best interests of education, but co-ordinating it with the resources of the city, and providing a far-reaching plan for the future.

After a consideration of the link between education and industrial leadership, Professor Cummings said: "It depends on what Americans really value. If they value education they will pay for it as they pay for all things which their fathers did not possess.

What Education Produces

'Education produces wealth. It produces the sinews whereby education is extended. Merchants could not market superior materials in increasing quantities except as the general public are educated to higher standards of good taste, appreciation of beauty, and value of true worth as distinguished from what is cheap and tawdry.

"Education must go on. There must be increased attention to it, and consequent expenditures. What has been said does not mean that expenditures should run wild, or that a dollar should not get a dollar's worth of service. The usual experience of school surveys, however, does not justify the expectation that the survey will necessarily reduce the cost of education. But it should be one of the outstanding aims of this survey to indicate how expenditures may be made to greater advantage."

In this preliminary study Professor Cummings recommended that the Finance Commission make a survey, the work to he done by a disinterested professional agency with the co-operation of the school staff. He recommended first a study of the school building situation, in that "it would make for economy of funds and effectiveness of instruction to have the older buildings and the smaller units, which are expensive in upkeep replaced according to a carefully developed plan."

Lower Costs By Standardization

Another study recommended was of standard types of rooms for different types of instruction, to result in reduced costs and better adaptation of buildings for teaching. And still another was one that would result in the closer co-ordination of the business and educational aspects of schools.

In advising a study of the classification of children for instruction, Professor Cummings said:

"This should effect in a tangible way as no other single study the great bulk of school costs. (Approximately 70 per cent of current expenditure is for instruction.) The grading of children, so that teachers are placed in charge of groups with which they can work to the best advantage and children will be in the most favorable conditions for learning, is economy. Failures cost money and are expensive as well because a child trained in failure is not an asset to the community."

As a means of getting the public to face the facts about rising school costs, he made as a fifth recommendation that a study of school costs be made in order to present an adequate statement of the financial situation in standard terminology, especially with reference to municipal finances.

FOREST PICTURES TO BE SHOWN IN HIGH SCHOOLS

Public Is Invited To Attend at The Various Centers

Films obtained from the Maryland Forestry Department by C. Cyril Klein, district forester, entitled "Trees of Righteousness," will be shown by Mr. Klein and A. L. Sines, district warden, of Sines, in the different high schools of Garrett county for the benefit of the students and the public in general, it has been announced.

The schedule will be as follows: Oakland High School, January 30, at 8:00 o'clock p. m.; Kitzmiller High School, January 31, at 8:00 p. m.; Accident High School, February 1, at 8:00 p. m.; Friendsville High School, February 2, at 8:00 p. m.; at Grantsville High School, February 3, at 8:00 p. m.

Everybody is invited to attend these showings and it is hoped that the school buildings will be filled each night of the entertainments.

HUNTING SEASON WILL END TUESDAY EVENING

All Manner of Wild Fowl Go On The Prohibited List That Day

On Tuesday, January 31, one-half hour after sunset the curtain will fall on the hunting of wildfowl in the State of Maryland. It is hoped that every sportsman will, on that evening, hang up the "old musket" and give it a rest until next fall.

The State law which conforms with the Federal law, provides that it shall be unlawful to hunt wildfowl of any species, coots, Gallinules, wilson snipe or jack-snipe in the State of Maryland between January 31 and November 1, both dates exclusive. Hunters are also warned that the possession of carcasses of wild ducks, geese or other migratory game birds in cold storage plants or elsewhere for a period longer than ten days following the close of the open season will subject them not only to State but Federal prosecution. It is hoped by the Conservation Commission that the sportsmen had a most successful hunting season and that the game laws will be observed during the closed season on all game.

It might be of interest for the public in general to know that the Game Department contemplates distributing approximately 14,000 rabbits in the State as well as approximately 6,000 bob-white quail during the next two months. Contracts have been given to the brokers and shipments will begin within the next week or so, and it is for this reason that the department is again soliciting the cooperation of all the sportsmen in all parts of the State in assisting the wardens and department as a whole in protecting the game during the closed season. Much game can be propagated if protected from the hundreds of worthless dogs and house cats allowed to roam at will everywhere. The pot-hunter is becoming a thing of the past since he does not have any friends among the sporting element.

JOHN SPEAKS FOR HIMSELF

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

"MAY I present my son, John Alden Woodward, Miss Trevor? John Alden, this is Constance Trevor of whom I have told you. I am sure you are going to be very good friends."

The elegant Mrs. Woodward smiled complacently upon the young couple before her. Her son, tall and handsome in white flannels; the girl boyishly slender in her riding habit, the little tri-cornered hat fitting snugly over her tawny hair.

Constance Trevor extended her hand. "John Alden Woodward," she repeated and then added mischievously, "Any kin to the John Alden who stole the love of Priscilla away from dear old Miles Standish?"

John Alden Woodward scowled darkly.

"Indeed he is," said Mrs. Woodward hastily and a little proudly. "He is named for the very same John Alden. My ancestors came over in the Mayflower. . . ."

A group of young people came down the veranda and carried Constance off for the afternoon ride. John Alden dropped into a chair facing his mother.

"For the love of Mike, can't you forget that Mayflower stuff, mother? I've been fed on it—brought up on it and I tell you, I'm sick of it! Ever since you came down to school in my freshman year and spilled the beans about your illustrious relatives, the fellows have panned me right. Forget it! What good is it anyway?"

"I should think you would be glad to claim such ancestors, my son. Surely a young man with your education must realize what it means to have forbears such as yours. I would like to blazon the fact from the housetops that my courageous forefathers sailed across the ocean in the search of freedom of worship—I am disappointed, John Alden." Then she changed the subject. "Isn't Constance charming?"

"Didn't notice her—much," he replied, moodily. "I might have if you hadn't made that crack about my name. John Alden was all right—so was all the rest of the crowd maybe, but they lived their lives—let me live mine. Is she going to stay here with her uncle all summer?"

Their genial host, Judge Benjamin Cardiff, joined them. He was giving this house party over the week-end in honor of his niece who had come from the South to spend the summer with him.

"Well, John Alden, all through with the rah-rah stuff and ready to enter the scrap with the world, eh? Law isn't a bad game, either, and I'm qualified to speak after thirty-nine years of it. Hear you are going in with Carter Drummond. You are fortunate. Carter has established a remarkable practice and it is a splendid opportunity for you. He is coming down on the 4:32. Connie asked him when we met him in town yesterday. It will be a pleasure to entertain the partners of the new law firm of Drummond & Woodward."

"If you have not already sent your car I would like to run down to the station and meet him, judge," said John Alden. "Haven't a thing to do. Got here too late to get in on the ride."

Halfway to the station he met the riders returning home. Connie and Billy Harwood were in the lead and she waved her riding crop to him. By Jove, she was attractive—his mother had written about her. Mother was ambitious all right, rather raw the way he had jumped on her about the ancestor stuff, but a fellow gets tired of that bunk—Constance Trevor—darn pretty name—pretty girl, too—how the deuce had old Carter Drummond, handsome, debonair, man-about-town—not a day under forty—the old fossil, ever got in so strong with her—darn nice-looking girl—rolled her r's—

The next time he saw her she was in a daffodil-yellow frock and Carter Drummond, his law partner, was leaning over her. She was laughing up at him. John Alden turned away and tried to be pleasant to little Poppy Langhorne. Then Judge Cardiff touched him on the arm.

"Would it be agreeable for you to take Connie in to dinner, John A.?"

Unfortunately Carter Drummond was at her left and monopolized her unpardonably until John Alden made a desperate resolve.

"I say, Miss Trevor, don't you think you might show me a little attention? Let old Carter there talk to his partner—you talk to me."

Constance Trevor turned to him, laughing.

"Well, you do inherit some of the courage of your Puritan ancestors after all, John Alden. I just thought I didn't exist—for you. You haven't said a nice thing to me since you met me, as Mr. Drummond does."

"Bunk! I mean that ancestor stuff. Forget it! I'm not for it, honest! And you look just like a daffodil in the springtime. How many dances do I get?"

"Well," she drawled. "I think we can manage three—and, of course, there will be some cut-ins. And—honest—I promise—never, never, never to mention the breaking waves and the rock-bound coast and the dear old Miles Standish to you again, unless—for some very good reason."

John Alden Woodward was a frequent guest at Judge Cardiff's home that summer. He danced, swam, rode, motored and golfed with Connie Trevor, but it always seemed that his partner managed to make a three-some of whatever they planned, and Connie generously divided her time between them. Then on a Saturday morning in the fall Drummond came into John's office.

"Will you do me a good turn, old man? I am going to be tied up with the Widow Morganthau all afternoon and have asked Connie for dinner and the theater. I won't have time to go over and get her and was wondering if you wouldn't do it for me. Connie will surely understand. Thanks, old man. By the way, you might plan on being best man in a few months."

"Best man—best m-a-n. I'm deucedly tired of living around at the clubs, and all that. Want a home. Never thought much about getting married until I met Connie."

John Alden sat slumped down behind the wheel of his car, hardly noticing the gorgeous autumnal landscape as he drove to Judge Cardiff's home. What an ass he had been, to be sure—thought all the time that Connie had liked him—had been butting in on her and Carter. Jove, that was a blow—Carter and Connie—his partner and the girl he loved.

Constance was curled up in her uncle's favorite chair before the fireplace reading. John threw off his overcoat and stood gazing at her.

"Oh," she drawled, "I thought it was Carter. Where do you suppose he is?"

"In the city," snapped John Alden. "I am his emissary, sent to take you to the city, that he may dine with you, make love to you, propose to you. I apologize for being such a fool this summer, Miss Trevor. I—I didn't know that I was—a third party."

Constance unwound herself and brought both heels down to the floor with a resounding whack. "Oh-h-h!" she said slowly. "How very interesting. So Carter sent you for me, that he might dine with me, make love to me? Are you very sure that he didn't ask you to propose for him, John?"

"Fortunately—not."

Constance stood up and took both lapels of his coat in her hands. John looked straight over the top of her red-gold hair at the mantel, over which a huge painting of Judge Benjamin Cardiff smiled benignly down upon them.

"Jack," she said softly, "do you remember the story of the courtship of Miles Standish?"

"Lord, yes! What of it?"

"Then—then—why don't you speak for yourself, John Alden?" she whispered and a second later her face was hurled close against his tweed shoulder. "I—I take it back," she laughed. "I didn't mean to call you that. I meant—why don't you ask me to marry you, John, I'm ready. Are you?"

Attics Always Close to Heart of Child

The attic is perhaps the most fascinating room of all. Here is found the answer as to why these little houses of New England have endured. Every one of the great timbers is hand hewn and put together with hand-made wooden pegs—construction such as this defies time and the elements. Before one window is a fine old pine table; there is another Boston rocker; quaint little footstools and a sea chest which has been in the house since one of the first sea captains waved good-by to his family, standing beside the lilacs in the dooryard, and set out, his sea chest going with him, for trade and adventure upon the seven seas.

Still above this old attic clings the faint aroma of apples and herbs which once were hung there to dry. And it holds countless memories of children who have played here on rainy days or on cold days of the New England winter when the drifts were piled high over the picket fence and the surrounding country lay buried beneath a blanket of snow. One can imagine the first children playing at being pilgrims and a later generation at being Indians, after the reality of Indians had lost its terror. But whatever the games they played, they were sure to seek the mysterious attic where there were trunks to rummage in, dusky corners to explore and apples to eat.—Arts and Decorations.

Medical Advice

"Hey, Doc!" called Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, addressing Doctor Slash, who was rushing past in his car. "My boy, Banty, has got something the matter with him. He is aching all the time, and can't stand, set or lay down. I wished you'd stop and sorter look at him!"

"Can't now, Gap!" responded the physician. "I'm sent for to see a gent that has been shot all to pieces by his brother-in-law. Tell Banty to climb a tree and hang on till I come back. Hi-ou, Flivver!"—Kansas City Times.

Noise

There is a class of men that gets along fairly well for years by making an impression upon the impressionable, whose sole stock in trade is noise. They do not last forever, but some of them last an astonishingly long time. Like toy balloons, these wind-inflated beings make a gaudy appearance for a while, but in time collapse. When the balloon comes down, a child somewhere is made unhappy, but when the public career of an inflated man ends suddenly nobody but himself is even aware of it.—Muncie Evening Post.

It Was the Last Stitch

By ROSE MEREDITH

(Copyright.)

ROSE CLEMENS sounds like the name of a pretty young girl. And indeed when Rose was a little younger, she was prettier than most of them. Today, Rose Clemens, not so young and pretty, sat and sewed all day long. She only stopped for a cup of tea and a bit to eat, or to let some customer of the village who wanted a new pattern, for Rose was the only dressmaker in the village and busy from morning until night.

She lived all alone in the cottage because all her family had either married or moved to other houses, or, as in the case of her parents, had died. So Rose Clemens lived all alone in the small white house, no longer young, and yet not old.

This afternoon she was sewing, as usual—making a new silk dress for Mrs. Cheeseman, who lived up on the hill in the large white house. Mrs. Cheeseman was very gracious and always most considerate of Rose Clemens. "You know we are expecting the new minister tonight," she said, just before she left. "My husband has invited him to stay a few days with us, until the manse is quite ready. He seems to be such a splendid man—I am hoping that he will fall in love with one of our girls and marry. A wife is such a great help to a minister, I believe." And Mrs. Cheeseman had hurried out to her car and the very smart chauffeur had driven away with a great air, and Rose Clemens had settled down to her sewing again. She wondered rather casually about the new minister, whom she had not as yet seen. He had preached twice at the church, but it was during the month she had been in the city sewing for Mrs. Cheeseman, so all she knew about him was that he was evidently very popular with everybody, and that his name was John Harry Jones.

As that happened to be the name of the only man Rose Clemens had ever wanted to marry, and had refused because he had been so wild and reckless, she was rather curious to see him. Of course her Harry Jones had gone to the dogs long ago—at least, people who claimed to know the Jones family after they had removed from the village always said so.

The very first Sunday that the new minister preached, Rose Clemens, in a soft blue dress and hat, with a lovely pink rose at her breast, came softly up the aisle to her pew, her new little patent leather slippers shining bravely under her short skirt.

Perhaps Rose had been thinking about the poor black sheep—Harry Jones, whom she had loved so long ago, and when she sat there with closed eyes, while the organ softly played the prelude, she was praying for that poor lost Jones boy who had flung away so recklessly when she told him that she did not love him!

Then the organ boomed out triumphantly and Rose lifted her head to see a tall man ascending the steps to the pulpit. He stood there for a moment, looking at them with such a warmth of feeling in his fine face, before he spoke a word.

It was a long service—a glorious service—and, when it was over, Rose Clemens hastened down the aisle and out of the door and into her small house a little way down the street. When she got there, she went upstairs to her own room, and took off her blue hat and knelt down and prayed a thanksgiving for the safe return of Harry Jones!

Then she went downstairs and made her preparations for dinner. Suddenly she noticed a group of women and girls pausing before her gate, while the tall minister broke away from them, with some pleasant word, and came around to her side door! Not to the front door—that would be too formal for her old friend, Harry Jones.

He rapped at the screen door and then opened it and came right in. "I haven't forgotten old tricks, Rose," he told her, and there was an eager look in his eyes as she gave him both her hands.

"Harry Jones," she said with tears in her lovely long-lashed eyes, "you have made me so happy—to come back to us this way!"

"I am glad, Rose," he said simply. "Am I too late?" he asked.

"No—dinner will be ready in five minutes, and—"

"Dinner?" interrupted the minister, placing his hat on a small table. "Rose Clemens, there is an important question that must be settled before either one of us eats today."

"Yes?" trembled Rose.

"I told in my sermon just how I went away, a reckless, foolish young man, but I did not tell them, of course, that it was the contempt of the only girl I had ever loved that sent me away! I went to the city and got a real job, and when my people came later on, I lived with them, went to night school, then to college, and, finally, to divinity school. This is my first parish. And the very first thing that I do, now that my first day here is passing, is to come to the only girl that I ever loved in all the world and ask her if she can learn to love me now!"

"Oh, Harry—Harry," she whispered, coming to him and grasping his coat lapels. "If you only knew the days—the years when I missed you—when I longed for you!"

SENECA TRAIL LEGEND IS REVIVED BY W. VA. WRITER

The Story of Last Indians Seen in Cheat River Country.

The following story of the Seneca Trail is by C. W. Walden and appeared in a recent issue of the Randolph Enterprise, published at Elkins, W. Va.:

"About twentyt-five years or more ago I chanced to become acquainted with an elderly gentleman, who if still living would be more than ninety years old, who related to me this rather weird story It may sound questionable at first, but I recall another by a much younger man which is sufficient to justify its truth.

"Again, since my narrator was a member of one of Randolph county's most illustrious pioneer families I cannot doubt its truth.

"It was our custom to go back into the then unclaimed forest lands and make maple sugar.

"Our camp was located near the top of Cheat Mountain, overlooking the valley and near to an old Indian trail which crossed somewhere between Beverly and Valley Bend westward toward the Ohio River country.

"One evening my older brother and I were left in charge of the camp, and he announced that he would have to go home to take a load of sugar cakes and bring up provisions.

"I being then but a small boy, he carried a large pile of wood into the camp and cautioned me to keep a good fire going and not leave the shelter of the sugar shed, as panthers were numerous and sometimes dangerous, especially at night.

"Just before sunset, after again cautioning me not to leave the shed, he departed.

"I felt somewhat afraid, but after a time my courage returned and I kept the sugar kettles boiling at a great rate.

"Drowsiness overcame my vigilance and under the influence of the bright wood fire I feel asleep.

"I do not know how long I slept, but awoke to find my fire burning low and a bright moon shining.

"I thought I heard voices. Thinking my brother was coming accompanied by some one I stepped out of the fire light to see who it was.

"I could see no one, but it sounded like someone singing in a low melancholy tone. Still waiting and listening the voices seemed nearer, and at last forms appeared winding up the trail from the valley.

"Finally I could see a stalwart form blanketed and with headgear of eagle feathers, closely followed by others. I could not tell how many but judged there were not more than seven or eight.

"They came up on the trail chanting mournfully. Fear took hold of me again and I hid myself in the bushes where I could see the trail at the point it topped the mountains.

"Reaching the summit, the Indians stopped and facing the trail whence they had come, chanted mournfully for several minutes and facing about with bowed heads passed out of sight down the westward trail.

WILL DURHAM'S face lit up as he recognized the familiar, unknown handwriting on the envelope in his hand. Dropping into a chair on the deep comfortable porch of the Westway club Durham ripped open the flap and hastily scanned the contents. It was much like the others he had received from the same person, whoever she might be.

"Dear Mr. Durham:

"Here I come on my daily visit. I like to be there to welcome you to your club in the evenings because I feel that it is then that a man without a home is the loneliest.

"I saw you yesterday, standing on the corner of Eighth and Market, and it seemed to me that you were looking well. I believe your business projects are being crowned with success. There was an alertness in the expression of your eye that made me glad all over. You seemed full of the zest of life from the tip of your well-shod feet right up to the crown of your well-groomed head. You reeked of success! Am I right? Aren't things going better at the office and aren't you happier than you have been in ages? Now, tell me, isn't it true?

"Each day I think of you with such sympathy and interest and when I see you and you look happy I am happy for a long time afterward. Sometimes, when I see you I long to put out a hand and give you a little friendly pat and tell you that I know everything will be all right in the end and that I believe in your innocence. I long to do lots of things just to comfort you. I long to let you know who I am, but I'm afraid you might think I was flirting with you when I really am not. That is the only horrid thing about good-looking eligible men; they can't help thinking girls are flirting with them.

That was all. No signature. No date. No address.

Certainly one who was intelligent and observant, else how could she tell by his face that things were going better at the office? Yet, she was exactly right. What a dear little heart she must have to write such letters. What did she look like, he wondered, and how old was she and would she, could she ever learn to love him after his having been implicated in the Baker Brothers' disgrace? Innocent though he was there had been many who had suspected him of being guilty. There had been the disgrace of the long grilling trial, and that the whole thing had injured his business reputation he realized only too fully.

He sat on in the falling darkness smoking and thinking, but his thoughts traveled over the same route and came to the same conclusion which was really no conclusion at all.

The following week brought more letters as puzzling as ever. At last, because he felt that he had to talk of it to some one he took his private secretary into his confidence and told her about it. He tried to make his voice sound casual, but he betrayed his eager interest by the nervous way he toyed with the things on his desk.

"It's terribly interesting," said little Miss Harmon, when he had finished. "Sort of a Cinderella affair, only it's letters instead of a slipper."

"Exactly," he answered warmly. "If I could only find her! How would you go about it? I haven't done a thing because I couldn't think of a thing to do."

"You might not like her if you met her," said Betty Harmon thoughtfully, glancing at him with soft brown eyes.

"I would. I know I would!" he answered fervently. "She's a little saint. I don't care if she's as ugly as mud. She has a heart of gold and that's what makes life worth living. . . . I know you think I'm a fool to talk like that," he apologized hastily.

"I do not!" said Betty emphatically.

He left the office early that afternoon and went out to the club to play golf. Betty received several telephone calls for him after he went away and as usual left notes about them on his desk so that he would be sure to see them in the morning as soon as he came down. Something that he had forgotten made him return to the office that evening and a few moments later he was rushing up the front steps of the Harmon home.

"What's the matter?" asked Betty, leaving her seat in the porch swing and going to meet him.

Without a word he swept her into his arms, and she felt him kissing her hair.

"How blind I've been! Why didn't I think of it sooner?" he laughed happily. "My little Cinderella. . . . When I saw those notes on my desk written in the familiar backhand that has haunted me for weeks. . . . What a clever little way you had of telling me."

"I thought that was a good way to break the news gently, but it doesn't look a bit like my every-day writing, does it?" she laughed up at him.

"Not a bit . . . but no wonder you knew when my business was going better," he said.

"It didn't take much guessing," she confessed, "when I kept the books myself, but I thought that would throw you off the track."

"It certainly did!" he agreed happily; "but you'll never fool me again!"

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Scoop wishes to announce that this is still a joke column as it was last week.

They Live Longer With Frozen Feet.

Freeze your feet and live longer, is the moral that might be drawn from the article, "1846 Was the Winter of the Deep Snow," which appeared in The Republican last Thursday. After freezing his feet, the article related, they gave him trouble as late as 1873, and he had them amputated. "He became weaker after the operation and died in 1959."

It Won't Be Long Now.

The daily papers carried a story on Monday that an amplifier had been perfected so that a voice could be heard for more than a mile. That being the case, Jiggs will never be able to get out of the range of Maggie's voice after this.

Oakland's Lilliputians.

The comment made upon the performance of the Oakland orchestra at the play, "See You Later," which appeared last Thursday in the Mountain Democrat, is indeed enlightening. Here it is:

"The music between the acts was furnished by the newly organized Oakland Band, under the direction of Mr. R. R. Gilbert. The little members of this band acquitted themselves in fine style and many compliments were heard about the wonderful progress they have made."

To the members of the Orchestra, Mr. Gilbert, rather small in stature, but making up for it in musical talent and brains; Tom Compton, veteran drummer of Oakland bands since time immemorial; Julius Littman, six feet and then some, who has tickled the ivories with perfection for several years; Russell Brown, seven feet, nine inches, who blows one of the meanest horns in the neighborhood, it must indeed be encouraging to them.

Tom Compton is the only little member of the bunch, but then it is not his fault. He had plenty of time to sprout upward but ruined his opportunity by remaining small too long. And then, too, his maternal ancestor was a member of the Little family.

* * *

Director Gilbert, don't let this keep you from practicing regularly with your boys band composed of Oakland lads ranging in ages from nine years to eighteen years. It wasn't the boys fault that the praise was misplaced. The music that night was certainly "the berries."

And still we continue to say that Scoop writes a column for fun and amusement and as a part of his day's work. Editors and managers especially, please note.

RECEIVER OFF HOOK SHUTS TELEPHONE DOOR

Failure to "Hang Up" at Close of Conversation Prevents All Inward Service

Leaving the telephone "off hook" is a sure way of shutting off telephone calls. When one's telephone is left off the hook, not only are all inward calls to that telephone interrupted, but if it is a party line, it is impossible for the operators to ring any other telephone on the line as long as the receiver is off the hook.

In Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, and the District of Columbia, the territory served by the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Companies, 51,000 "off hook" cases were found by repairmen during 1927, according to telephone officials.

"Off hook" cases are due to a number of reasons, but one of the leading causes is extension telephones. The telephone in a certain part of the house may be answered and the party wanted may be in another location. The party first answering leaves the receiver off until the person wanted answers on the extension station and in many instances fails to replace the receiver on the hook. When the conversation is concluded, the party who talked, of course, hangs up the telephone, thinking that the other telephone has also been replaced. Such, however, is not always the case, as telephone repairmen have frequently found.

FEDERAL MEN GET STILL AT MT. LAKE ON TUESDAY

Sheriff Casteel, Who Assisted in Raid, Says Outfit Was a Most Complete and Costly One

One of the most completely equipped and costly stills ever to be captured in Garrett county, according to Sheriff William D. Casteel, with 28 barrels of mash and 100 gallons of moonshine liquor, was that uncovered and destroyed by a Federal Prohibition officer, assisted by Sheriff Casteel, at Mountain Lake Park on Tuesday afternoon.

The still was located one block below the new auditorium on II street in a house owned by Mrs. Isabel Hill, of Washington, D. C., and which has been occupied for the past three months or more by Peter Davis, a Grecian, aged 38 years.

The still was located in a front bedroom on the upper floor while the mash and manufactured product was scattered about through various other portions of the building. The still was operated by gas.

Upon the appearance of the officers, Davis, who was in the rear of the house shooting at a target, immediately abandoned the sport and beat it for the building. He entered a step ahead of the officers, shut and locked the door and took refuge in the attic. The officers, after they had gained access, spent some time in locating their quarry, but they were eventually successful and after a parley Davis appeared and surrendered.

Immediately following his arrest on the dual charge of manufacturing and having intoxicating liquor in his possession for the purpose of sale, he was brought to Oakland and given a preliminary hearing before Justice W. A. Gonder, who fixed his bond at $700 for his appearance at the June Term of the Circuit Court. In default of bail, Davis was remanded to jail.

The officers, before bringing their prisoner to Oakland, destroyed the still, mash and the manufactured product.

The house was rented from Mrs. Hill by a man giving his name az George Stevens, of Fairmont, West Va., and according to residents of the Park, the lessee said he wanted it as a home for his wife, who was said to have suffered a nervous breakdown and required the mountain air to restore her health.

There was nothing, according to the Park people, that would indicate that a still was in operation on the premises at any time prior to the arrival and raid made by the officers on Tuesday.

Fellow Moonshiners Flee After Visit.

From information obtained by the officers from Davis following his arrest, a visitor was expected by him on Tuesday night from Fairmont, W. Va., and while the authorities were keeping watch on railroad trains two young men, supposed to belong to the moonshine group responsible for the still destroyed during the day, drove up to the Hill house, arriving there at nine o'clock. Before investigating at the dwelling they unloaded 700 pounds of sugar from their car and stored it in the garage on the property and then entered the house. They were undoubtedly surprised, for appearances indicated that the vicinity was an unhealthy one for anyone not engaged in legitimate trade and they left, not standing upon the manner of their departure. They vanished in the night, leaving no clue as to their identity or their destination.

Officers were informed that the two strangers were there, but when they arrived upon the scene they had left. The sugar which they had deposited in the garage was confiscated and was also destroyed.

The still was one of fifty-gallon capacity and indications, according to the officers, was that it had been in use about three months.

Julius Jorden Also Arrested

Julius Jorden, of near Rosedale, living along the Cherry Creek road, was placed under arrest Tuesday night on a charge of manufacturing liquor. A nntity of mash, estimated at fifteen ons, was found, along with a half lon of moonshine liquor on his mises. He was brought to the land Jail by the Federal agents Sheriff W. D. Casteel, who had le the raid. No date for his hear- has yet been set.

r. W. W. Grant, who has been con- l to his bed for the pnst two or e weeks by Illness, is somewhat roved at this time. Dr. Fred Wil- is, of Cumberland, who is Mrs. nt's hrother, visited his sick rela- on Sunday.

BOWLING DINNER ENJOYED BY MORE THAN 50 PERSONS

Business and Pleasure was Combined at Banquet Thursday

More than fifty members and friends of the Oakland Bowling League were gathered last Thursday night in the first of a series of banquets, which was held at the Manhattan Hotel on Second street. Short addresses were made by Mr. Joseph E. Harned and Rev. Charles A. Shilke, and the Oakland Quartet rendered several selections. Walter W. Dawson was the toastmaster and as usual he was in good spirits and everything went off with a bang.

Both the address of Mr. Harned and Rev. Shilke pointed out the advantages derived by bringing together for fellowship so many persons of various professions and trades and the hope that the league would continue to grow was expressed by each of the speakers.

In the business session of the banquet it was decided to merge the Lutheran and Brotherhood teams and the Ramblers and Printers teams. It was also decided to allow but 70 pins for an absentee hereafter instead of 90 pins, and any player being absent three times in succession without just cause, should be automatically dropped from the team of which he is a member.

In the second round of the League, which started Monday night, the Postoffice defeated the Merchants in three games; Methodists defeated Presbyterians in three games and the Rotarians defeated Crellin two out of three contests.

Dan Spiker was high scorer for the week with 162 pins for one game and 411 pins for three games.

Tonight Gortner and the Ramblers will meet and the Merchants will battle with the Methodists. On Friday night the postponed game between the K. of C. and the Lutherans will be played.

Benefit Picture Tonight at The Maryland Theatre.

Tonight will be the last opportunity to see "Firemen, Save My Child," and incidnetally aid the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department, for whose benefit the picture is being given at the Maryland Theatre. Last night the attraction was seen by a goodly sized audience and tonight the number to witness it is expected to be as large or larger.

Raymond Hatton and Wallace Beery are the two stars who are appearing in this attraction, and according to people who attended last night, one may rest assured of many laughs in store, for that is usually the result when one sees these two actors together.

A poster, advertising this event, says that "The firemen will help you if the necessity arises. Won't you help them by seeing 'Firemen, Save My Child?'" Admission is 25 and 50 cents.

Engagement of Miss West Announced at Bridge Club Dinner

A daughter of the woman attempted to extinguish the flames and was nlso burned. The aged woman was the grandmother of Mrs. Charles Riley, of Onkland. Funeral services were conducted at Weston on Tuesday morning nt nine o'clock, which were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Riley.

Dairy President Postpones Trip To Oakland.

On account of the severe snowstorm which covered the eastern portion of the State on Sunday and Monday, and which, however, did not reach storm proportions in this section of the country, Henry Brawner, president of the Chestnut Hills Farms of Washington, D. C., who was to have been in Oakland on Monday, accompanied by J. P. Dugan, of the Baltimore and Ohio Rnilway baggage department, has postponed the trip until a future date, it was announced by County Agent J. L. McGlone, on Monday.

The purpose of the dairy head was to select a site for the proposed milk shipping station, which is expected to be located in Oakland.

Grangers Enthusiastic.

At a meeting of the Loch Lynn and Ryan's Glade Grangers on Saturday morning, much enthusiasm was manifested in the interest of the proposed plant, and they are going to confer further with County Agent McGlone at a meeting to be held in the near future.

The Pleasant Valley Grange is to hold a meeting tonight to discuss the same subject and Mr. McGlone will be present to answer any questions and help discuss the problem.

HEARING GIVEN ALLEGED POBBER ON TWO CHARGES

James Rhodes Being Held for June Grand Jury

James Rhodes, 25 years old, of near Westernport, but residing in Garrett county, who has been held in jail here on a bad check charge for the action of the grand jury in default of $500 bond, had a hearing last Thursday afternoon on a second charge, that of robbing Henry Wertz, a resident of Grantsville district, from whom the prisoner is alleged to have stolen $64 in cash when he visited Wertz's home a short time ago. Wertz is a bachelor and resides alone along the National Highway just west of Grantsville. Mr. Wertz was here at the preliminary hearing and identified the prisoner as being the man who relieved him of his money.

The hearing took place before Justice West who remanded Rhodes to jail for the action of the June term grand jury in default of bond in the sum of $500 for his appearance at court.

Arrested on Assault Charge.

Artie Kelly, about 25 years of age, of White Rock, near Sang Run, was arrested early this week on a charge of assault preferred by Rancelor Sisler. Kelly was given a hearing before Justice West. Kelly appealed the case and was required to furnish bond in the sum of $500 for his appearance.

PLAN SPECIAL PROGRAM FOR PYTHIAN MEETING

Committee Chairman To Call On Houdini's Successor.

A select program, in which Houdini's successor in the world of magic will participate, a short talk by some prominent local man and the Flat Iron quartet, will be the features of the weekly meeting of the Knights of Pythis lodge at the lodge room in Oakland tomorrow night.

The names of those who are to participate in the program are being kept as a secret, it was stated by Reese Friend, chairman of the program committee, this morning, but the successor of Houdini certainly "knows his stuff," said Mr. Friend. Refreshments will be served and all members of the lodge who can are urged to attend.

The rank of Knight was conferred on the class of candidates at the last meeting on Friday night.

The weekly award, given by the E. S. Evans garage, was a set of tire chains and was awarded to Paul Riley.

Miss June Dunnington Married.

Word has been received in Oakland of the wedding of William Grimes, an attorney of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Miss June Dunnington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Dunnington, of Mountain Lake Park and Washington, D. C., the ceremony having been performed in Washington on Friday of last week. The bride is well known in Oakland and Mountain Lake Park, making her home in the latter place during the summer nnd fall months. The groom is a brother of Mr. Jack Grimes, of Keyser, West Va., who also has a summer home in the Park. No nnnouncement has been made as to where the couple will reside, but presumably in Pittsburgh where Mr. Grimes is engaged In the practice of his profession.

Six Weeks of Winter Weather

For one day a year and one day only the lowly groundhog has his day, and that is today, February 2. Upon this day he comes forth from his hibernal shelter in quest of the omen, according to tradition, which foretells the number of wintry weeks remaining before warm weather makes its appearance.

If such be the case there can be no doubt in any minds in Garrett county that there will be six weeks more of bad weather, for the wily woodchuck, whose ability as a weather prognosticator is sworn at and by, saw his shadow long before many people of this county were up and doing, nnd has scurried back to his underground habitat for another six weeks and Garrett countians will have more wintry weather.

Should the day have been cloudy, however, the groundhog would not have seen his shadow and winter would have been at an end. But who cares about that? It's only six more weeks, anyway, so why worry?

HAS BLIND EYE KNOCKED OUT MONDAY MORNING

Door at Barn Blowing Shut Painfully Injures Josiah G. Friend

Josiah G. Friend, of Swanton, had his right eye (already blinded) painfully injured Monday morning, rupturing the optic so badly that it was reduced to a semi-liquid, which ran to the ground.

Mr. Friend was leaving his barn after having fed his horses and cattle and the wind blew the upper half of a door to, the corner of which struck him in the eye.

Several years ago Mr. Friend lost the sight of the eye when a piece of steel punctured it. He was given surgical attention by Dr. Broadwater at his office in Oakland, Mr. Friend coming to town immediately following the accident.

AURORA CELEBRATES 100th ANNIVERSARY ON FRIDAY

Program of Talks Given Following Community "Feast."

Aurora, a village located ten miles south of Oakland on the Northwestern Turnpike, and over in Preston county, West Va., celebrated its one hundredth anniversary on Friday with a community dinner attended by over 150 persons, with a program of address and music at the high school auditorium immediately following. In 1828 the village of Carmel was founded and by a succession of changes of name it finally became Aurora.

A birthday cake was cut at the dinner in honor of the Rev. Martin Luther Peters, of Smithfield, Pa., who was one of the principal speakers, and also in honor of Horace Stemple, a resident of the village.

Addresses at the high school auditorium were made by Earl Fike, Rev. Mr. Peters, formerly pastor of the E. L. Allen, Minter L. Wilson and C. R. Boyles, of Morgantown, West Va.

Mr. eters, formerly pastor of the church at Aurora, is writing a history of the community. The Philamathean Literary Society presented a pageant showing the manner the original settlers met at Carmel and made the necessary arrangements to incorporate the village.

Among the relics, old documents and other interesting items of the early history of the community displayed were:

A German testament brought to this country in 1822.

Candle moulds belonging to N. E. Roth.

A Dutch oven made in Wheeling, W. Va., belonging to Luther Stemple; also a griddle one hundred years old.

A sugar howl belonging to Mrs. C. N. Mnson, which she has had 57 years and which was given to her by her grandmother.

SEVERELY BURNED WHEN GAS IGNITES CLOTHING

Mrs. Alvin Gortner Suffering as Result of Accident Saturday.

Mrs. Alva G. Gortner sustained very painful burns Saturday morning about 11 o'clock when her clothing became ignited from an open gas stove in a room at her home on Second street. Mrs. Gortner was leaning on a table at the time and the flames flaring out caught her skirt. Feeling the heat, she moved away from the fire and a few seconds afterward discovered that her clothing was in flames. She managed to tear the dress from her body, which prevented her face and neck from being burned.

Dr. M. C. Hinebaugh was immediately called and dressed her injuries, which are now healing satisfactorily. She is, however, suffering greatly from nervous shock and she is unable to rest comfortably.

Her husband, who was at home at the time of the occurrence, was painfully though not seriously burned on his hands in attempting to assist Mrs. Gortner while her clothing was still ignited.

TO PRINT SERIES OF PAGE ADS ON COMMUNITY LIFE

The Republican, Each Month, To Print Page Authorized by The Business Men of Oakland.

For the purpose of selling Oakland to Oakland, Oakland to the community and every community in Garrett county to itself, the first of a series of advertisements to run over a period of twelve months, and authorized by a number of Oakland's business and professional men, will be seen on page three of The Republican today.

These advertisement, which will be printed each month, ask that when one needs anything that he first try to buy at home. They envelop the spirit of working with and for one another and for cooperation, the vital force in the development of any community.

According to an authority on the subject, every time anyone spends a dollar in this community, for any purpose whatever, that dollar goes straight and true as an arrow toward helping to make this a better place in which to live.

That dollar helps to build new homes, better roads, new schools, more churches. It makes possible the construction, the maintenance and the enjoyment of added comforts and conveniences for all of the people of the community.

The advertisements, as they appear, envelop the following ideas: The commendable spirit of working with and for one another, making one's word his bond among his fellow-townsmen, making Oakland and the communities of Garrett county smile centers, building of good will from the very foundation, the value of youth approaching the business age, the value of trying to get it at home first, the assets of the communities in the number of local business activities, making the place we call our home a better place in which to live, and showing the hospitality of Oakland and vicinity.

A decision will probably be made in a few days.

MABEL SWANN WILL GET PAROLE FOR OPERATION

Slayer of Daniel Mosser Will Be Returned to Penal Institution When Health Permits

Because a prompt operation is the only measure to save the life of Miss Mabel Swann, serving a three-year term in the Maryland House of Correction, for tthe killing of Daniel Mosser, of Keyser, West Va., near Swanton, Garrett county, last May, Governor Ritchie announced on Tuesday that he would grant her a temporary parole.

Miss Swann, according to physicians who attended her while she was a prisoner in the Garrett County Jail awaiting trial, is suffering from a goitre growth. The local physicians' diagnosis has been borne out by the opininon of the House of Correction medical men who reported to the executive department and because there are no facilities at the penal institution for the performance of the necessary operation, the governor agreed to parole her until she had recovered.

The matter of releasing the woman has met with the approval of State's Attorney Huster, of Allegany county, who prosecuted the case, and State's Attorney Renninger, of Garrett county, prosecutor in the county where the slaying took place.

Woman Made a Plea of Self Defense.

Miss Swann was convicted of having shot and killed Mosser when the man was said to have attempted to break into her home, which was the farmhouse on the Mosser place jointly owned by Daniel Mosser and other heirs and which was leased to Miss Swann. At the trial she entered a plea of self-defense, but a jury found her guilty of second degree murder on October 31, 1927, when she was sentenced to the House of Correction for three years' imprisonment.

The woman will be paroled in the custody of her mother, and will not be forced to return to serve out her sentence until her health has sufficiently improved following the operation, it was announced at the office of the Maryland Governor.

Trial Occurred in Cumberland.

Miss Swann was tried and convicted during the October term of Allegany County Circuit Court. Her case was moved from this county when the contention was entered that she would not get a fair trial in Garrett county.

At the time she was sentenced to three years' imprisonment the Court's attention was called to the fact that she was suffering from goitre, but it was pointed out that, if necessary, provision could be made for her to undergo an operation after she began serving her term.

Huster Made No Recommendation

State's Attorney Huster of Allegany county, when notified by Governor Ritchie of the contemplated parole of Miss Swann informed the Governor that he believed the lightness of the woman's sentence was due to her physical condition. Mr. Huster told the Governor also, it is said, that he had no objection to Miss Swann being released to undergo an operation and then being returned to the House of Correction. However, he pointed out that as the case originated in Garrett county he did not feel that he should make any recommendation in the matter and that it should be referred to State's Attorney Renninger of Oakland.

When the matter was referred to State's Attorney Renninger by the Goveror he told the executive that he saw no objection in granting a temporary parole to Miss Swann to allow her to enter a hospital for the operation, but it was understood that the parole was only a temporary one, and that she had to be returned to the House of Correction after she had undergone the operation and regained her strength.

Small Number See Forest Pictures at High School

Only a small number of persons were at the local High School building on Monday night to witness the films obttained from the Forestry Department and exhibit there by C. Cyril Klein, district forester, and A. L. Sines, district warden, of Sines. The films presented a story showing the destructiveness of burning forests to get good grass lands, which resulted in being poorer grnss lands than before the operntion. The same pictures were shown in Kitzmiller, Accident, Friendsville nnd Grantsville High Schools on successive days.

Lesson for February 5

JESUS MISUNDERSTOOD AND OPPOSED.

LESSON TEXT—Mark 3:19-35; 6:1-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—He came unto his own and his own received him not, but as many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Friends Misunderstand Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Friends Misunderstand Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Facing Unavoidable Opposition.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Misunderstood Jesus.

I. Jesus Misunderstood by His Friends (3:19-21).

1. The occasion (vv. 19, 20).

A series of important events in the ministry of Jesus had followed each other in rapid succession. The twelve had been chosen, and He with His disciples had just returned from a trip of preaching and healing in Galilee. Such great interest was aroused that though Jesus was weary and hungry He did not have time to eat.

2. What His friends purposed to do (v. 21). They went out to lay hold on Him. They saw Him giving Himself with absolute abandon to His work so they attempted to rescue Him forcibly by taking Him from His work.

3. What they said (v. 21). "He is beside himself." His passionate devotion to saving the lost seemed to them a kind of insanity.

II. Jesus Opposed by the Scribes (vv. 22-30).

1. Their charge (v. 22). They charged Him with casting out demons by Beelzebub. According to Matthew 12:22-24, the Pharisees joined the scribes in this charge. The occasion which provoked the charge was the healing of a man possessed with a demon. Unable to explain His unwearying service for needy men by attributing His zeal to religious frenzy, they accused Him of being in league with the devil.

2. Christ's reply (vv. 23-27). He exposed their folly by a question and by parables.

(1) "How can Satan cast out Satan?" If after Satan gets control of a man he should voluntarily relinquish that hold he would thus become his own enemy. In view of the nature of the devil, this is unthinkable.

(2) "If a kingdom be divided against itself that kingdom cannot stand (v. 24). Civil war is national suicide. A living example of this folly is seen in China today.

(3) If a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand (v. 25). House here means family. The family that wars against itself will surely perish.

(4) No man can enter into a strong man's house and spoil his goods except he first bind the strong man (v. 27). Satan here is the strong man, the house is the world, the goods of the house are the human beings whose welfare and happiness Satan is seeking to destroy.

3. Christ's charge (vv. 28-30).

Since He was doing the works of God (for before their very eyes He had driven the demon from the man), He was undoing the works of the devil. He went about doing good. Wherever He went men were blessed. The eyes of the blind were opened, deaf ears were unstopped, the lame were made to walk and the dead were raised. Having with unanswerable logic met their accusations He charged home upon them most awful guilt, that of blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost is attributing the works of the Spirit to the devil. For this great sin there is no pardon.

III. Jesus Misunderstood by His Family (vv. 31-35).

His brothers and mother came with the object of getting Him home because they thought He had lost His reason. Of course His brothers did not believe on Him as the Messiah, but their filial interest moved them to try to get Him home. No doubt this was most painful to Jesus. Their motive may have been right, but they were used of the devil to hinder Him.

IV. Jesus Misunderstood by His Fellow Townsmen (6:1-6).

The citizens of Nazareth were unable to question the reality of Christ's work and the power of His words, but because He was one of them they were offended at Him. This is a marvelous example of the blighting effects of prejudice. Because of this attitude of soul on the part of the people His wonder working was very limited among them. And He marveled because of their unbelief.

Vanity

Vanity of vanities saith the preacher; all is vanity. And moreover, because the preacher was wise, he still taught the people knowledge; yea, he gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.—Ecclesiastes 12:8-9.

Life

Life is not a man's personal property, it is a loan from the Almighty for which he is responsible.—F. B. Meyer.

The Means at Hand

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

IN A far-off province of India where men have time and are trained to think of possible villainy, Frank Lamson gave himself to evil thoughts. In this little hut on the frontier he was removed from the things he loved, from the men and women he called his kind, and from all examples for good.

Here he was on the borderland, face to face with the shadows and mysteries. He could not trust his own servant and he knew the very air to be filled with danger. So he played with his paperweight, turning it over and over, and made plans for revenging himself upon a woman.

He had loved her once and always would. Now that he was gone it was easy to make himself believe that had he stayed in England she would have learned to care for him. There came the chance for a career, the opportunity for fame and the return in splendor. With her refusal in his ears and desperation in his heart he had set out, not knowing or caring for the future. Now he had time to think, time to regret his haste, and time to plan to get even.

Ellen had married. He had seen that in the papers some one had sent, carefully marked lest the item escape his eye. And she had married Tom Wilkerson! Lamson remembered easy-going Wilkerson and hated him. He wrote to friends for more details, had all the papers sent to him, and waited his chance.

One day he thought he saw the opportunity. A friend, the only one who would have written so, advised the soldier that Wilkerson was in hard straits financially. "He has the reputation of being big-hearted, as you may remember," the letter went on. "Some shrewd men who know that kindliness may be next to carelessness have him in a hole. Wilkerson woke up just in time, climbed half way out, but there he is sticking. If I had, say two thousand pounds, I could break the man. You know I'm in a competing line and that I know what I am talking about. But, I can't spare the change and, besides, he's your enemy, not mine. Just thought I would let you know that I'll do the work if you'll furnish the money."

Lamson, with his arms sprawled on the wooden table in his hut, played with the paperweight and tried to summon from his slender resources of money or friends the possibility of acquiring two thousand pounds. He would have to mortgage his future, sell his few possessions, and borrow to raise this sum. No time could be lost. Wilkerson was climbing out of the hole. Before long it would be too late to shove him back.

The man made a list of everything he owned and added the names of the friends who might be induced to loan him money. Then he wrote them all, diplomatic letters each suited to the recipient, letters asking money. Impatiently he awaited the replies and as he waited he toyed with the paperweight on his table.

One after one, the answers came and each he threw into the basket with disgust. They were all sorry, but, you know, one's money does not go far in this country and—it was the same.

"They won't loan it to me, that's what they mean. They'd loan it to Winslow, or Thorndyke—." He sat up late in the night, calling aloud for an inspiration that would lead him to money, money with which to ruin Ellen's husband. It was then that the fever rode into the window and touched him on the brow. The hut held a sick man, and delirium, and the news went the route of the runners. It was Thorndyke who came to help.

When Thorndyke approached the hut he was met by a frightened native, who gave him to know that Lamson had driven the servants from the hut and had been raving and shouting inside. The delirium, which was an evil spirit, had been more effective than the threats. The sick man was alone in his need.

Thorndyke broke in the door and there was Lamson at his table, the paperweight in his hand. But Lamson was dead. The fever had halted his plans for revenge.

"Poor fellow," said Thorndyke. "And it was just two months ago he asked me for a loan. Maybe, had I given it to him, he would have asked for leave and gone away where the fever would not have got him."

Then Thorndyke's eye fell on the dull-colored paperweight. He held it to the light, then secreted it carefully in his pocket.

"A sapphire!" he said, and he remembered the story of the lost one of Malik Kuffur. "It must be worth easily three thousand pounds! And old Lamson never knew."

Nagging

One of the best definitions of "nagging" was that given by Justice Darling—noted for his sense of humor—during the trial of a domestic action. A male witness was having a lot to say about his wife's nagging propensities. Judge Darling asked him to state exactly what he meant by "nagging." The man couldn't.

"I'll tell you what nagging is," said the judge. "It is the constant reiteration of unpleasant truths."

And come to think of it, it is, isn't it?

ACCIDENT.

Faculty Play a Success.

"Top Crest," a play presented to the Accident public on Saturday evening, January 28, by the members of the grammar and high school faculty, was very successful and quite entertaining. The cast of characters was as follows:

Constance Wilbur, a writer, Miss Grace Speicher; Floretta, her French maid, Miss Helen Custer; Mr. Oliver Cromwell Brown, Mr. Berkeley Bowman; Mrs. Mabel Brown, Miss Margaret Rovenolt; Dr. Curtis Brown, just graduated from medicine, Mr. Arthur Scrogum; Dr. Jeremiah Rust, a doctor of authority and of changeable temperament, Mr. W. E. Tarbell; Miss Eloise Mitchell, a nurse devoted to her profession, Miss Heldegarde Miller.

All the parts were well interpreted, furnishing plenty of amusement for the audience. The proceeds, amounting to $30, will go to the high school fund of the local school.

Away On Vacation.

Rev. and Mrs. G. W. W. Amick, the former pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church at this place, have chosen the month of February as their vacation period. Mrs. Amick left Sunday for a visit with relatives at Johnstown and other points and Reverend Amiel left on Tuesday for a visit with relatives in Ohio. They also expect to spend some time with a daughter in Wheeling, West Va. It is the desire of all members of the parish that the pastor and his amiable wife may have a pleasant vacation.

New Star Cars On Display.

Mr. F. E. Spoerlein, of the Spoerlein Garage, drove to Elizabeth, N. J., one day last week and brought back with him two new Star cars—one a sedan and the other a coach. The cars will sell practically at the same price as other recent models of the same class and are exceptionally good cars for the money. Some of the new features: Four wheel brakes; 107 in. wheelbase; special springs built for easy riding, and all features an up-to-date car should have. The public is invited to come to the garage and look them over.

Automobile Accident.

Last Saturday evening when leaving town, Mr. Hubert Foye lost control of his car and ran into a fence below the corporation limits, damaging the automobile considerably but not injuring any of the occupants.

THE CONQUEST OF FEAR.

Mark 6:50: Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid.

Do you know that fear causes more human distress than all the world's misfortunes and tribulations put together? When a person has a tooth extracted, he usually suffers for about a week while trying to get up his courage to go to the dentist, and for about two minutes or so after he gets there. In other words, anticipated pain hurts more than actual pain. Imaginary evils cause more misery than real evils.

Railroad engineers say that what gets their nerves most of all, on a night run, is the shadows that lie across the track. Imagination transforms these shadows into fallen trees or boulders or washouts. But is it not true in the experience of all of us that our most acute suffering is caused, not by the actual perils of life's journey, but by the shadows that lie across the path?

An old soldier said, "I have had many tragedies in my life and the worst were those that never happened."

It is fear, just fear, that conjures up these hosts of imaginary evils and anticipated pains that cause us more distress than all the world's misfortunes.

And worry is simply a mild form of fear. To worry is to be afraid—to be afraid that the cake may burn, or the tire blow out, or the rain fall, or the sun shine, or the house catch fire, or the baby cry, or—a thousand other mishaps that might possibly happen and probably will not. These little fears, these little worries, continually gnawing away in the recesses of the soul, really do more damage than the big fears.

When John Wesley was a young Episcopal clergyman, traveling across the Atlantic about two centuries ago, a great hurricane developed and the tiny sailing ship was threatened with imminent destruction. Wesley, like the other passengers, was panic-stricken. Then it was that, in amazement, he observed a little group of Moravian missionaries. They had gathered in a corner of the cabin and were singing hymns as serenely and happily as though they were unconscious of the storm and deaf to the mingled shrieks of the wind and the passengers. It seemed as though Jesus Himself had come to them, as long ago He came, walking upon the angry waves, to his disciples struggling in an open boat upon Galilee, saying, "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid." Wesley never forgot that scene. He felt that those Moravian missionaries had a deeper faith than his, that they had discovered some secret of life still hidden from him. That was the beginning of a search which ended in Wesley's discovery of Jesus as a personal, living Friend and Saviour.

The Voice which spoke to the frightened fishermen on Galilee ages ago still speaks to those who are struggling against the contrary winds of adversity and are appalled by the threatening storms of life—"Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid."

A WAYSIDE SERMON

The religion of JESUS is a POWER which lifts humanity to higher levels.

NEEDLESS WASTE.

The capturing of several unlawful stills within the past few months, with large quantities of sugar, grain and other material at nearby points, brings to mind the foolishness of one law covering the confiscation of any material found during a raid made by the proper officials.

The Republican does not know the exact language of the law, but it provides that no matter what is found when a place is raided, everything must be destroyed. Nothing can be carried away from the spot of the raid except perhaps a little "evidence." Because of this law, thousands of pounds of sugar, grain, and other material must be burned or otherwise completely destroyed.

At the same time that the thousands of pounds of sugar are being burned, the penal institutions, the hospitals, the insane asylums, and other places kept up by the State must buy sugar from various sources, with money deducted from the total amount given in by taxpayers. Thousands of people who never saw sugar often enough to know whether it was salt or white sand, who are not able to afford the luxury of putting two teaspoonsful of sugar in their coffee, must use it sparingly, and because of an unwise law enough is being destroyed in Garrett county and other counties to make a pile as large as the Indian mound at Moundsville.

In some instances, a still is found so far out in the woods that it would cost more to recover the sugar and grain than the commodities are really worth, and of course the only thing to do in a case of that kind would be to follow the letter of the law and destroy the property.

But in the past several months one still that was captured located within a mile of Oakland, had as its raw material sugar and grain valued at $800, all of which, in compliance with the law now in effect, had to be destroyed and was in a manner done.

On Tuesday at Mountain Lake Park 700 pounds of sugar were seized. It was destroyed, but it could very easily have been brought into Oakland at a cost of less than $2.00, which would give 100 destitute families 7 pounds each—enough to last them a month by using it sparingly. Or at a slightly increased cost the same sugar could have been sent to some near-by publicly maintained institution for use of the inmates. Instead it was destroyed. The law, as a law, taken in its entirety, is a good one, but it does seem to one who has given the subject some thought that to destroy perfectly good and wholesome commodities, in demand and used by every family and every public institution every day of every year, is something approaching a crime and should be corrected as quickly and as equitably as possible.

Why not let discretion be used as to whether it should be destroyed or distributed to families and institutions in need of it?

GOLD STAR MOTHERS

Congressmen are being asked to vote for what is known as the Gold Star Pilgrimage. The mothers of veterans killed in the World War may be given a trip to foreign cemeteries where their sons are buried, with the Government defraying all expenses.

Don't scorn this idea. Would that it were possible to send all mothers to France, so that their eyes might look upon those pitiful rows of crosses, those thousands upon thousand of graves wherein lie buried the very flower of modern civilization.

If we might all make a yearly pilgrimage to those tombs perhaps we could better realize the awful tragedy of war, the inevitableness of the death of youth. Perhaps we should feel ourselves murderers, we who shouted and cheered when the war-god passed, with all the finest and best boys of France and England and Germany and Italy and Austria and America following after.

Send the Gold Star mothers to France. Perhaps they will, returning, preach the gospel of peace. Perhaps they will save other mothers from a like sad journey.

It would be far cheaper to send every woman in America to France to see those pathetic graves than to engage in another war and sacrifice yet again the youth of our world.

SENATORIAL AMENITIES.

Mr. Bruce—Simply because I mention the Volstead act or the eighteenth amendment is no reason why the lips of the senator from Virginia should foam like the lips of a python. He seems to find a lofty phide in the fact that he has never taken a drink. All I have to say on that subject is that, in my humble opinion, he has denied himself of a very rich measure of a perfectly legitimate enjoyment.

Mr. Glass—Mr. President, may I remind my friend, the senator from Maryland, that I never ventured on that topic at all until he was unkind enough to suggest that I had taken too many drinks.

Mr. Bruce— Perhaps that was provoked by the very vehement way in which the senator from Virginia sometimes throws himself into debate.

Mr. Glass—Of course, the senator from Maryland is so characteristically temperate that he cannot appreciate vehemence in anybody else.

Mr. Bruce—All I have to say is that if everybody had the same ardent temperament that the senator from Virginia has, I myself would be very strongly in favor of prohibition if it could possibly be made enforceable. Passionate as is the temperament of the senator from Virginia, if he were to take a drink. God only knows what murderous consequences would follow. —From the Congressional Record.

The subject formally before the Senate was not a discussion of personal liberty, the eighteenth amendment or the Volstead act; it was the fifteenth amendment to the Constitution and the relation of the South's election laws and practices to that amendment.

The quoted bits of pleasantry were merely an interruption of a formal address by Senator Swanson of Virginia. There were many other equally irrelevant interruptions. Thus ran the time away and the public pays the bill.

Cumberland Players Poor Sports

To the Editor of The Republican.

Oakland High School basketball team played a game here with the Green Street Juniors of Cumberland on Friday evening. The score was 19-15 in favor of Oakland. There were nine fouls called on Oakland players and seven on Cumberland.

An article next day in the Cumberland papers stated that 28 fouls had been called on Cumberland and only four on Oakland and that the referee had called many unnecessary fouls.

We wrote to the sports editor of both the Cumberland papers asking that the erroneous report be corrected as it was unfair to the public to give such a distorted impression of Oakland sportsmanship. They failed to print anything whatver that would make a Cumberlan dteam be seen in a poor light.

Green Street Juniors,who evidentlty wrote the article about the game, showed their sportsmanship, or rather showed that they lacked such an asset. The Cumberland sports editors showed themselves to he one in name only. As Rev. D. M. Funk, former pastor at Oakland, once said: "Sport good sportsmanship in sport."

Very truly yours,
O. H. S. TEAM.

Pythian Sisters To Hold Valentine Party.

Garrett Temple, No. 17, Pythian Sisters of Oakland plans to have a Valentine party on February 13, instead of the regular program meeting according to the members of the Press Committee, and it is hoped, that committee says, that as many as possible be present with their families.

The organization is still progressing, the committee states, and has been having some very interesting meetings during the past few weeks. The balance of the report follows:

"We were sorry to learn that Sister Lela Gortner was severely burned and is confined to her bed. It is the hope of the members of the Temple that she will he out again soon.

"We hope that the sisters will take more interest in the meetings from now on and attend more regularly. While our officers are much pleased with the attendance, yet there are a good many more that we would like to see present."

OAKLAND A. A. SWAMPS NIGHT HAWKS 56 TO 19

Passwork Features local Victory —Married and Single Men Next

The Oakland Collegians completely swamped the Keyser Night Hawks on the local floor Monday night in a set-to of basketball, the score being 56 to 19. Oakland led at half-time, 24-5. The much improved pass work of the local team bewildered the Night Hawks and baskets were made almost at will.

McComas, with nine field goals, was the main scorer for Oakland, while Killen and Wolf played good floor games and caged several balls.

The Broadway A. C. of Meyersdale will play the Collegians on the local court next Thursday, February 9. The Broadways have been going very strong this season and are sure to put up a good game.

Married and Single Men to Play.

A preliminary game, probably between the married and single men of Oakland, will begin at 7:30 on the evening that Meyersdale comes to play the locals, which will begin at 7:30, the manager stated. He is trying to get in touch with the former players on these two teams and it is rumored that Colonel James "Mutt" Bell will referee the contest should an agreement be reached and the game played.

The mainstays of the married men's team have been "Monk" Stemple, Walter Dawson, Guy Hinebaugh, Walter Hardesty and Jerry Stanton, while the single men boast such stars as Bill Casteel, Bill Browning, John Weber, Reeves Blandford and others. Jerry Stanton, to start the ball rolling, said to the manager last night: "Well, I will play if the rest will. I am not as young as I was twenty years ago, but I still think I can sink the ball into the net in good 1928 fashion."

Admission to these contests on next Thursday will be 25 and 50 cents.

The line-up of Monday's game:

| Oakland—56 | | Keyser—19 |
|---|---|---|
| Wolf | F | J. Newhouse |
| Killen | F | G. Daskal |
| McComas | C | R. Long |
| Nally | G | J. Hines |
| Hanst | G | K. Davis |

Substitutions—Kahl for McComas; Kahl for Wolf; T. Daskal for G. Daskel. Field goals: Wolf, 6; Killen, 3; McComas, 9; Nally, 2; Hanst, 8; Newhouse, 3; Long, 3; Davis, 3. Fouls: Killen, 1; Nally, 1; Long, 1.

CATHOLICS WIN ANOTHER; HIGH SCHOOL IS DEFEATED

Two Church League Games Are Played Tuesday Night.

The Catholics continued their winning streak in basketball by downing Mountain Lake Park 20-14, and the Presbyterians nosed out the High School players 24-20 in a desperate rally in the last half in Tuesday evening's games at Naylor's Hall in Oakland. These games ended the first round of the league and started the second round moving.

Nally, of the Catholics, scored four field goals and two fouls to lead his mating in scoring, while Wolf, substituting for an absent player, was high point man for Mountain Lake.

In the High School-Presbyterian clash, McComas, with eight field goals, led the Presbyterians, while Stemple tallied 10 points for the High School. Others featuring in the scoring were: Presbyterians, Wolf, 3; Bond, 1. High School, Stanton, 2; Sanders, 1; Stahl, 1. Cathotlics, Bob Maroney, 2; D. Helbig, 1; Rice, 1; J. Maroney, 1. Mt. Lake, J. McRobie, 1; B. McRobie, 1.

Dr. R. L. Kircheval played his first game with the Presbyterians. Next Tuesday night the Lutherans will play Mountain Lake Park and the Catholics will play the Presbyterians. Everybody is urged to come out to see these games.

OAKLAND HIGH WINS TWO GAMES PLAYED THIS WEEK

Trims Cumberland 19-15 and Thomas Quint 28-17.

Oakland High School was victorious in two basketball games this week, taking the Cumberland Green Street Juniors into camp Friday night after an extra period, 19-15, and winning from Thomas High School at Thomas Monday night, 28-17.

In Friday night's game Oakland and then Cumberland would be in the lead and a last-minute rally of Oakland was necessary to tie the score. In the extra period "Babe" Tower replaced Sanders, who was benched via the personal foul route, and he (Tower) scored the winning field goal. Lohr and Stemple tossed one foul each to make the final score 19-15.

In the Thomas game, Oakland led at half time, 12-9, and was well in the lead at the final whistle. Good passwork predominated. Sanders, with six field goals, led the Oakland scorers. Stemple and Stanton tallied the other three goals.

The Senior girls won from the Sophomores in the preliminary on last Friday night, 21-7, but the O. H. S. girls' team lost to Thomas High on Monday night by a very wide margin.

LOCAL CIVIC CLUB HELD ITS MEETING ON TUESDAY

At Which Special Features were Introduced and Carried Out.

The regular monthly meeting of the Oakland Civic Club was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Garrett County Court House which was well attended.

To make the meetings a little more interesting, Mrs. Arthur Naylor, the acting president of the organization, endeavors to have a special feature presented at each successive session. At Tuesday afternoon's meeting a decidedly interesting talk was given by Miss Helen Kinnick, her remarks being based on the drama. After a few comprehensive remarks on the drama in general she gave brief reviews of three plays she had witnessed in New York during the holiday season.

The first one, by Ibsen, "An Enemy of the People," was an ironic type of drama. It was an 1870-style of play and the settings of the period were carried out to the smallest detail.

The second was one of Shaw's "wordy" plays, "The Doctor's Dilemma." In discussing this play, Miss Kinnick quoted from a New York critic who said, "It is a very wordy play, but very good wordy." One is never supposed to laugh at one of Shaw's plays but in this there were several humorous touches which made it an interesting entertainment.

The third and last play reviewed was "Porgy," by Dubose and Dorothy Heywood. This is an American play in the realistic style based on Negro life in Charleston. All the characters in the play were real Negroes but three. Miss Kinnick's analysis of this play was most interesting.

Miss King, County Public Health Nurse, reported on the work being done for the crippled children in the county. A note of pleasure was evident when Miss King said that progress was being made all along the line in this most laudable undertaking.

The Club was asked by Miss King to make a request for old clothing for the needy at this time. Her supply for the unfortunate is quite low and she is constantly having requests for all kinds of clothing. Anyone having clothing for either children or adults which they will donate will please call phone 134-W and their package will be called for and delivered to the proper person.

Maryland Fish and Game Laws Upheld in the Case of a Non-Resident Fishing in this State Without a License and on Property Without the Permission of Its Owners.

To the Editor of The Republican.

It will be, we believe, to the advantage of both Maryland and Pennsylvania residents if a true statement of the facts in the matter of the arrest and fining of Frank Romesberg, a resident of Pennsylvania, for illegal fishing in Maryland waters, is published, a misleading account of which appeared in last week's Meyersdale Republican under the heading "Salisbury Siftings."

1. Mr. Romesberg did not have the permission of the owners of the Swauger Dam to fish therein; he had the permission of Mr. Philip McAndrews only, who owns but a part of the land surrounding the dam.

2. Even if Mr. Romesberg had had the permission of the owners of the Swauger Dam to fish therein, it would have been illegal for him to have done so without a Maryland angler's license. This he did not have.

3. Mr. Romesberg was given the minimum fine under the Maryland law not, as is stated in the account above referred to, because in the interim he had taken out a non-resident angler's lincense, but because at his hearing he pleaded, a, poverty; b, that he had violated the law unknowingly. Plea b was later determined to have been false at the time Mr. Romesberg entered it because he had previously been warned by one of the owners of the dam not to fish therein without a license.

4. Mr. Romesberg tacitly admitted his guilt when he failed to appeal from the decision of the Maryland magistrate.

5. When Mr. Romesberg stopped payment on the check he had given to pay his fine and costs and which the magistrate obligingly accepted, and did not make it good within ten days, he thereby violated Maryland public law, Chapter 605, sections 123 and 123-A, Acts of 1920. The punishment for such violation is fine or imprisonment in the Maryland penitentiary or both, in the discretion of the Court.

6. It was not until nine months had elapsed and after the Sheriff of Garrett county had gone to Salisbury to apprehend Mr. Romesberg that Mr. Romesberg wrote to the deputy game warden at Grantsville to send the check through a second time. Legal action for the violation of the above section of the Maryland public law had then been started.

7. In direct contradiction of Mr. Romesberge's quoted remarks in the above account, the Justice of the Peace at Grantsville when Mr. Romesberg appeared before him on the charge of issuing a check with intent to defraud, accepted the first financially responsible resident bondsman that Mr. Romesberg was able to offer.

8. Instead of being "victorious" Mr. Romesberg actually paid his original fine with interest thereon together with the costs for his conviction of illegally fishing in Maryland waters. He also paid the costs that had accrued on the charge of issuing a check with intent to defraud, which were more than double the original fine for illegal fishing.

9. The district attorney of Garrett county did not prosecute the case further than to see that the original fine and costs in the illegal fishing case and all costs in the issuance of a check with intent to defraud case were paid by Mr. Romesberg, giving for his reason that "Romesberg was more of a fool than a crook."

A brief note from Mr. Craig's bedside, received by one of his parishioners this morning, states that his condition is such that visitors are not permitted in his hospital room and that his trouble in all probability is the absoption of poison created by diseased teeth.

ROTARY CLUB HEARS SAUL PRAEGER ATWEEKLY MEET

Cumberland Attorney Praises Garrett's Natural Beauty

Saul Praeger, attorney at law, of Cumberland, was the speaker at the weekly meeting of the Oakland Rotary Club at the William-James Hotel last Friday evening.

"You people have all that you could possibly wish for," he said. "Your agricultural lands are of the best, you have climate, beauty, water and all other natural resources, and everything that a good God could give to a good county."

Mr. Praeger said that the farming industry was the oldest and would continue to be the oldest industry in this country, and it was one of the best in the land. In other words, Mr. Prager was selling this community to itself which might be taken as the sum and substance of his talk. He has visited Garrett county as man and boy for many years and knows its beauty spots.

GAME DEPARTMENT ASKS FOR CARE OF WILD LIFE

Conservationists Sends Plea To Resident To Protect Birds

Game of all species, especially the birds, are in danger of starvation unless they are fed and protected by the human hand. It required no stretch of imagination to impress upon the thinking mind just what happens to the birds and smaller game animals when weather conditions exist as they are at present. Wild turkey, quail, grouse, squirrel, rabbit and the song birds all will suffer for want of food. Many thousands have been known to die of sarvation during prolonged winter seasons.

It is the desire of the game department to prevent a calamity of this character. Therefore, the game birds and game animals must be cared for through the winter months. The song birds that visit the back yards need our help during the winter months. Scatter the crumbs from your table and help feed the birds.

The Game Department says in a letter to The Republican that it will re-imburse those persons desiring to purchase grain for the birds and for other food for game animals wherever it is in demand. "We are desirous," the letter continues, "of obtaining the assistance and co-operation of all the sportsmen and conservationists during these trying times, and we are asking if you will help us. When locating a covey of birds, it would be wise to clear the snow to the ground and scatter the feed thereon. The birds will find it. This appeal is in reality an S. O. S. call to all the sportsmen throughout the State as well as the public in general, and we earnestly and urgently request everybody to feed the game birds and animals as well as the song birds until the snow has disappeared.

"We have requested our Western brokers holding contracts for the delivery of 140000 cotton-tail rabbits to Maryland for propagation purposes, to discontinue shipments until further notice or until weather conditions permit. This also applies to the broker on the Mexican border who holds a contract for the delivery of 5700 bob white quail.

"Just as soon as conditions permit, orders will be issued to the brokers to begin shipping in order that the Maryland sportsmen will have the benefit of the new stock in rabbits and quail for the season of 1928."

Dollar Day Brings Many People To Town.

Dollar Day on Tuesday in Oakland brought many people to town to purchase various articles of marchandise offered for sale by merchants and dealers. The goods sold by the merchants were in many cases below actual cost and the evidence of bargains was shown by the number of people in the stores during the day and evening.

Business men expressed themselves as being well satisfied with the volume of trade accorded them.

THE OLD DOCTOR'S WIFE

(©) by D. J. Walsh.)

UP IN the old doctor's library, kept with loving care just as he left it when he went on the long journey ten years before, crouched an old woman, with gentle but haggard face. More than one friend of the old doctor's wife had begged her to spend the day with them, thinking to save her some of the anguish of the sale. But the old woman was positive in her refusal. She must stay at home, she said, to see that no harm came to any of the treasures and to bid them good-by and to know into whose care they were going.

"Going—going!" called the auctioneer. "Why, gentlemen, it's ridiculous! That desk is worth $40. If it's worth a cent. Offer something in reason."

"Five dollars," said a voice in the doorway.

The old woman shivered. She had heard that rasping voice many times during the day, from one room to another, and now it had come to the doctor's loved library, where she was crouching. Giles Cady in his very young days had entered her husband's employ as office boy, then had studied medicine with him and finally been taken into partnership. In those days Doctor Brooks had been considered very well-to-do, and Giles Cady had nothing. Giles Cady was now well-to-do, and it was he who was closing out the doctor's wife under a mortgage for some money the doctor had borrowed.

"Going—going," repeated the auctioneer; "going—"

"Six dollars," from the doorway.

"Six-ten," rasped Giles.

A quick step came up the stairs and along the hall into the library and its owner glanced around. Then he walked straight to the old doctor's wife.

"I reached town only an hour ago, Mrs. Brooks," he said in a low voice, "and just heard. I came straight here. I'm sorry. Isn't there something I can do?"

"Not a thing, Harry," smiled the old woman, the tenderness returning to her eyes. "Just your coming has made me feel better. The doctor loved his young people, as he called them, and you were one of his favorites."

"He saved my life when I had that fever," said the young man in a troubled voice. "He sat up with me at least half a dozen nights in succession, I wish I could—"

"Going—going—going," singsonged the auctioneer. "Why, gentlemen!"

"Six-fifty," from the doorway.

"Six-sixty," snapped Giles.

"Twenty-five dollars," called the young man sharply.

All in the room turned quickly. The auctioneer smiled. Giles glared.

"Twenty-five-ten," he yelled.

"Thirty."

Giles stamped across the room.

"What do you mean, sir—what do you mean?" he sputtered.

"Why, that I may get the desk, of course. What did you mean by bidding against the others? You wanted the desk, too, of course. It's really a very valuable article. I believe the doctor was your benefactor, though, so naturally you want it."

Giles half opened his mouth, as though to make some angry retort. But the room was watching and he forced a sickly smile to his face and turned away.

"Thirty-ten," he muttered.

"Thirty-five."

"Thirty-five-ten."

The young man looked at his companion with an amused smile, in which was wonder at the manner of his competitor's bidding. Giles' reputation did not lean that way.

"Forty."

"Forty-ten."

"Forty-five."

"Forty-five-ten."

The room's amusement had changed to annoyment. What did it mean? There evidently was something behind it all, for Giles was not a man to throw away even a cent.

"Fifty."

"Please, Harry," whispered Mrs Brooks. "You've goaded him far enough. The desk is invaluable to me, but couldn't be to Giles. I don't understand."

Harry nodded, and when the savage "Fifty-ten" came, remained silent.

At the "Gone to Giles Cady," the new owner sprang forward and began to open drawer after drawer in his evident anxiety, seemingly forgetful of the onlookers. The old doctor's wife watched him curiously.

"Nothing there, Giles," she called, "except in the third drawer from the right, which has several of the doctor's letters. I meant to have taken them out, but neglected it. You may have them to me now, as they are of no use to you."

"I bought the desk, which means everything about it," Giles retorted ungraciously.

He pulled out the third drawer and took from it several letters, which he examined carefully, opening and shaking them out and looking into the envelopes. Then he tossed them contemptuously to the old woman.

"Take 'em if you want 'em," he rasped. "They're no good."

He was beginning to recover his composure now that the desk seemed to be empty. And, besides, he was becoming conscious of the curious and even suspicious glances of those around. He laughed constrainedly.

"Just looking to see if the drawers pull in and out easy," he muttered.

"I'm sorry you can't find what you are looking for, Giles," spoke up the woman quietly. "I remember now that you came here right after my husband's death and insisted on searching the desk for some papers that belonged to you. I refused, because I haven't trusted you for a good many years, Giles. But I looked the desk through and there was nothing in it belonging to you. Several times since then you have tried to get into the room and once when you thought I was away. But, unfortunately, I happened to be sleeping in this very chair and awakened in time to frighten you off."

"I thought some of my papers were here and as you wouldn't give 'em up I meant to get 'em," rasped Giles doggedly. "The doctor must have burnt 'em when he destroyed a lot of his bills before he died. He always was a shiftless old fool that way."

"Stop!"

Giles quailed under the scorn of her voice.

"I don't want you to allude to my husband in any way, Giles," she went on. "He made you—or, I mean, he tried to, and failed—and, in some way I do not understand, all the misfortunes have come through you, directly or indirectly. After the sale is over I suppose this house will belong to you and the instant it is legally so I shall go out and I hope we shall not see each other again."

"With all my heart," grinned Giles, maliciously, "and I wish I had my money back so you could take this old box along."

The young man had been watching him keenly, with a curious light coming to his eyes.

"You don't want the desk?" he asked, with an appearance of carelessness.

"No, I don't," shortly. "I'd give a whole dollar to back out. I was just excited."

"All right," said the young man, looking toward the auctioneer. "I'll go the fifty and ten and take the desk. Now I want you to hold the auction a few minutes. I may be mistaken, but I believe there is something behind this. I have a friend who has a desk exactly like this, and he showed me a number of secret drawers about it. I have an idea this desk has the same secret receptacles."

He stepped toward the desk and at the same moment Giles Cady sprang forward.

"Don't you touch that desk," he threatened. "It's mine, and—"

"Hold this fellow back, some of you, for a few minutes," the young man requested.

The auctioneer stepped in front of Giles. "Better strand quiet a little while," he advised. "I'm working for you, I know, but you've been acting sort of funny, and folks won't stand too much, 'specially as everybody likes the old doctor's wife. Now you can go ahead," to the young man.

The young man slipped a hand in under one of the larger drawers and touched a spring somewhere, and instantly from what seemed solid wood a little drawer shot out. Giles saw it and his beady eyes began to blink with something that might have been apprehension.

In the drawer were several letters. The young man glanced at the outside of the envelopes and his eyes grew tender. He carried them to the old woman.

"They are yours," he said in a low voice, "written to the doctor before your marriage, I think."

He went back to the desk and again slipped his hand in behind somewhere, and another tiny drawer slid out filled with papers. The young man glanced over them rapidly and passed one to the auctioneer. Giles made a grab for it, but was pushed back by one of the strong hands of the auctioneer, while the other held up the paper. As he read it the auctioneer's lips pursed themselves into a whistle, and he strode to one of the windows, which was open. People below were carrying out some of the things they had purchased.

"Hi, there!" yelled the auctioneer, loudly. "Put everything back in its place. The whole auction's off." Then he went back into the room.

"W—what's the matter?" blustered the rasping voice of Giles, trembling in spite of his efforts at bravado. "What right have you to call my auction off?"

The auctioneer only grunted contemptuously.

"Just this right, Giles," said the young man, sternly. "That paper I gave the auctioneer is your receipt and cancellation of the mortgage in full, so this house and all its contents belong to Mrs. Brooks. Besides all this, I have several papers here, receipts and other things which involve you pretty seriously, I should judge. Now, I know Mrs. Brooks wouldn't want to prosecute anybody, but I shall take this into my own hands, as the doctor's friend. However, I will compromise with her gentleness by giving you just twenty-four hours to make restitution of everything. You know what it all is without my explaining. Now go!"

Giles slunk from the room. The young man went to the old doctor's wife and took her hand.

"I am glad," he said, "more than I can tell at the way things are coming out."

"And I am glad, too," she returned, her eyes shining, "not so much for myself, for I shall be going to the doctor pretty soon. But he would rather have it this way."

Strong on Common Sense

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright.)

"HE MAY succeed in accumulating a fortune; but he has not done it yet," said Mr. Marshall Welden. He was speaking of Edwin Porter, who was in love with his youngest daughter, Cynthia; and he was speaking to his eldest daughter, Maria, spinster, aged forty, who presided over his household. Maria was the child of his early marriage as Cynthia had been the child of his later days.

"Of course, father," replied Maria, "you are quite right. A marriage now between Porter and Cynthia would be most imprudent. And yet it's a pity, too—isn't it? They do seem to be so much in love with each other. If they had any common sense—which they haven't, being in love—they would see the matter in the same light that we do."

"I will have a talk with Cynthia," said Mr. Welden.

Mr. Welden had a talk with Cynthia. It was a long talk and it left her in tears. He had not spoken harshly to her—had not been dictatorial—but he had appealed to the girl's sense of duty and aroused her filial emotions. He had no other object than his daughter's welfare—as he saw it. He had watched the growing affection between Cynthia and Edwin with growing uneasiness. He felt that the time had now come to act. After his consultation with Maria he was sure of it. Maria had said that common sense forbade the marriage. Maria was strong on common sense—the phrase was continually on her lips, and her father was accustomed to receive it as an oracular utterance not to be denied.

And that was Edwin's evening for calling. Cynthia received him sadly, pensively and sweetly.

"Edwin," said she, in reply to his protestations of love and pleadings for an immediate marriage, "Edwin, I feel for you what I have never felt for another—or ever shall. But our love is not all; there are other loves; such as the love of a father for his child, of a child for her father, a sister for a sister."

"Your father has been talking to you," cried Edwin, "and has forbidden our marriage. I see."

"He has pointed out to me my duty," replied Cynthia.

"Oh, he has?" said Edwin rather petulantly. "The whole of the matter is he doesn't think I have money enough. If I had a few millions he would point out to you just as clearly that it was your bounden duty to marry me—whether you wanted to or not. Come, now—if you really love me as you say you do let us go right off on our own hook and get married. You are of age and so am I. Your first duty is to the man you love and who loves you. What do you say?"

Edwin, you perceive, was a bold wooer who believed in taking citadels by storm. In the bosom of Cynthia there was a fierce struggle going on between her love for Edwin and her affection for, and her sense of duty to, her father. When a few more of his pleadings had been met by Cynthia with highly edifying discourse upon the relations between parent and child he grabbed his hat and went away in something very like a huff. When he got home and had cooled down he thought the whole matter over calmly—and before going to bed wrote Cynthia a letter.

Now Miss Maria Welden had more than her share of curiosity—and was not above resorting to dubious means to gratify it. While outwardly scorning romance as opposed to her favorite maxim she had in her heart a great hankering after it—there had been so little of it in her life! She was desperately anxious to know what Edwin and Cynthia would say to each other when Cynthia told him of her father's decision and, against all ethical considerations, hid in the back parlor to hear.

The next morning she told her father: "I accidentally happened to hear a part of the interview between Cynthia and Mr. Porter last night—and I must say Cynthia showed a lot of common sense."

"I thought she would," said Welden.

And Maria gave him an outline of the lovers' conversation. Shortly after Cynthia came rushing in to her sister with a letter in her hand. "Oh, Maria," she sobbed, "Edwin can't love me or he would not give up like this." In the letter Edwin had said that he had come to realize that he had been selfish in asking Cynthia to give up the luxury and affection which surrounded her in her present home to share his struggles and poverty. He would always love her, and some time, perhaps, if her heart remained the same—and that sort of thing.

Maria took the letter and marched straight to her father, who was at work in his study. "Cynthia showed a lot of common sense last night," said she, "and here is a letter from Edwin Porter which is also common sense."

"Very much so," said Welden, after reading the letter.

"And now," went on Maria, "since they have both displayed so much common sense in this affair why not let them be married if they want to?"

"Just as you think best, Maria," replied Welden, "you always take a common sense view of things. I guess I have got enough money to set them up housekeeping."

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop.

The Joker in The Stack

The writer of "Facts," clever newspaper published by the local Buick dealer, is now calling for some live local jokes. He has run out of them, as Scoop did long ago. On the other hand, Scoop believes that the "Facts" writer is in the same predicament as himself. He knows plenty of jokes, but he would get thrown out of society and from The Republican office bodily were he to attempt to relate them in his column. And while we are about it, Scoop appreciates good local jokes himself and wouldn't mind if some of them were sent to him, too.

* * *

But Be Careful.

At that, Scoop doesn't promise to print all the local jokes that come to his desk. They might be worse than the cut and dried kind that seem to travel all over the United States in some queer manner. Jokes are as sure to get around as you were sure of getting to your destination in a Ford b. h. m. a. l. o. o. L.. (Before Henry made a lady out of Lizzie).

Our Weekly True Story.

Once upon a time there was a newspaper which carried so much praise on the front page for itself—about its superiority and importance—that there was nothing much else in it. Scoop will give one pfennig, one franc and a Canadian dime to the first three people who send in the correct name of the paper. Give details. Everyone is eligible who is under the age of 99 and who has all of his front teeth.

The Truth and Nothin' Else But.

Scoop doesn't take extra delight in publishing the trivial matters and errors of other papers, altho he does enjoy it, and he does like to see the truth told when it is possible to know the truth.

All of which brings us to another absurdity. First, in order to clarify matters, let it be said that Western Maryland includes Frederick, Hagerstown, Hancock and Cumberland, besides towns in Montgomery and Garrett counties. The Evening Times, Cumberland, on Sunday, published a paper of 68 pages. The Cumberland News of Monday was an edition of 40 pages. The Republican has frequently in its career published sixteen page editions and as far as the records go there has never been any boasting about it in The Republican's columns.

Now as to the absurdity: We need merely mention it and we feel almost ashamed for picking out such a thing to fill up the column of Scoop which is dedicated to truth, fun and whatnot.

The Mountain Democrat last Thursday published the "fact" that its 16-page paper was "the largest ever to be published in Western Maryland."

Blooy-ey!

But in the words of The Republican's philosopher, Archibaldson, "The truth will out."

The Republican Commercial printing department is one of the best equipped plants you will find. The work done in it is strictly high-class.

THE MYSTERY OF LIFE.

By F. F. CORLISS.

In all life's magical maneuvers it veils itself, as much in the infinitely large as in the infinitely small.

To us, life is a simple, insignificant force in its microscopic forms and finite beginnings. But as it unfolds and multiplies itself, it diversifies and becomes more and more complex, marvelous and magnificent.

In man's present state and development the absolute is beyond man's capacity to understand. We see effects, behold phenomena and observe the method in all changes; but the creative cause, hidden in the midst of matters, changes, dying and disintegrating forms, lives and marches on and and up into new and better forms without end.

So, all that man can really know about life and its intrinsic values and virtues, is gained from its appearances.

We have learned what the first cause is by tracing effects back to their source. Further we know that the attributes and properties found in man (the creature) must have been antecedent in his Creator. As it is impossible to create or impart to others something we do not possess, so life's vital values to man are found to exist in life's visible manifestations (not in static life prior to its tangible appearance), nor in life's disappearance into the ethereal and invisible.

These comments are made to give peace and comfort to minds deluded by the groundless teaching of Sophists and Spiritualists, who claim life's materiality is only unreality—just a seeming.

That in the spirit world, invisible, life is found in reality and permanence; that it is the spirit life only that matters, for which we should all aspire and to which we shall all return as astral apparitions.

Erudite minds have given profound study to the laws of life and find that the methodical process which life uses to expand, develop and diversify itself through the universe, has grown out of life's necessity. Nature has also done nothing by chance. Back of everything created there's a reason; confronting everything there's a design to be followed until fulfilled.

Nature's objective is the exaltation of the infinite life in and through its innumerable finite parts. That life might gain a rounded fullness and completeness of expression, life's materializations in forms diverse, with qualifications varied, became a necessity that life might be experienced in its joys and sorrows by living.

Only thus can the finite life in men achieve a nobility of character and be endowed with that wisdom, power, love, justice and understanding which is infinite.

While the universal life is ethereal, invisible and intangible, its values are valueless and expressionless to God or man.

The ethereal (spirit world) is the place where finite forms of life, like suns and planets, moons and men have their beginnings.

It is nature's storehouse of inexhaustible metaphysical substance. Within it embryonic life lies dormant, sleeping, until quickened into growth by the dynamic soul life which dominates it.

Nature abhors a vacuum. The laws of life teach us that life is a progressive continuity ever rising through forms and transformation from low to higher levels. It never suffers retrogression—a desire to go back to its embryo or to an eternal, unconscious sleep. To life once endowed with reason, self-consciousness and materialized, a life in the spirit is an hallucination

Nature's purpose for life makes a spirit life impossbile, even if plausible and desirable.

If human lives ceased to exist at the grave because of life's diseased and worn out physical embodiment, then life's high purpose of exalting life to its highest achievement thru finite lives would be aborted. Then seventy years (which is far beyond life's average longevity) would measure man's time limit for development, for gaining that wisdom and experience for which he was made. And nature would lose her million of years of effort in creating him.

Whereas when the departing life steps out of its old clothes into a young and better physical embodiment here on earth, then life's continuous progression is not broken or hindered but its positiotn must be advanced.

The death of the physical body is just as natural and just as essential to life's progressive youth and future attainment as life's birth in a physical body is.

Planetary life in all its forms is a cyclic and endless recurrence of births and deaths. Life's materialization and re-materialization are life's great necessity in order to fulfill the creative design and reach life's objective.

Man is a planetary being, as indigenous to earth as a tree is to its soil.

As yet it has not been given to man the faculty to discover life's inner escence. All that we can know of life is its outward appearance. We can know it only by its words and how its created effects impress us.

Life in a hog expresses to the mind of man gluttony and selfishness that excludes the rights of other hogs. Life in a dog expresses affection, gladness and a loyalty that is akin to devotion. Both are vitalized with the same life force made to manifest different designs and have different objectives.

The great desire of both the finite and infinite life is for self-expression. Hence the fulfillment of this urge requires a vast variety of mediums thru which it manifests its versatility, virtues and values, smiles and frowns.

Flowers teach us life's appreciation of fragrance, beauty, color and symmetry, but as no one flower can express life's fullness of love for flowers so no individual life can express but an infinitesimal part of the infinite life.

Only when we consider life a unity and take the aggregate of all the millions of human lives of earth, their combined wisdom, varied activities and constructive skill, do we get an understanding of the mystery and majesty of life—of God.

But man has within the God-life and all the potential possibilities of becoming a super-man, a God-like man. And after man has had a long-time exposure of his life to earth's changing experiences, before its camera, then the over-life will develop in man its full-size picture.

The human mind like the infinite mind is a mighty magnet whose power draws nature's secrets hidden in darkness into the light, makes them visible.

The mind's eye relative to man's optical eye has a telescopic lens, a projectile penetration into things far distant, which aided by reason gives us a knowledge of life and a universe otherwise inscrutable.

The Creator has given every type of life a habitat and adapted its life to its environment, hence fish can't swim on land nor birds fly under the sea.

Nature teaches man that she will suffer no break in the continunity of life's evolving precess; that the fulfillment of her intent and desire is that life shall ever be renewed in materializations more and more refined and be kept dynamic that it may actively function to the complete expression of all its attributes.

To send life back at the grave to that ethereal realm of spirit where life sleeps in an unconscious, static state, would be a violation of nature's changeless laws. Impossible.

It would be a denial of man's right to reason (the greatest gift of God to man). The use of man's intellect is what makes him a co-worker with his Creator in the evolution of life in its highest aspects and the sole exponent on earth of a love divine.

The mystery that life presents to man is not one but many. And the most baffling is to isolate it, find it and analyze it. With all the devices that the genius of man has invented to augment the acuteness of his senses we can not find life's headquarters in man or in matter, and when we try to conceive life as a thing apart and separate from matter is becomes non-existent to us.

We call it the soul of man. Know it as the soul of the universe. But the great dispute is, whether life is the designed or the designed. Is it the creator of all things or by all things created? Is it a product or a projeny, due to the marriage of the elements, wedded by the blind force of their affinities, their opposite polarities and without an objective?

And friends, after you have studied all the ologies, from the zoo to biology and theology, read all the philosophy pro and con of the Orient and the Occident, you will find great minds differ in their answers.

And as you and I must go through death's valley alone, so the answer to life's mystery each one must discover for himself.

One noted doctor says that the majority of men believe that life's intelligence creates the brain cells and other structures. Bue he dissents; reverses their order. I'm glad his is a minority opinion.

To assert that life is a product of brain structure and cell quality is analagous to saying that the engine, its shape and iron quality is what gives gas its energy.

We know that the engine is essential to the gas, but as a medium thru which gas energy may be released and expressed in speed, power and usefulness.

The soul-life and its embodiment are made to work together, each complements the other to make a finished whole. When saparated neither can function to express values.

Life in a spirit world, disembodied, is the greatest delusion of the ages because it contradicts our reason and nature's laws.

Emerson said:—

"Hitch your wagon to a star"
That you may live and travel far
And glad are we of earth
For having done it.
Our star has raised us to par, why not stay on it?
Back to ether's darkness, sameness, means our nonentity.
For life to do and be ,needs seen substance for identity.
So Mother Earth, home of our nativity, quite suits me;
Here we can work, love, laugh and oh,
so happy be—
Thus we lessen life's great mystery.

Buy across the Counter

WHEN you buy across the counter in the stores of this town, you are using good business judgment. Why? There are many reasons, but one of the most important is this:

You can buy what you want at the price you wish to pay! You are not obliged to accept "something just as good," because you are in a position to compare values and make your own selections.

When you trade at home you are helping your friends to help you! And there is no finer thing in life than neighborly co-operation. It always pays—in happiness and satisfaction as well as dollars and cents.

Snow-white Weasel Caught.

Charles Reckner caught a rather frenkish weasel in a trap recently. The animal was as white as snow with the tip of its tail black. It was an unusually large specimen with coal black eyes, proving that the animal was not of the albino type, as they all have pink eyes.

MEETING HER TIM'S MOTHER

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

JUDITH WETMORE pulled her black hat over her tight brown braids. She almost wished that she had had her thick locks shorn when Dencey had fallen for the convenient bob. With leisure at a minimum and the mercury at its highest braids were a nuisance. Besides, as Dancey declared, they stamped her as old-fashioned, than which nowadays nothing was more inexcusable.

Yet Tim Haldane had asked her to marry him. As she walked out of the office building and waited at the corner for her car she watched a knot of her compatriots, chic and vivacious, and compared herself with them. Incredible that Tim had chosen her. There must have been a number of other girls he might have had for he was so fine and winning that no girl could resist him. Even Dencey said so, and for Dencey to say a thing of that kind meant much, for Dencey, eighteen and modernly sophisticated, had a discriminating taste in heroes.

No, Judith decided, as the car bore her through the burning streets, she would never be able to understand Tim's selection of her, but whatever his reason his mother would be sure not to agree with him; she might accept her son's choice of a wife but she would never approve it.

Judith dreaded to meet Tim's mother. In fact, dread had all day been accumulating into something like panic for that evening she was to face her ordeal. Of course, it had to come some time, but why should it come this evening? There had been extra work at the office and she was tired. Moreover, her mother was not well and she and Dencey had been doing the housework for a few days.

Tim's mother! Judith could visualize her easily from her knowledge of Tim. Slender, tall and fair, of course, modish, perhaps even with a fondness for French toiletries. Tim had not told her. "I'll let you form your own picture of her and see how near you come to getting it right," he had said lamely. Then his mother came on from the West to live with him at the Ardmore until his marriage with Judith, when he planned to have a home, a small house somewhere on a quiet street. Meanwhile, Judith and his mother must get acquainted and so he had arranged a dinner for them at the Ardmore as the easiest way of accomplishing what he desired.

Upon opening the door of the small apartment Judith beheld a guest seated beside her mother on the sofa. Aunt Ida Stanley, her father's sister, had dropped in for a visit! Thin and nervous, she was talking as fast as she could.

"Why? Here's our Judy! You look warm, Judy. Look out for blood pressure. Now, with me I am below normal—simply have to have heat. This is the first time I've felt really comfortable this summer."

Judith smiled faintly. In the kitchen Dencey was struggling with a can opener. It slipped and Dencey gave a cry of pain.

"Let me take it," Judith said. She looked dubiously at the can. "What else for lunch, dear?"

"Nothing much. She took us unawares. It's your afternoon off, isn't it? And you're going out to dinner tonight. Lucky you!"

"I am not so sure about that. Tim's mother may not like me."

"It would be horrid if she didn't, since you'll have to live together. There are plenty of eggs, Judith."

"I'll make an omelet."

After all luncheon was something more than presentable and Aunt Ida arose refreshed and fortified.

"Now, I'm going out to get me a new hat and dress," she announced. "There isn't a decent hat in Packville. As for the dresses Andrew Miller brings in—well, I may be thin enough to be fashionable, but I simply won't expose my arms and legs—

"Judy! Call a cab. And get ready to go with me. I'll need some piloting."

"It is very hot, auntie," Judith protested faintly.

"Shucks! There's electric fans. Come, call that cab."

Shopping with a woman whose temperature was below normal and who insisted on getting what she wanted at a price she was willing to pay gave Judith one of the most trying afternoons she had ever experienced. At last she sank down upon a divan and while Aunt Ida tried on dresses held her handbag.

"I'm coming up again to see you married and I want something decent to wear," she commented.

Sitting thus, Judith became aware that a woman had sat down beside her; the woman was elderly, plain and a bit old-fashioned. She clutched her purse tightly and looked about her with a little air of helpless bewilderment. Her upper lip was white in that way which indicates heart weakness.

"It is very hot, isn't it?" she said to Judith. "I feel the heat terribly. I don't think I should have ventured out. Trying on dresses, too." She gave a little gasp and closed her eyes.

Judith moved nearer and put her arm about the slight figure. Then remembering that Aunt Ida always carried a bottle of camphor, she took it from the handbag, saturated a handkerchief with it and held it to the fainting woman's nose.

"If you feel able—the restroom is near. Lying down a few moments will help you a lot, I think," she said.

Supporting the woman, she got her to the restroom, saw her made comfortable upon a couch and ran to the restaurant to get her a bracing cup of tea.

"And now I think you ought to have a cab and go home," Judith said.

"You are right, I am sure, but I do so hate to go without getting what I came after. You—you couldn't help me, could you, dear? You see, I simply must have a dress. I haven't a thing to wear and—and it's an important occasion. I looked at another store but I didn't find just what I wanted—something black and thin and—and dignified, not too new-fashioned, you know."

Judith had seen Aunt Ida discover and reject just such a dress. She patted the white hand reassuringly. How gentle and appealing this little lady was!

"Just sip your tea and I'll see what I can do," she promised.

She found the dress and a pleasant-faced fitter and within fifteen minutes the little lady, proud and happy over her purchase and, oh, so touchingly grateful to Judith for her assistance, went away in the cab. Judith returned to Aunt Ida.

"Well, here's what I got," she remarked. Judith said nothing. But she wondered at the lack of taste that lay behind the purchase. Still, if Aunt Ida was pleased—and she was.

They stopped at the delicatessen store and Judith purchased cold meat and rolls and fruit. Dencey would be able to assemble a respectable meal now.

Bathed, rested and clad charmingly Judith showed no effects of her afternoon's experience as she stepped into the car beside her fiance. But the dread of meeting her future mother-in-law harried her soul as she sat waiting in the lounge of the Ardmore for the presentation. Tim, after having fetched Judith, had excused himself and gone up to get his mother.

He was coming now, her wonderful lover! And leaning upon his arm was a small old lady in a simple yet beautiful black gown—the same lady—the same gown—

They stared at each other in delighted recognition. Then to Tim's amazement they kissed.

"Oh, my dear! And I so dreaded meeting you!" murmured Mrs. Haldane.

"I dreaded to meet you," replied Judith.

Tim put an arm about each.

"And I dreaded seeing you meet, but chance beat me to it," he chuckled.

Lower Animals Seem to Know Life's Duty

Perhaps the inclusive term "individualism" is the one which will best describe the attitude toward living which is most characteristically human.

The animal, absorbed as he is in the business of arranging for the survival of himself and his kind, seems far less capable than man of distinguishing between himself and his race. We need not naively attribute to him any philosophy in order to explain his behavior, but it is evident that he acts as though he had arrived at that attitude which is accounted by some exponents of social ethics as the ultimate human ideal, and which consists in an identification with society so close as to make meaningless any distinction between private and public good.

He does not ask what he gets out of life, nor why he should sacrifice himself to the laborious business of continuing it. The lair or the nest is prepared, and the young are born. They are nourished, defended, given such education as they need, and then, when the time comes, the parents die quietly, quite as though they were as completely aware as Mr. Shaw's "ancients" that the important thing is, not that any individual should have arrived at any "fulfillment" of his own, but that life should go on.

Yet, though something of this kind has been often enough described as the highest human virtue, the human being seems incapable of consciously achieving what the animal possesses as part of his natural endowment.—Joseph Wood Krutch in the Atlantic Monthly.

Village to Be Razed

Much to the consternation of some of the oldest residents, picturesque Garscadden, Scotland, is to be demolished. The county council decided some time ago that the houses were beyond repair, and allocated about 100 houses in the new Duntocher scheme to the tenants. Removal notices are being served on Garscadden families as the new houses become ready for occupancy. Garscadden, until a little more than 20 years ago, was a thriving mining village and is composed of five typical "miners' rows" comprising 105 houses of one, two and three apartments. There is a sharp division of opinion among the villagers over the action of the county council.

Something Else

The vicar's wife was enthusiastic and appreciative about the new curate, and when she called on an old lady parishioner she turned the conversation in his direction.

"You know," she said, "he is capable in so many ways, but what I like about him most of all is that he is a real altruist."

"I'm surprised to hear that," exclaimed the old lady, "for I heard him singing last Sunday, and I could declare he was a tenor."—Weekly Scotsman.

SWANTON.

Mrs. H. R. Shank, of this place, is visiting relatives in Cumberland at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Lowman spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Beckman, which was formerly Mr. Lowman's home.

Miss Winifred Sweitzer, who is in training in the Western Maryland Hospital, Cumberland, spent Saturday and Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Sweitzer, in Swanton.

Miss Pearl Friend, who is taking a course in Catherman's Business College at Cumberland, is home for an indefinite period of time.

We are indeed sorry to learn that Mr. Josiah G. Friend, of this place, met with a painful accident Monday morning. When he was leaving his barn after having fed his horses and cattle the wind blew a door shut and a corner of it struck him in the right eye, rupturing it so badly that the optic was reduced to a semi-liquid which ran to the ground. His eye was blinded a number of years ago when a piece of steel punctured it. Immediately following the accident on Monday Mr. Friend hurried to Oakland where he received surgical treatment from Dr. N. I. Broadwater, who made him as comfortable as possible under the circumstances.

Mrs. Ray Johnson and sons Julius and Thomas spent the week-end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Sweitzer.

Mrs. Arthur Green and son Harold called on Mrs. B. S. Wilt last Friday.

A revival meeting started on Monday night in the U. B. church of this place. The services are being conducted by Rev. Sherman Westfall, of Deer Park. Everybody will find a welcome at the church.

MT. LAKE PARK.

Another period of winter weather has arrived here with the best sleighing snow of the present season.

Last Sunday was a special day in the local Methodist Episcopal church. The pastor was called away to conduct a quarterly conference for the superintendent of the district and in his place Rev. Anderson preached a most excellent and telling sermon. In the evening Rev. W. M. Shultz delivered the sermon and conducted the quarterly conference, returning to his home in Fairmont, W. Va., at the close of the service.

Mrs. Elias Miller has been quite ill for some time, but is somewhat improved at this time.

Mrs. Pope has been a shut-in all the winter. Her condition now is not much improved.

Mr. Bruce Falkenstine was home for a few days on account of the illness of his son Bert, who was suffering with pneumonia. He is now better.

Mrs. C. S. Graef leaves for her home in Chicago this evening after a visit of three weeks with her parents in the Park.

We have several families spending the winter in the Park who say that they are having a splendid time and are extremely well pleased with this as a winter resort.

The raid made upon a home located in the Park on Tuesday by the Prohibition officers and Sheriff Casteel created some excitement among the few residents of the Park who were aware of the visit of the officers. Such action on the part of the preservers of the peace and our State officers should have a wholesome influence and deter others in this and other communities from violating the law of the land.

Hirthday Party.

On Sunday, January 29, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hurley U. Miller was the scene of a very unusual and delightful celebration when a birthday party was given in honor of Mrs. Mary B. Arnold, the occasion being her ninetieth anniversary. Many relatives and friends were present, among whom were Rev. and Mrs. Emery Fike, Mrs. Dorothy Ridder, Mrs. Roy Lee, Mrs. Edna Kelly, Mrs. Lorenzo Fike, Mr. and Mrs. Hurley U. Miller and family, Misses Grace Mason, Minnie Shaffer, Nettie Ridder, Anna Fike, Rosalie Click, Blanche Ridder, Lulu Kelly, Bertha Lee, Opal Fike, Vivian Fike, Loretta Fike, Ruth Ridder, Ilene Rider; Messrs. Alonzo Fike, Cecil Kelly, Sanford Thompson and Edward Cotter. A very pleasant time was enjoyed by all around a table which was decorated with a birthday cake upon which appeared the figures "90" in glowing array made of candles and very tasty and delicious foods.

For the past fourteen years Mrs. Arnold has made her home at Mrs. Miller's, the latter being her only daughter. Her kind and loving personality has won for her a host of friends who call her "grandmother" and are at her service whenever needed. At this old age she is very high spirited and enjoys a joke as well as a much younger person. Long may she live to see more happy and joyous gatherings in honor of her ever increasing age and pure life.

Going to Build?

We'd like to write this little ad to tell folks where to trade, and get the best of everything that's hand or factory made, that they could ever need or use, to build a house or shed, or store, garage or chicken-coop, and paint it blue or red. When some folks want to build a house to last a thousand years, they send away to get their plans, from firms like Sawbuck Rears, who advertise 'most everything, by parcel post or freight, and make you think a dollars worth costs only ninety-eight.

So that is why we're writing this—it helps to beat the band, to know our price is down below the Rears & Sawbuck brand; for what they ask you forty-nine, we'll sell for forty-eight, and in the bargain, don't forget, you also save the freight. Then you don't need to plunk your skads, and wait a month or more, for something you can buy for less, delivered to your door; but if you're needing anything, that's in the builder's line, just telephone to 91-R—we'll surely treat you fine; or if you wish to build a house, that's either plain or grand, we're always glad to match our price, against the Sears Buck Brand.

COUNCIL DECIDES TO OPEN EIGHTH STREET TO OAK ST.

All Macadam Streets Within the Town's Limits Will Also Be Resurfaced in the Spring

A decision to open Eighth street between Oak and Green streets was made at the monthly meeting of the Mayor and Council at the City Hall on Monday night. The opening of this street will afford a closer outlet for a number of residents in that portion of the town and will connect the back road to Mountain Lake Park with the main driveway leading to that point from Oakland. The new street will extend through two blocks of unimproved property.

Work on the new street will be started as soon as weather conditions following the opening of spring will permit, according to officials of the town.

Property owners whose lands abut on the proposed new street have entered into an agreement whereby they assume the cost of a certain percentage of the expense involved in opening and building of the roadway.

To Resurface Streets.

It was also decided at the meeting of Council to oil and resurface all of the macadam streets and with this in view a letter was written to John N. Mackall, State Roads Commissioner, asking what the cost would be to have the work done under the supervision of the Commission.

It has been stated that the State Commission will oil and resurface the highway between Oakland and Gortner in the spring and the Mayor and Council are of the opinion that it can be done better by the Commission than by private contractors.

The passing of the monthly bills and other routine business occupied the remainder of the Monday night session. The next meeting of the Council will be held on March 5.

Slightly Injured when Car Overturns on Crellin Road.

Mr. James Willison, of Mountain Lake Park, local representative for a wholesale grocery concern in Cumberland, was somewhat bruised and shaken up on Tuesday morning when his car skidded and running upon the embankment skirting the road at a point near Crellin, turend over on its side. The roadway was a glare of ice and it was almost impossible for one to keep a safe footing.

Mr. Willison was on his way to call upon a customer when the accident happened. The car was brought to Oakland under its own power where it is being repaired. The damage to the vehicle was a broken windshield, fenders and running board.

LEGIONAIRE MEMBERSHIP DRIVE IS ON THIS MONTH

Trophy Is To Be Presented To Winning Post in Maryland.

A trophy is being offered by Wallace Williams, Department Commander of the Maryland American Legion to the post having the highest percentage of its quota in a membership drive ending February 29, according to a letter received here by I. R. Rudy, Post Commander.

The concerted membership campaign is being operated throughout the United States and the trophy being offered is for the purpose of stimulating Maryland posts to action so that their gains in membership will compare favorably with posts in other States.

The quotas are not based entirely upon past memberships but upon the memberships of three years, the present strength and activity of the respective posts and the field from which members must be recruited.

Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, has 45 for its quota. There are 39 other posts in the Department of Maryland.

FIRE DEPARTMENT CLEARS $105.00; ASKS COOPERATION

Benefit Picture Wednesday and Thursday Adds to Cash in Hand

One hundred and five dollars was the total amount cleared on the benefit picture, "Firemen, Save My Child," given by the Oakland Volunteer Fire Department in the Maryland Theatre, Oakland, last Wednesday and Thursday nights, according to George Kerins, fire chief.

The theatre was packed both night of the presentation of the picture and many laughs resulted from seeing Raymond Hatton and Wallace Beery in the roles of firemen. Special music and a talk by Rev. C. A. Shilke were other features of the entertainments.

Ask Co-operation.

At a meeting of the Fire Department Tuesday night it was decided to insert a notice in the local newspapers concerning the practice of unauthorized persons jumping on trucks as they pass on their way to the scene of a fire. Such a practice is strictly unlawful and about the only way to put a stotp to it, the members of the department say, was to cause the arrest and fine of the offenders by a justice of the pence.

Anyone, officers of the department said, is privileged to present his application to the department and if found competent he will be accepted as a member and with the membership he will have a right to a place on the truck.

It was also decided at this meeting to as kall citizens not to obstruct the streets or highways with their cars when the department trucks are answering a call. This is likewise unlawful and violators are subject to arrest and fine for so doing. Keep the roadways clear and better service to the community ean be rendered by the department and its efficiency thus increased.

SCOUTS ARE OBSERVING ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM

Week of February 8, Date of Organization, Set Aside Each Year For Celebration

Boy Scout Anniversary week, every year the week of February 8, is being fittingly observed in Oakland, according to Scott W. Shirer, scoutmaster. It was started by all Scouts attending the church of his choice in uniform. The celebration will be ended on Sunday, February 12, by attending the Presbyterian church in a body for the morning worship. Rev. W. B. Brock has been officially connected with scouting and is very much interested in it.

The yearly custom is in keeping with celebrations throughout the whole United States. It was on Feb-8,1910, that the Boy Scouts of America was organized. It was brought to this country from England by Sir Robert Baden-Powell, whose name is associated with the welfare of boyhood all over the world.

The local organization has experienced a steady growth from the beginning, according to the scoutmaster, and he says that the best part of it is that the older he gets the faster it grows. Each year's statistics show a greater percentage of increase than the previous one.

During the week School and Community day will be observed. On Thursday evening at the K. of P. hall, a party will be held by all scout organizations. The scouts are working on some of their stunts to entertain their guests, who will be their parents or guardians, the Ladies Auxiliary, the Court of Honor, the troop committee, and the scouts are expecting all the members of these organizations along with their wives, husbands, etc., and it is hoped that they will make a special effort to be present.

On Friday night Mr. Bernard I. Gonder, manager of the Maryland theatre, has asked the troop to be his guest at the moving picture show. Mr. Gonder's invitation was accepted 100 percent plus, according to Scoutmaster Shirer.

FORESTRY PICTURES ARE SEEN BY MANY IN COUNTY

Over 150 See Films Presented by Forester At Friendsville

The films obtained from the Forestry Department and exhibited in Garrett county high schools during the week of January 30, were very well attended as a whole, according to C. Cyril Klein, district forester. There were over 150 present at Friendsville and not less than 68 at any other place except Oakland, he stated.

The films were presented by A. L. Sines, district forest warden, and Mr. Klein at the five high schools in the county and showed the care and management of the farm woodlot, also a three-reel picture showing the bad effects caused by burning of woodland, especially the effect it has on grazing lands. Mr. Klein used fifty colored slides in his talk and traced forestry from the very beginning of the settlement of the State to the present day, showing where the forests have gone and the present rate of destruction.

He said that Maryland had enough timber land to produce all the timber it could use if properly protected and managed, but that at present it was growing only about one-fourth of her needs of today, the balance being imported and paying about five million dollars annually in freight bills.

Mr. Sines also gave a talk which included his famous "beefsteak" story, showing how wood enters into the making of good beef.

Mr. Klein plans to return to Garrett county the week of March 5 to give woodlot management demonstrations in cooperation with the various agriculture high school teachers in the county.

A forest warden's conference is also planned for Garrett county, which is to be held the latter part of March.

POULTRY SPECIAL TO BE IN OAKLAND ON MARCH 10

Moving Pictures, Poultry Exhibits and Addresses Included In Entertainment That Day.

A poultry improvement special, operated by the Baltimtoe and Ohio Railroad in cooperat:n with the University of Maryland, the Maryland Poultry Breeders Association, the United States Department of Agriculture, the American Railway Express Company and the County Agents of Maryland, will be in Oakland on Saturday morning, March 10, at 8:30 o'clock, according to information received at the office of the County Agent in Oakland yesterday morning. The train is scheduled to remain in the local yards of the railway company until noon or a littel later upon the day of its arrival here.

The poultry special will be the first train of its kind to appear in Garrett county, although the better dairy sire special is similar to it in many ways. This will be the only stop in this county, it has been stated.

There will be a program of entertainment, including several reels of moving pictures, government exhibits and a poultry show. County Agent McGlone and W. H. Rice, poultry specialist from the University of Maryland, will give short talks on poultry raising.

The special train will consist of several cars of poultry and exhibition quarters nad plenty of space for visitors will be provided.

"Further information will be given on this exhibit later," Mr. McGlone told The Republican yesterday, "but in the meantime if anybody desires to learn more about this special, I will be glad to be of service to them. I hope that many farmers will arrange to see the exhibit."

NEGRO MOUNTAIN NIGHT PROWLER NEARLY FROZEN

Trapped Beneath Porch By a Bulldog In Zero Weather.

On one of the elodest nights of the winter, which came along with the sub-zero weather of last week, Mr. and Mrs. William Baker, who live at Shade Hollow a half mile west of Grantsville along the National Highway, were aroused from their sleep by the furious barking of a large bulldog that is the night watchman at their home.

Dressing and taking a light and a gun with them, the couple went out to investigate and found that the dog had some person or "varmint" cornered beneath the back porch of the home, which ih high off the ground at one end and close to the ground at the other extreme, the higher end being open. The object the dog was barking at was so closely crouched on the ground at the far end of the porch that it was almost undiscernable and was as far back as retreat was possible at the low place.

From the actions of the dog, Mr. and Mrs. Baker surmised that it was a skunk or some other animal that had taken refuge beneath the porch. Mr. Baker, gun in hand, proceeded to investigate the cause of the dog's fury and when the rays of light penetrated the gloom the supposed skunk was recognized as one of the human species whose habitat is on Negro Mountain and who is of ill-repute on account of night prowling habits and a penchant for thieving.

Mr. Baker called off the dog, addressed the man by name and commanded him to come forth and give an account of himself. The dog could hardly be restrained from attacking him and the man begged lustily to be saved from the dog and not to be shot or turned over to the officers of the law. He could give no plausible excuse for prowling around the Baker home at that time of night, but Mr. Baker is of the opinion that he was after a quarter of beef that was hanging in a pantry of which the visitor had knowledge. Meat stealing is generally believed to be in the man's line in the past, and it therefore seems probable that it was meat he was after.

Had the occupants of the house not been roused from their sleep and gone ont to investigate and called off the dog, the night prowler would either have been killed by the dog or been bdaly frozen, as he could not have withstood the cold very long in the place where the dog cornered him.

Thinking perhaps this perilous experience would eure the culprit of his evil ways Mr. Baker mercifully allowed him to depart.

VOLUNTARY GIFT IS RECEIVED BY BOYS' BAND

Letter With Check Received Showing Interest in Band

In order that the need of funds with which to purchase a bass horn for the Oakland Boys' Band might be met more quickly, a check for $5 was received yesterday by R. R. Gilbert, director. The letter came from Washington, D. C., and read as follows:

For several weeks we have wanted to send a small contribution toward the purchase of a bass horn for the Boys' Band. We are glad to see news of the band in The Republican and appreciate your interest in giving our Oakland boys an opportunity to learn. Best wishes for you and the band.

"Sincerely yours,

"THEKLA C. FUNDENBERG."

"Encouragement like that received from Miss Fundenberg makes me feel that we may yet reach the desired goal," Mr. Gilbert said this morning. "It wouldn't take long to have sufficient money on hand with which to purchase a horn if several such voluntary donations were received."

Painter Injured In Fall From Scaffold at Court House.

Haymond Swearinger, about forty years of age, of Mountain Lake Park, was injured Monday afternoon when he fell from a scaffold upon which he was working at the court house. Mr. Swearinger is a painter and was engaged as such working on the stairway leading from the second to the third floor of the building. He suffered injury to both his arms and was also injured about his back. He was immediately removed to the Central Hotel, just across the street from the Court House where he was given medical attention. Fortunately Mr. Swearinger escaped with no fractured bones. He expects to return to his work in a few days. He is in the employ of George Hipsley, one of the contractors having the court house work in charge.

The cause of the man's fall is said to have been caused by a loose board in the scaffold upon which he was working. He took a drop of about eight feet as also did John Hipsley, who was on the scaffold with him, but the latter fortunately escaped injury.

INSURANCE RATE LOWERED FOR OAKLAND MERCHANTS

Notice Received This Morning From Underwriters Making an 8-Cent Reduction on $100

Mercantile fire insurance rates in Oakland will be lowered eight cents on the one hundred dollars, beginning February 7, according to informamation received this morning from a local fire insurance agency.

This reduction is a result of the improved fire department facilities and the personnel of the fire fighters' organization, and gives Oakland the same fire deficiency charge as that of Cumberland—thirteen cents instead of 21 cents, the rate in effect until the recent reduction.

Since the organization of the improved fire department in Oakland more than a year ago, negotiations have been in progress with the insurance underwriters' department of Philadelphia, and the department and city government have been doing all in their power to lower the rates which have been deemed excessive for many years. The reduction will save the business men of Oakland several hundred dollars each year in premiums and at the same time they are enabled to carry the same line of insurance on their properties.

The notice received by the local insurance agency this morning read as follows:

"As a result of the improvements in fire defenses, the deficiency charge has been reduced from 21 cents to 13 cents. All specific rates on mercantile risks, except those of fire resistive construction or sprinklered, located under protection in Oakland, and promulgated prior to 5-2-1927, are subjest to reduction of 8 cents per $100 of insurance per annum, when shall be deducted before the application of the percentage advances."

TO GIVE BENEFIT PICTURE FOR FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY

"Jim The Conqueror" To Be The Attraction Next Wednesday

"Jim the Conqueror," a picture for the benefit of the Garrett County Free Public Library, will be shown at the Maryland Theatre, Wednesday, February 15. The picture is one of Peter B. Kyne's best stories, featuring William Boyd and Elenor Fair. There will be special music and the Oakland orchestra, Mr. Gilbert, directing. The usual admission of 15 and 35 cents will be charged.

The library, which is now located in the Garrett National Bank Building, is being widely used by an increasing number each year. More than 150 volumes have been added during the past year, most of them the gift of friends. These include some of the very best recent publications such as Durant's "The Story of Philosophy" and Luther Burbank's "Method and Discovery." Twenty-five new volumes have been added to the children's department, including stories such as "Uncle Remus" and the animal stories so popular with the juveniles.

A larger and better reference library for the students of the high school is one of the aims of the library board and to this end it is hoped the public will give its endorsement by patronizing very liberally the attraction at the Maryland Theatre on the evening of the 15th inst.

THE LITTLE BOY KING WHO PREFERS HIS NURSERY TO THRONE

Audiences with King Michael of Rumania, even though he reached only his sixth birthday October 25 and is the youngest monarch on a throne, leaves out none of the rules and conventions that surround the lives of grown-up royalty.

An elaborate entourage protects him against the indiscreet and the curious. First, whoever would come into the royal presence must pass M. Iliotu, the minister of the palace, who examines with great care all requests for interviews with his majesty and admits only those persons whom he regards as serious and deserving of consideration.

When one obtains M. Iliotu's approval and arrives at the royal palace in the hope of seeing the king, one is received by General Condeescu, chief of the military staff of the palace, and by him passed on to Commander Merdares.

Merdares occupies a special position at the palace. Officially he is the officer de'ordonnance, or aide de camp of the king. Actually he is his playmate. An excellent mechanic, there is nobody quite like him, in his majesty's opinion, for fixing a broken toy. One may well imagine that a king would have plenty of toys. Michael has, but he also damages a lot of them, so he often has need of a person possessing Meradares's aptitude.

Prefers Nursery to Throne.

It has been reported that Michael was a bashful child This opinion resulted from the fact that on the day when the address from the throne was read to parliament and the legislators arose and acclaimed the new monarch, the king clung timidly to the skirt of his mother and large tears rolled down his cheeks. But a child so young scarcely could have been expected to assume suddenly the poise appropriate to a ruler and to appear entirely at ease in such solemn circumstances.

In the privacy of his nursery, which he much prefers to his throne-room, Michael is as friendly and approachable as one could wish. He has blonde hair, blue eyes, a roguish mouth. One can only describe him as a charming little fellow.

Michael talks chiefly in English. He is being reared by an English nurse who has spent twenty-five years as governess to royal children of the Balkans. There is still another reason for Michael speaking English: it has long been the language of the Rumanian court.

Conscious of His Position.

Though affable in his greeting, Michael is conscious of the dignity of his position. This is clear to any one who has seen him make a bow or give a military salute. He exhibits a solemn gallantry toward women and always kisses their hands.

The young king is, of course, receiving a very careful education. The Princess Helen, since her husband, the former Crown Prince Carol, wandered away from his family and gave up his rights to the throne, has had only one preoccupation, that of watching over the health and instruction of her son.

Several tutors share the responsibility for directing Michael's studies. A physical instructor gives him lessons three times a week. With the same frequency he goes horseback riding, exhibiting real nerve in mounting a prancing and lively pony. The king is so attached to his pony that he often asks to be allowed to take it into his nursery with him as he does his other playthings. He was somewhat taken aback upon being told that even a king could not do such a thing and regarded the denial as a grave injustice.

A Courageous Child.

Michael is a courageous child. He is not afraid of the dark or of thunder. There is only one thing he especially dreads: Motor car accidents. This apprehension dates from two years ago. Carol, who was then still making his home in the Palace at Bucharest, was in a dangerous collision. He was taken from beneath his car badly injured. Michael saw his father brought home uneonscious and bleeding, and he has never forgotten the sight.

His other memories of his father, apart from this accident, are also very vivid. Up to the age of 4 Michael found in him an affectionate companion and playmate. The absence of Carol and the sadness of the princess, his mother, apparently are associated in the mind of the child, who wishes that the father of whom he was so fond would return and play with him again.

It is assumed that the memory of Carol is kept alive in the boy king's mind by his grandmother, Queen Marie, whom he sees every day at the palace. For, in spite of his faults and vagaries, Carol remains for Marie a favorite child, in whom she takes perhaps an even greater interest since the death of King Ferdinand.

The King Was Spanked.

The former King George of Greece and his consort, the uncle and aunt of Michael (the former queen of Greece being a daughter of Marie) are also among those surrounding the young king.

Michael, who has traveled a good deal in his short career, has seen other palaces than his own. Last year he was a guest of the king of Italy. Victor Emmanuel, who likes children, is very popular with them. On his visit to Rome, Michael found for a playmate a little girl of his own age, his cousin and the daughter of another former Greek king. They got on very well, except one day when she teased him too much. Michael forgot his gallantry for a moment then and the two had to be separated. On that day Michael was spanked.—New York Times.

RED HOUSE.

Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Waybright, who spent last week visiting relatives and friends at Gettysburg and at points in Maryland, returned to Red House on Saturday.

The Red House Lutheran congregation members have subscribed $340 of their quota of $500 to the ministers' pension fund.

The official board and members of St. John's church at a recent meeting voted to expend the sum of $500 for repairs and for the purpose of redecorating the interior of the church.

Rev. Waybright, during his pastorrate of six months, has succeeded in awakening new spiritual life in the members of his congregation. He believes in doing things and he keeps every member of the church busy at some task for the church. The Sunday school has increased nearly forty per cent in membership and is still growing.

Everybody in this community expects the West Penn interests to begin work on the extension of its service through this section at an early date. More than the required number have subscribed to meet the requirements of the company.

The Red House school will have a parent-teacher meeting on February 9. The pupils of the school will present a short play.

Guests at a radio party at the home of Ray Mosser on Saturday were Mr. and Mrs. Harmon Rolf and daughter and Mrs. and Mrs. Ira Miller and son Ivan.

PRESIDENCY IS NOT FOR GOVERNOR SMITH.

While all indications point to the nomination of Governor Smith by the Democrats, he will never be elected President. This statement is made at this time deliberately for the purpose of establishing a printed record to which reference can later be made.

The defeat of Governor Smith is not predicted on his loss of any of the Southern States. Notwithstanding the many promises and propheeies being made, the votes of the Southern States in the electoral college will be recorded for Governor Smith. There are plenty of voters in the South who do not like him, but all the election machinery in that territory is made in a Democratic mould, and no matter what the people think, the votes are always counted in the Democratic column.

Al Smith will be defeated by the border States, the New England States, Pennsylvania, the Middle Western States and the Pacific Coast States. Sustaining figures can easily be had (and there is no need of making a tabulation) and his defeat, it should be said, will come first of all by reason of the fact that this is a Republican country, but the totals will be increased by reason of antipathy toward his wetness.

The campaign will be a lively and striking one. It will be full of worries and doubts. On or about the middle of September the metropolitan newspapers will begin to broadcast Smith's election, and there will be enough signs in the air to apparently justify those predictions. This will cause a flutter in a lot of Democratic and Republican dove cotes. But election day will result in a decisive vote against the Democratic nominee.

THAT FARM SURPLUS.

The deflation of the farmer started in 1921 and since that time it has been the assertion of so-called farm experts that the troubles of the tiller of the soil have been due to his surplus. The experts have asserted that he ought to cut production in order to increase the price, yet it is a well known fact that the less the individual farmer raises the less money he is going to get for his crop. The farmer has ignored this advice to cut production and in doing this, according to some writers who have studied the subject, he has shown good judgment.

William Thompson, in an interesting article in Farm Life, declares that a great deal of the overloading of our farm markets is due to importations. Mr. Thompson quotes Secretary of Commerce Hoover in the assertion that each year we are importing from foreign countries a billion dollars worth of products which we might as well be raising for ourselves. And it may be said in passing that a billion dollars added to the farm receipts each year would be decidedly important to the farmer.

Continuing, Mr. Thompson says:

"Lets open our minds to the full meaning of this situation. What it signifies is that in just the last few years, 2,000,000 American farm folks have been thrown out of their homes, forced off the land into towns and cities, to make a market here in this country for peanut oil and low grade eggs from China, for cocoanut oil from the Philippines, cattle hides from Argentina, cheese from Italy and Switzerland, wool from Australia, silk from Japan, and flax, fruit, vegetables, rice, nuts and many other products from up and down the wide world.

"It isn't only that we have imported $1,000,000,000 worth of such things which have taken the place of products from our own farms, but the competition of these imports in our home markets has lowered the price there of every farm product from alfalfa to oranges. It has forced us to export heavily to foreign markets, which has cheapened our entire farm output.

"Doubtless the total loss thus inflicted on American farmers would have kept the families on the land that have been squeezed off, besides adding to the prosperity of those who have survived the competition.

"We import, for instance, hundreds of millions of pounds of vegetable oils every year. Add our big cheese imparts to the portion of these oils that is made into butter substitutes, and it means the displacement of about 800,000 cows that might be making a home market for alfalfa, corn and other feeds."

It is rather encouraging to note that many of our statesmen who make a practice of studying farm conditions, now fully realize the importance which our tariff laws have for the farmers. Instead of lower tariffs they are asking for increased duties on products which compete with the things raised on our American farms. If tinkering with the tariff is ever to help the farmers it will not be in lowering schedules but increasing the rates on imported agricultural products.

Alcohol and Medicine.

There is no single disease in the world of which alcohol is the cure. This fact is well known to science, is now generally admitted by progressive members of the medical profession, but is rarely made clear to the layman. The purpose of medicine is to cure disease. Since alcohol cures no disease it is not a medicine. It has no place in medical practice.

These facts have not been established so very long. They run counter to beliefs that have been held for generations and are hard to displace. Yet a bit of straight thinking on them is of importance to all the people of the world. The effects of alcohol upon the mind and body of man have had very careful study during this generation. That study crowded alcohol first from the field of curative medicines into the realm of stimulants, then from the field of stimulants to the company of depressants. It is now well known that alcohol does not cure, does not stimulate. It decrases, lessens mental or physical vitality. It creates only an illusion of vigor that does not exist.

Yet the drinker believes himself stimulated. To him his faculties seem much alive. As a matter of fact they have been clouded, and it is the haze of them that mellows all about him. The power of reasoning, of quick judgment, of effective action, has been inhibited, but he knows it not.

In the days of our grandfathers nearly all physicians prescribed liquor. Even a generation ago the practice was still general. That past generation that so freely prescribed whiskey, had another practice, that of bleeding the patient, which has now been abandoned. The reverse operation, blood transfusion, has taken its place. That generation put whiskey into the patient and took blood out of him. Modern practice, reversing the process, takes the whiskey out of him and puts blood into him.—Dr. Howard A. Kelly, in World's Work.

THE PENALTY OF SELFISHNESS

Imagine a rose that would say to itself, "I cannot afford to give away my sweetness; I must save it for myself. I will close up my petals and withhold my fragrance."

But, lo! the moment the rose tries to store up its treasures of fragrance and color, to withhold them from others, they vanish. These qalities do not exist in the unopened bud. It is only when the rose begins to unfold, to share its sweetness, its life, with others, that its beauty and fragrance are developed.

So human selfishness defeats its own ends. He who refuses to give himself to others, who closes the petals of his charity and withholds the fragrance of his sympathy and love, finds that he loses the very thing he tries to keep.

He that saveth his life shall lose it; but he that loseth his life, for Christ's sake, and for humanity's, shall save it.

CAUTION URGED IN WINTER DRIVING IN MOUNTAINS

While There Has Been Little Snow in Oakland There Has Been Much On National Pike

While Oakland has been remarkably free from snow this winter, there has been almost the usual amount on the National Highway at points both east and west of Keyser's Ridge, and road officials and State police have joined in urging more care on the part of motorists during the remainder of the winter.

"Drivers generally," says a statement, "are prone to forget the lessons of other winters, particularly since up to this time road conditions have been almost ideal for motoring.

"From now on it is likely there will be real winter conditions to contend with, and the motorist who is not alert and careful will find himself in serious trouble. No driver who has any regard for his own safety and others will drive at high speed with chances of accident largely increased by the presence of ice and snow on the roadway. It is not in high speed alone that the danger lies, however. Even at a moderate rate cars get out of control if not operated with due regard to the nature of the traction afforded.

"Quick application of the brakes is likely to produce disastrous skids. This is particularly true when brakes are not equalized. By braking with the engine in gear, the driver greatly reduces the possibility of skid. Practice of many drivers in throwing out the clutch and applying the brakes has been responsible for many accidents.

"While most of the main traveled highways are open to traffic, thanks to the efficiency of the State Highways Department, it is a mistake for drivers to assume that they can operate the same as under summer conditions. One never knows when another car is going to appear suddenly from a side road, necessitating a quick stop that in all probability cannot be made because of the lack of traction.

Local Lutherans Over-Subscribe Ministerial Fund Quota.

St. Mark's Lutheran church, Oakland, over-subscribed by several hundred dollars, its quota of $1,300 in the campaign made on Sunday to raise $4,000,000 for its aged and dependent ministers, their widows and children, according to Mr. Julius C. Renninger, who had charge of the matter as chairman of the local canvassers and who is also president of the official board of the church. The entire United Lutheran Church in America participated in the raising of this fund. The campaign will close on Sunday, February 12.

Fifteen teams, composed of men of the church and of the Lutheran Brotherhood of St. Mark's, conducted the canvass. The final report of the teams will be made on Sunday morning.

Oakland High School Notes of News Interest.

Report cards for the quarter were given out on Tuesday afternoon, February 6. These cards give the rating for the work done in the previous quarter, the result of the mid-year examination work and the general average for the first half year. Have you seen your children's report cards? Have you examined them carefully? No parent should be satisfied with D's or C's on a pupil's card. Find out what is wrong at once. Perhaps a little more study on the part of the pupil is all that is needed for success in school work.

McComas' Team Nosed Out in Final Minutes of Play.

The Catholics tightened their hold on the league basketball leadership for the second round when they nosed out the Presbyterians in the second game Tuesday night at Naylor's Hall, 28-23. Mountain Lake Park was victorious over the Lutherans by the score of 29-21.

The Catholics had to put on a desperate rally in the closing minutes of play to win from the Presbyterians. Nally and D. Helbig each scored four field goals for the Catholics, while McComas and Wolf scored six and five goals respectively for the losing side.

The Lutherans were leading at the end of the first half, 15-10, but the Mountain Lake players extended themselves in the final frame. Stemple and W. McRobie each made six baskets for the winning team, while Hanst scored six goals for the Lutherans. Hoffman played a good floor game and caged two two-pointers.

Other scores made were Graves, 1; Kahl, 1; Jack McRobie, 2; Rice, 2; Maroney, 2; C. Helbig, 2.

Next Monday night, February 13, Mountain Lake will meet the Presbyterians and the Lutherans will meet the High School.

"Four Horsemen" Entertain.

About thirty couples were present at a dance given last Thursday evening at Naylor's Hall, the hosts being "The Four Horsemen." Refreshments, consisting of punch, cakes and mints, were served throughout the evening and during a short intermission two specialty acts were presented for the entertainment of the assembled guests. Local decorators were responsible for the unique manner in which the hall was embellished and garnished. Paul Whiteman, Al Jolson and others furnished th edance music through the use of Carroll Elliott's Kolster electric victrola.

TRANSATLANTIC TELEPHONE CONNECTIONS NOW AVAILABLE TO CONTINENTAL EOROPE

Conversations May Be Carried On From More Than 18,000,000 Telephones In The United States To Points In Belgium And Holland

Transatlantic telephone service has recently been extended to points in Belgium and the Netherlands. With this extension there are now 1,836,500 telephones across the Atlantic available to telephone users in this country. The service to Antwerp and Brussels, Belgium was inaugurated January 19 and that of the Netherlands including Amsterdam, Rotterdam and The Hague, January 30.

The hours of operation for transatlantic telephone service to Belgian and Dutch points will be from 7:30 A. M. to 6 P. M. Eastern Standard Time, the same as that now in use for British points.

The American-Belgium-Netherlands service is of particular interest because of the varied forms of travel which the voice currents of the respective speakers will utilize in intercommunicating in a small fraction of a second's time. From the American subscriber's telephone the message will travel by wire to the local telephone office and then to the New York long distance office. Here the transatlantic trip begins, the first step being over a circuit of 70 miles to Rocky Point, L. I., where the radio transmitter is located. At that point intricate and powerful apparatus amplifies the power of the voice a hundred million times and converts it to radio waves which one-sixtieth of a second later are picked up by a radio receiver at Cupar, Scotland. After this 32,000 mile journey the words need further amplification to begin the link of 450 miles of telephone circuit to London.

Arriving at the London long distance switchboard of the British Post Office near St. Paul's Cathedral, the voice currents to Belgian cities continue their journey 71 miles through Canterbury to Margate. Here they enter a submarine telephone cable just north of the Strait of Dover and after 60 miles of under-water travel they emerge again near Ostend, Belgium. From here they continue 70 miles through Ghent to Brussels, and thence 29 miles to Antwerp.

Calls to Dutch subscribers will be reached by means of a submarine telephone cable under the North Sea, which establishes direct communication between London and Amsterdam, Rotterdam and The Hague.

COMMUNICATION ACHIEVEMENTS MARK PROGRESS OF COONTRY DURING 1927

Transatlantic Telephone Service; Television; Opening Of The Third Transcontinental Line; And Extension Of Long Distance Service To Mexico And Saskatchewan Among Notable Events

A review of last year's telephone progress shows conclusively that there was no diminution in the development of the systems in the United States. According to telephone officials there are now about 18,700,000 telephones in this country, a net gain of more than 750,000 during the past year. The wire plant of the telephone companies, now estimated to be about 62,000,000 miles, was increased by about 5,000,000 miles during 1927.

Constantly people are finding new uses for telephone service and at the close of 1927 there was a daily average of over 72,500,000 conversations made in the United States. This means an average of 205.8 conversations for each man, woman and child in this country.

The advancement and development of the telephone art last year resulted in transatlantic radio telephone connections to Great Britain and long distance service to the principal cities in Mexico, and Saskatchewan, Canada. Television, seeing by telephone, was also demonstrated before large audiences.

Emphasizing the necessity for transcontinental telephone service, a third cross country line was placed in operation between Minneapolis and Spokane, Seattle and Portland, Oregon, early in the year. This line supplements the original transcontinental line extending from New York to San Francisco and a southern route connecting New Orleans, Dallas, El Paso and Los Angeles. The latter line was opened to public service about four years ago.

Research and development devoted both to physical things and to methods of operation have been perhaps the most important basic factors in the phenomenal growth and general improvement in the quality of telephone service throughout the country. The gradual extension in the range of telephone communication (which, during 1927, was so vividly illustrated by the establishment of transatlantic telephone service) and such by-products of [illegible] transmission

Throughout the past year the Bell System research organization, comprising over 4,000 engineers, physicists, chemists and other scientists and their assistants, employed in the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc., and the Department of Development and Research of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, have continued their tireless search along many lines of technical investigation for adaptations and improvements in telephone apparatus and methods, whereby the speed, quality and economy of telephone service may be further enhanced.

It is a far cry from Alexander Graham Bell, working with one assistant in a Boston attic, where he discovered the principle of the telephone, to these highly organized groups devoted to research and development, which are constantly subjecting to the most minute scrutiny and investigation every phase of the science of communication which has to do with telephone service

Those who kick about working continually have this little problem to think over:

There are 365 days in a year. We sleep eight hours each day or a total of 121 days. We rest and have recreation eight hours each day. That makes 121 days more, which added together leaves 123 deays in the year. There are 52 Sundays in the year on which you are not expected to work—that leaves 71 days. Most people are given a half day on Saturday which makes a total of 26 days, leaving a grand remainder of 45 days. It takes an hour for each meal or three hours a day. That equals 45 days and subtract 45 days from the 45 which you had left and it gives you a remainder of 0. So you don't work at all.

Clurp Comes To Keyser.

Gilbert Clurp, columnist writer, formerly of the Morgantown Post, Morgantown, W. Va., has arrived in Keyser, according to the Mountain Echo, and will take charge of the Echo's gossip and humor column, which is nothing short of what Scoop really expected long ago.

In the days of yore when Clurp and Scoop attended a State institution (not penal) together, it was Clurp's wont to sit at the typewriter and rattle off two or three pages of "funny stuff" instead of writing deep-thought editorials, as he was supposed to do.

As a result, Clurp gave up his editorial work on May 6 (there was a reason) and secluded himself until a few days ago when he appeared in Keyser. Whether his sojourn in the wilderness was for the good of the people of Keyser is a question that can only be answered by time. But anybody with a middle name like his could get along anywhere.

But since it is now
I must bear it, and how?

Too Many For First Prize.

Since offering one pfennig, one franc and a Canadian dime to the first three people who sent in the correct name of the paper which once upon a time carried so much self-praise on the front page that there was nothing much else in it, Scoop has been utterly swamped with answers, and strangely or not, everyone has sent in the correct answer.

This is not so bad, but everybody wants first prize or none at all. It seems that the pfennig is a heavy favorite and as a result Scoop is at a standstill. One answer, which incidentally was so long that Scoop never finished reading it (it was from Russell Brown, the gas man), even went s ofar as to demand the pfennig. Part of the letter was as follows:

"The above answer is correct. I know it, and therefore demand the pfennig. I must have it as I am going to Baltimore (maybe)". The rest of the letter told about Baltimore attractiveness.

Since offering these rewards, Scoop has passed these foreign coins for good U. S. money and therefore withdraws his offer and declares everything off.

BETHLEHEM.

As we haven't seen any news in The Republican from our little village for some time, we shall try to pen the recent happenings of the community.

The ground hog certainly saw his shadow but as yet we have not felt any ill effects the sun had on his bad temper.

Mr. Elmer Lish has purchased a new truck and has been hauling ties and props for quite a while.

The saw mill of Charles and George Harvey, which burned two weeks ago, will likely be rebuilt in the near future.

Mr. Ashful King, of Deer Park, was in our community on business one day last week.

Miss Marie Tasker is in Deer Park for the present.

We are very glad to know that Emery Tasker, who had the misfortune of being injured when a tree in falling struck him, is able to be out again.

Mr. and Mrs. Noah Bittner are expecting to move to Hubbard, W. Va., in a short time.

Mrs. J. T. Moon spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. W. H. Steyer, at Ryan's Glade, last week.

Messrs. Russell and Charles White, of Highland, are frequent visitors in our community.

Miss Esther Holzshu, our school teacher, spent the week-end at her home in Lonaconing, Md.

J. T. Moon has purchased a German police dog. The animal appears to be a splendid type.

Some of our noted fox hunters succeeded in capturing a very large red fox one day last week.

Results of our Want Ads are surprising. They usually make returns.

GRANTSVILLE.

By G. W. Diefenbach

Celebrated 97th Anniversary.

Jonas J. Beachy celebrated his 97th anniversary on Monday, February 5. He no longer goes about his farm, but is able to take care of himself very well; sleeps until noon of each day and enjoys his food immensely. He is interested in the happenings of the day and in all new things, such as the airplane, radio, electricity and other modern inventions and contrivances. Though he cannot read because of failing sight, he does not lose interest in the every-day world. He has acquired a fondness for chewing gum, too. He is truly young in spirit, although quite old in years. His friends and acquaintances often express their desire to see him reach the century mark.

Mrs. Daniel Hoover.

Suffering intensely during the last two weeks of her life from the effects of cancer, Mrs. Annie Stark Hoover passed away at her home, about one and one-half miles west of Jennings on January 27th. She was 61 years of age. The funeral services were held on Monday from the Jennings Lutheran church, Rev. E. E. Campbell officiating, and burial by Undertaker Winterberg in the Bittinger cemetery. She is survived by four children: Mrs. Lillie Swauger, Mrs. Walter Beitzell, Ferry and Irvin Hoover, all of whom live near the home.

Illnesses Noted.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bittinger, as the result of a long continued illness of a year's duration, suffered a severe sinking spell on Sunday night, but has rallied, although very weak.

Mrs. Henry Patton, who is suffering as the result of a stroke of paralysis, is growing slightly better at her home west of town.

Mrs. Orlando Glotfelty and children are ill with the grip.

Black Face Show.

The W. O. w. minstrel troupe is putting the finishing touches to their show which will be given in the hall on Friday and Saturday nights of the present week. Those who know claim it is the best yet, and they always have a pleasing mixture of dances, songs, black face jokes and acts.

Ladies' Aid Meetings.

The Methodist Ladies' Aid Society held its meeting on Thursday last at the home of Mrs. H. C. Edwards. Following the devotions, led by Rev. J. E. Johnson, the afternoon was given over to sewing which was followed by a two-course luncheon. There were a number of visitors present, including Mrs. Eva Beachy, Mrs. Mary Livengood, Mrs. Ed. Meager, Mrs. Olive Zeller, Mrs. Cynthia Durst, Mrs. Martha Diehl, Mrs. Rhoda Paul and Mrs. Orpah Rodamer.

On Wednesday of this week, the Reformed Ladies' Aid held an all-day meeting in the home of Mrs. Mary Livengood. Two quilts were made and other sewing done. Beside the members there were a number of guests present from the other women's organizations of the town. The hostess served a bounteous dinner to her guests at mid-day.

Missionary Societies Meet.

The Reformed Missionary Society held its regular meeting last Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John H. Folk. The president, Mrs. B. H. Bender, presided and Miss Ruth Keller gave an enlightening talk on "Religious Education in China, the Starting Point in the Home." The attendance was good.

The Lutheran Missionary Society met in the home of Miss Christina Winterberg on Tuesday afternoon. About twenty members were in attendance with two visitors also present. Mrs. Helen Loechel Keim was the leader. The hostess served refreshments.

Mrs. Zeller Entertains.

Mrs. C. S. Zeller entertained on last Thursday afternoon with five tables of bridge, followed with a delicious luncheon. The guests were Mrs. Fred Livengood, Mrs. E. B. Keller, Mrs. Harold Miller, Mrs. Marshall Beachy, Mrs. Harry Edwards, Mrs. Harvey Gortner, Mrs. C. A. Bender, Mrs. V. L. Blocher, Mrs. Nevin Broadwater, Mrs. Annie E. Getty, Mrs. N. R. Davis, Mrs. Harry Bender, Mrs. C. H. Bill, Mrs. Joseph Fahey, Mrs. Edward Meager, Misses Eva Falkenstein, Ruth Stanton, Mary C. Dorsey, Esther Zehner, Lena Hamburg and Ida Friese. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Keller, high; Mrs. Harold Miller, consolation, and Miss Edith Bittinger, guest.

WHEN THE EXECUTIVE SPEAKS

(© by D. J. Walsh.)

JAMES CRAWFORD, lone clerk in the offices of Morrell & Bates, with duties that ranged from office boy to bookkeeper, shook his head dubiously as the other man, large of stature and florid of countenance, poked his finger at him.

"Come, now," the other, G. Hammon, spoke with jovial severity—"come, now, own up! You feel a little guilty, don't you? I bet you do! I know you, Crawford, and I know you want to do the right thing!"

There was a pause. Both men looked at a stretch of ground at their feet. "Of course"—Hammon cleared his throat—"of course, if it was not I like you as a neighbor, why, then you know there are ways of forcing the issue."

"Surely," he tried to make his tone offhand, bold, "surely! I want to do the right thing." If he had only stopped it might not have sounded so bad, but he had to add pleadingly: "You know that, George!" Clerking in an office for twenty years, raising sweet peas and flowers and getting the grand sum of $30 every Saturday night does not, however, inspire great courage.

George Hammon nodded. "I thought so!" He stepped forward, right—James nearly cried out a protest—right into the middle of the flower bed. There he paused. He looked blandly at Mr. Crawford. "I figure," he said, "the line should be here. This will fix things up so you don't have to move the garage. Right across from the garage," he sputtered, "to here! Now you and I will just drive a stake or two to determine the line."

"But," Mr. Crawford tried to summon up stern words like "Get off," "Keep off."

"I remember," Mr. Hammon, scrutinizing, did not hear the "but." "Remember when Jim Lowell of the Arcade fixed up a similar case in just the way we are going to settle this."

"But," this time the panic in Mr. Crawford's tone drew attention—"but," weakly, "I want to think it over, George! You see—I thought I owned this!"

Once safely at home Mr. Crawford, clerk in the offices of Morrell & Bates, wiped the sweat off his brow and sank limply into a chair. He knew what the end would be. 'Twould end the same as the painting of his garage—the same as the sweet-pea bed. He would give in.

Mr. Crawford reviewed the events of the last month while looking mournfully toward the back of his suburban lot.

And then, complicating things, G. Hammon had appeared. First, indeed, Mr. Crawford had welcomed his coming. It had been visible proof of his own wisdom in buying and building at the Maple Grove subdivision. It meant that a development was taking place. But—Mr. Crawford himself could not understand it—soon he secretly found himself wishing Mr. Hammon had never come. Secretly—openly he would not have dared to state the fact. Mr. Hammon with his bold semijovial ways, who knew and talked freely about his friends, his influential friends! Mr. Crawford wished he knew some influential people. He would have liked their advice now. Of course there was Alice, his wife. But, then—Mr. Crawford mentally squirmed—he hated to alarm her, and—

Things had come to a climax through the sweet-pea bed in the rear of the lot. Mr. Hammon had scoffed—a friendly bantering tone—about the peas. It seemed he did not like them. Dahlias, now—they were the flowers for the rear of a lot! James knew the tone. He had heard it before when he wanted to paint the garage white and Mr. Hammon, quoting big men's estate, urged for yellow. The garage was painted yellow. So nervously Mr. Crawford agreed that there were lots to be said for dahlias—lots.

"Sure," Mr. Hammon's tone boomed out. "And, Crawford, I'll just tell you—of course we ... old not fight over it—but peas are ...d—d nuisance near a line, a nuisance! They fall over on the other fellow's land—you see?"

Mr. Crawford nodded. The sweet pea along the back with its mass of delicate blossoms was his pride. Yet he nodded—judiciously.

"You see?" A pause. "I knew you would!" Mr. Hammon patted him jovially. "I knew you would! Now I'd yank them up. A row of dahlias now! Senator Norris—I lived next to him."

Mr. Crawford did not pay much attention to the story regarding Senator Norris. He was sick! He had agreed somehow, 'twas not clear how it had happened, to devastate his bed of peas—to plant dahlias! How or why he had done it he could not make out. But he had!

"My deed only calls," he had said grandly, "to here. But I've got," he paced off to the back of the sweet-pea bed, "to here!"

'Twas true. Paying when Maple Grove was a mere field, it had so happened—his land overran his deed.

Mr. Hammon nodded. He still was extolling dahlias—talking of friends of his that raised them—gorgeous dahlias.

Mr. Crawford was a little peeved. He wished that Mr. Hammon had been impressed. Somehow it would have taken away a little from the sting of his giving in regarding the sweet-pea bed.

But now—he sat dejectedly on the back porch—now—he cursed himself for a fool.

The bomb had exploded.

It had come about a week later.

"I guess," Mr. Hammon had strutted over to the line one evening, "I guess, Crawford, we had better fix up the line between us." Pompously, "Lines can cause trouble and you and I don't want trouble."

At first Mr. Crawford had not understood. Fix up the line! Why, it had always been fixed. Five feet back of his garage it was.

And when Mr. Hammon stepped into the sweet-pea bed—it had not been torn up yet—when he stepped into the sweet pea bed and indicated a spot roughly five feet from the back of it, Mr. Crawford was aghast.

"But, but," it did seem for a moment as if his courage would last, he started to protest.

"Now," Mr. Hammon spoke with a gentle firmness, yet with finality. "Here we are. We can settle this ourselves." Mr. Crawford spoke. "But," Mr. Hammon had turned, "but now, Crawford, you know you have more land than your deed calls for! Your land overruns your deed. You said so." There was injured surprise in Mr. Hammon's tone.

It was true! That Mr. Hammon might forever have all the land his own deed called for or even more, that his too might overrun, Mr. Crawford did not think of till later, and then he did not have the courage to bring the question up.

"You want to do right, Crawford," Mr. Hammon had spoken. "You want to, I know. And," there followed endless tales of big friends—lawsuits, costs.

And so Mr. Crawford sat sick at heart. He would give in—he would! Lawsuits, he vividly recollected some of Mr. Hammon's tales! Lawsuits cost money. And $5 a week, even if you had a good garden, did not give one money—much money!

"Well," Mr. Crawford arose slowly. He would go over. He might as well. His narrow escape from hitting a clothes pole Mr. Crawford laid to forgetfulness, but there might have been a trace of dampness on Mr. Crawford's handkerchief if he had wiped his eyes. He hated—hated this Mr. Hammon, Mr. Hammon and his influential friends.

Out of sight in the darkness by Mr. Hammon's porch, Mr. Crawford paused. Five minutes' respite—'twould do Mr. Hammon no harm and he would have the five minutes before he smilingly agreed to the new line.

"A great neighborhood," Mr. Hammon's voice rang out. Evidently he had visitors. "A great neighborhood! Big development coming! And influential people—why," Mr. Crawford started as some man evidently living in the neighborhood was described. Some way he ought to know that man, his description sounded familiar. Yet Mr. Crawford could not place him.

"A big man," Mr. Hammon spoke on. "In the offices of Morrell & Bates—chief executive, you might say."

Mr. Crawford jumped. Morrell & Bates! Now he recognized the description. 'Twas himself, Mr. Hammon was speaking of—himself as he had never even imagined he could be—himself glorified.

"Chief executive. They say," Mr. Hammon lowered his voice as he talked to the visitor, but Mr. Crawford, edging nearer, heard every word, and was astounded at the information regarding his own work he received. "Executive—quite a land owner—simple in tastes maybe, but—"

Suddenly Mr. Crawford thought of that head man in Judge Tuppe's law office, of Bates of the Amalgamated. He wanted to laugh! He wondered—wondered if they would recognize themselves if they had heard Hammon talk of them.

Then Mr. Crawford recollected why he had come.

"His house is just back of me—land adjoins," Mr. Hammon was saying. "Just think!" Hammon's voice had awe in it. "Just think—chief executive of Morrell & Bates!"

They were moving. Mr. Hammon and his guests, down the walk. The ten o'clock train would soon be puffing cityward. Evidently they were going to the station.

Hurriedly Mr. Crawford stepped out. He must speak! Tomorrow he would be clerk—clerk in the offices of Morrell & Bates. But tonight he was the chief executive!

"I say, Hammon," Mr. Crawford was amazed at himself—no "Mr. Hammon," no conciliatory "George"—"I say, Hammon—about that line!"

Mr. Hammon turned.

"I just want to tell you it suits me where it is and it stays there!"

Mr. Hammon's mouth dropped open.

"Suits me where it is! I don't want trouble but—"

"Oh, all right—all right." Mr. Hammon did not seem to talk so big. There seemed to be a trace of panic in his voice.

"And the pens," Mr. Crawford was speaking fast. "I've decided to keep them. You had better," Mr. Crawford knew his voice sounded cold, concise, "had better build a fence back of them. You understand!"

"Surely," Mr. Hammon did not—had not the slightest misunderstanding of what had happened. There was a change in the man before him. That he knew! "Surely." Then as Mr. Crawford was turning Mr. Crawford heard him whisper: "That is the Mr Crawford I was talking about—the chief executive in the offices of Morrell & Bates."

Lesson for February 12

JESUS PICTURES THE KINGDOM OF GOD

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:14,15; 4:1-34.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God's Kingdom Grows.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How God's Kingdom Grows.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How the Kingdom Grows.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Growing Kingdom of God.

I. Jesus Preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom of God (Mark 1:14, 15).

1. The time.

After the voice of John the Baptist was stilled because of his imprisonment, Jesus took up the message

2. What He preached.

It was the gospel of the kingdom of God. Since "gospel" means "good news," the good news which He preached was that Christ had come to establish His kingdom.

3. How He preached.

"He said, 'Repent, for the kingdom is at hand.' The King was then ready to set up His kingdom if the Jews would receive Him.

II. Jesus Pictures Four Classes of Hearers (Mark 4:1-20).

1. The place—the seaside—(v. 1).

He was obliged to enter a boat to escape the pressure of the crowd.

2. Why He taught in parables (vv. 9-12).

It was not until the rulers had set their hearts against Him that He employed the parabolic method.

3. The parable of the four kinds of ground (vv. 3-8; 13-20).

Observe that the seed and the sower are the same in all these instances, but the results are entirely different, determined by the condition of the soil.

(1) The Wayside (vv. 14, 15).

The wayside means the track beaten by the hoofs of animals and the feet of men. Because the soil was unbroken and uncultivated the seed could not get beneath the surface therefore was devoured by fowls which represent the agents of Satan (v. 15).

(2) The stony ground (vv. 5, 6, 16, 17).

Stony ground means stones with a thin layer of soil upon them. Under such conditions the seed springs up quickly and is soon scorched because it has not much depth.

(3) The thorny ground (vv. 7, 18, 19).

In this case the ground is good, but has thorns in it. It is mellow and has depth, but has not been cleaned of the thorns. The thorny ground hearers of this age are: (a) Those who are so immersed in worldliness, business and anxious care that the good seed cannot mature; (b) those who are rich. The effect of riches is often to blind the spiritual perceptions; (c) those who are running after the pleasures of life. All these things choke the Word.

4. The good ground (vv. 8, 20).

This ground differs from all the rest. It is soft and mellow, deep and moist, therefore is capable of bringing forth fruit in varying degrees of abundance.

III. Jesus Pictures the Growth of the Kingdom (Mark 4:21-34).

1. The parable of the candle (vv. 21-25).

The bushel stands for the cares and material things of life, and the bed for ease and comfort.

2. The parable of the growing grain (vv. 26-29).

(1) The attitude of mind of the gospel preacher (vv. 26, 27).

He should with the utmost fidelity cast seed into the ground, preach the Word, and leave results to God.

(2) The processes of the spiritual life are gradual (v. 28). It is "first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear."

(3) The consummation of the spiritual process (v. 29).

Despite the difficulty under which sowing is done, we can be assured of a harvest time.

3.—The parable of the mustard seed (vv. 30-34).

(1) The unimportant beginning (v. 31).

2) Its vigorous growth (v. 32).

The greatest power on earth today is that which had its inception in the preaching of the gospel.

(3) Its lodging capacity (v. 32).

The birds which lodge in the branches represent the children of the evil one who find protection and food in that which was inaugurated by Jesus Christ.

Worship God

First worship God. He that forgets to pray bids not himself good-morrow or good-day.—T. Randolph.

Serving God

God is better served in resisting a temptation to evil than in many formal prayers.—William Penn.

The Soul

THREE TEAMS TIED FOR FIRST PLACE IN LEAGUE

Methodists, Postoffice and Gortner Have 1000 Per Cent Each

The second week of the second round of the Oakland Bowling League resulted in wins for Gortner, Methodists, Lutherans, K. of C., Crellin and the Postoffice, Gortner and the Methodists each taking three games from their opponents. Those who lost the majority of their games included the Ramblers, Merchants, Presbyterians and Rotary Club.

With the number of teams in the league narrowed down to ten, the interest seems to be strong and competition for first place will be much keener during the second half, it is predicted.

| | W. | L. | Pct. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Methodists | 6 | 0 | 1000 |
| Postoffice | 3 | 0 | 1000 |
| Gortner | 3 | 0 | 1000 |
| Rotary Club | 2 | 1 | 667 |
| Knights of Columbus. | 2 | 1 | 667 |
| Lutherans | 1 | 2 | 333 |
| Crellin | 1 | 2 | 333 |
| Presbyterians | 0 | 3 | 000 |

BETTER HEALTH FOR THE BABIES AND MOTHERS

Maryland Is Becoming Healthier Each Year, Says Department

Reports from the State Department of Health indicate that Maryland is becoming healthier each year for babies and mothers. The total number of infant deaths recorded in 1927—that is, of deaths under one year of age, was 1316. The total in 1926 was 1507. There were fewer deaths of mothers also—65 in 1927 and 74 in 1926. Checking these against the total births, it is shown that there were fewer than five deaths of mothers in each thousand births.

Commenting on the decrease, Dr. J. H. M. Knox, Jr., Chief of the State Bureau of Child Hygiene, said: "The records of the Department show a grndual decrease in the number of infant deaths in proportion to the number of births. But the number of baby denths is still far too great, benuse if we look further into the records we find that over half of the infant deaths that occur each year are due to preventable causes. The digestive diseases that come from improper feeding or that can be traced to carelessly handled milk, the infectuous diseases, such as whooping cough, measles and other so-called children's diseases, and the respiratory diseases—pneumonia, bronchitis and other diseases that attatek the air passages—all of them preventable—are responsible for fifty per cent of the total deaths under one year.

"We can help to cut down the number of deaths from the digestive diseases, the children's diseases and the respiratory diseases by care, by regular medical supervision and by prompt advice after the baby comes. Then there is nnother large group of baby deaths due to prematurity and general weakness and it is obvious that the only way by which we ean diminish these deaths is by care of the mother-to-be.

"We give earnest thought to the best ways of conserving and protecting our sources of material wealth—our industries, our factories, our business concerns, our mines and our forests. It is even more important to conserve and protect in every way the children upon whom the future of the State depends. As a potential citizen every baby has certain rights; First: healthy parents, free from transmissible disease. Second: Care of the mother-to-be, skilled care at birth and regular medical supervision during the critical weeks and months of infancy and throughout the whole period of young childhood.

CHESTNUT FARMS DAIRY TO LOCATE IN OAKLAND

This Assurance Given by Henry Brawner, President, at Dinner Saturday at William-James

The Chestnut Farms Dairy of Washington, D. C., will begin operations with a milk receiving station in Oakland on May 1, according to Henry Brawner, president of the company, who was here Saturday conferring with County Agent J. L. McGlone and a representative body of local business men, farmers and dairymen.

"We will have our plant completed by May 1," stated Mr. Brawner, "and at that time we will require at least eight hundred gallons of milk daily."

Continuing, Mr. Brawner stated that it was his hope to receive at least a thousand gallons of milk on that day with a continued increased until the county ecunld furnish to his company 6,000 gallons of milk daily, the amount required to operate a refrigerated tank car between Oakland and Washington, D. C.

Mr. Brawner, accompanied by Mr. W. V. Davison, general superintendent of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, and John P. Dugan, general baggage and milk agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, were here on Saturday and at a dinner served at the William-James Hotel, Mr. Brawner and Mr. Davison stated their requirement for locating the receiving station here, and their proposals were accepted by the thirty or more representative business men and farmers who attended the dinner.

Only two of the requirements for locating the receiving station here will be of much concern to the farmers of the community, it was said, and they are in reference to the remodeling to some extent the greater number of barns now on the farms in this section, and a tuberculin test to be made of all dairy cattle.

Proposed Sites Inspected

There were three sites for the location of the buildings under consideration on Saturday, and after inspection by Mr. Brawner and the superintendent of the dairy they felt that the old Glades Hotel lot located along the Baltimore and Ohio tracks and having an outlet on the alley near the Second street crossing, was the more adaptable for their purposes than either the site at Loch Lynn Heights or the one located west of Oakland near the Bradley farm.

The Glades Hotel lot is the property of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company and it is understood that it can be procured for a reasonable amount. Members of the Garrett dairy committee are now awaiting a reply from the real estate department of the railroad company concerning its purchase.

The plant to be constructed by the dairy company will cost from $10,000 to $15,000, it was estimated by Mr. Brawner.

Also to Handle Fresh Eggs.

In a letter from Mr. Dugan to Mr. McGlone it was stated that in connection with the handling of milk at the station by the Chestnut Farms Dairy, eggs will also be bought and shipped. In discussing this, Mr. Brawner, according to the letter from Mr. Dugan, said that he regretted he had not thought to mention it at the dinner, and that he would gladly find a fresh egg market for the community as an additional source of revenue.

Dewey Welch Placed Under Arrest Charged With Theft

Dewey Welch, aged about 25 years, of Rosedale, near Oakland, was taken into custody Tuesday evening by Deputy Sheriff Joy Griffith and is being held in the Garrett County Jail pending the arrival of authorities from West Virginia who will likely return with him to Morgantown where he is wanted for stealing automobile tires in and about the town, according to the Maryland officer. Welch was tak- into custody at his home.

ALWAYS WANTED A HORN; GIVES DONATION TO BAND.

Charles Barr Gives Toward Purchase of Bass Horn

"Ever since I was a little boy I wanted a bass horn ever so badly. I never got it, but now I have an opportunity to help somebody else get one, and I am going to do it. I never had an opportunity to get a goat until I was forty and I always wanted one of those animals too."

After making these statements, Mr. Charles Barr, of Brownsville, Pa., who has been a resident of McHenry and Garrett county during the summer months for more than ten years, and who was making a business call at The Republican office on Monday, handed the editor a check for five dollars, to be turned over to R. R. Gilbert, director of the Boys' Band, to be applied on the purchase of the instrument which is so badly needed.

More Encouragement

Mr. Barr is a subscriber to The Republican, and read of the voluntary contribution of Miss Thekla Fundenberg, of Washington, D. C., in last week's issue. When the check was presented to Mr. Gilbert there was still another encouraging report. Russell Brown, assistant to Mr. Gilbert, was in Baltimore last week and he talked for a few minutes with Dr. John Legge, prominent physician, and formerly of Oakland. He has promised to send his cornet to the band with the proviso that it be put to good usage.

"These incidents are certainly encouraging," Mr. Gilbert said. "Since former citizens of Oakland and those who are away for a short time have shown such an active interest in the Boys' Band, I wish a lot of people would take a short visit somewhere, read The Republican, and donate a little money toward the purchase of that horn," he said. "It wouldn't be long then before our greatest need would be fulfilled."

Baltimore and Ohio Scholarships to Farm Boys and Girls For Agricultural Club Work.

Believing that 4-H agricultural club work is a necessary system of education for our rural youth and which system must continue to grow so that it will become available to a much larger number of farm boys and girls, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad announces that it will award again this year two one hundred dollar scholarships in this State to the boy and girl who most efficiently complete their project in agricultural club work during 1928.

A club member may compete for this scholarship by entering any type of club work recognized and supervised by the University of Maryland Agricultural Extension Service, such as: calf clubs, pig clubs, poultry clubs, corn clubs, potato clubs, sewing clubs, canning clubs, etc. A club member may enter the contest by having his county agricultural agent or county club leader enroll his name with the Agricultural Development Department of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Baltimore, Maryland.

The winners of Baltimore and Ohio scholarships have the alternative of using the scholarship for educational purpose at any recognized college or university or in defraying the expense of an educational trip to the Boys' and Girls' Annual Club Congress and International Livestock Exposition, Chicago, in December, 1928.

The Baltimore and Ohio has awarded 77 scholarships to date, 56 of which the winners chose to use for educational purposes at their respective State universities, while 21 chose the educational trip. Of the 56 club members who elected the scholarships for educational purposes more than 30 are now enrolled as students at or have already graduated from college in the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Pennslyvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia or West Virginia.

Maryland boys and girls who have won the Baltimore and Ohio scholarships are Katherine Baker, Edgemont, Washington county; Norwood C. Thornton, Elkton, Cecil county; Geo. C. Oland, Olney, Montgomery county; Dorothy Enfield, Forest Hill, Harford county; Ralph England, Rising Sun, Cecil county.

The Republican would like to see the name of a Garrett county girl or boy added to the above list when the scores are completed this fall.

Walter Schlossnagle, 21 years of age, Gortner, underwent an operation for removal of his tonsils at the office of Dr. N. I. Broadwater, who performed the operation, assisted by Dr. Gattens and Miss Julia Lawton.

CHAIRMAN TAIT ASKS MR. BRUCE TO BE CONSISTENT

Requests Him To Father Movement In Maryland Against a Fourth Term for Governor

Galen L. Tait, Republican State chairman of Maryland, has requested Senator Bruce, now a candidate to succeed himself, to father a movement against the election of any Governor of Maryland for a fourth time.

In an open letter to the Senator Mr. Tait recalled the fact that Mr. Bruce had spoken in the Senate with great effect against a third term for a President of the United States in connection with the LaFollette anti-third term resolution now pending.

Sees Parallel Situation

Mr. Tait wants to know if there is not a parallel between a Presidential third term and a Gubernatorial fourth term, his inquiry, of course, being prompted by suggestions that Governor Ritchie again might seek to succeed himself.

Mr. Tait's letter follows:

"The press quotes you as having stated in the Senate last Tuesday that you favored the La Foliette resolution covertly aimed at President Coolidge's eligibility as candidate for another term, thereby gratuitously rebuking the President, notwithstanding his twice-repeated declination to run for the Presidency, for which he had been almost universally favored by the business element and by citizens generally of Baltimore and Maryland.

Cites Press Quotation.

"The press and Congressional Record also quote you as saying:

"'I would not vote for any Democratic candidate for a Presidential third term, though he were a Thomas Jefferson, an Andrew Jackson, a Grover Cleveland or a Woodrow Wilson.'

"May I inquire, will you refuse likewise, to vote for Gov. Albert C. Ritchie for a fourth term as Governor of Maryland—if not nominated for President? In that alternative, his candidacy for Governor is generally assumed.

"Will you also use your influence in support of a resolution in the next General Assembly of Maryland, similar to the Senate resolution you favor, declaring against a fourth term as Governor, thereby honoring the previous Maryland tradition against a second term as Governor and the Maryland Declaration of Rights, which declares in Article 34:

"'That a long continuance in the executive departments of power or trust is dangerous to liberty; a rotation, therefore, in those departments is one of the best securities of permanent freedom.'

Cites Attack on Coolidge.

"In your Senate speech you admonished President Coolidge that it would have been wise if in his declinations to run he had 'translated what he said from Vermontese into plain English.'

"Will you state, in the same 'plain English,' whether you would be consistent and oppose Governor Ritchie for nomination and election for a fourth term as Governor of Maryland?"

Married Men's Club Is Formed.

"The Married Men's Club," composed of several of the younger married men of Oakland, was formed last Friday night.

The club will meet every Friday night and on this Friday evening a dinner, dance and card party has been arranged for.

"No clubroom has been secured as yet," Mr. Lawrence stated, "but it won't be long. The membership will be limited in number," he concluded.

"WESTERN BILL" HARVEY ARRESTED ON THURSDAY

Charged With the Manufacture of Liquor—Furnishes Bond For Appearance at Court

"Western Bill" Harvey, of near Wilson, was arrested last Thursday afternoon by Federal Agents and Deputy Sheriff Joy Griffith on a charge of manufacturing liquor for sale and for possession of the contraband.

At the time of Harvey's arrest a small quantity of liquor was discovered at his home and a still with all the required accessories was also found and destroyed.

"Western Bill" took his arrest philosophically. He said that the chief objection he had to the officers making the arrest was that after they had done their duty in this respect they had cut his still up into such small pieces that it was impossible to have it repaired and was of the opinion that had the pieces been of larger dimensions the requirements of the law would have been met and then he could have repaired the "can" and—, but here he stopped.

He was brought tto Oakland Thursday night and at a hearing before Justice W. A. Gonder he was held in the sum of $500 for his appearance at the June term of the Circuit Court. The required bond was furnished and Harvey was released.

LEGIONAIRE MEMBERSHIP DRIVE IS PROGRESSING

Fourteen Names of New Members Will Be Forwarded Soon

Fourteen or more names will be sent in this week to the Maryland headquarters, American Legion, from Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, according to I. R. Rudy, post commander, in the drive for membership during the month of February. The quota for the local post is 45.

Some of the Maryland posts have already turned in over 50 per cent of their quota and it has been predicted by the State chairman of the membership committee that the membership gain for 1928 will excell that of last year, which was 1123.

The committee appointed to manage the drive locally is composed of Delbert Davis, Townshend Naylor, D. R. Sincell, Charles Reckard and C. Milton Sincell.

A trophy is being offered by Wallace Williams, department commander of the State, to the post having the highest percentage of its quota.

Oakland High School News.

Senior Latin Class Play.

On Friday evening of next week, February 24, the Senior Latin class will present "Propter Puppam," a play in Latin, under the direction of Miss Karin Stenbolm. The play will be given before the Parent-Teachers' Association. Those in the cast are Lavona Blamble, Martha Townshend, Theoda Rice, Hasaleah Yutzy, Roland Ready, Robert Stemple and Kenneth Stahl.

Oakland High Victorious

In a game marked by perfect team work on the part of the Oakland High School, the Aurora High team was defeated in basketball on last Thursday night by the score of 45-10. The local team thoroughly avenged themselves for the defeat at the hands of Aurora earlier in the season when the score was 11-14. Sanders played his best of the year and Stemple was up to his usual form. Oakland scored at will and Aurora was only able to score against the second team. Webster and Parsons were best for Aurora.

In the preliminary game the Oakland High girls defeated the Aurora High girls 15-13 in an interesting and well played game.

Miss Kathrine Conley, principal of O. H. S., has received a very interesting letter from Percy Lawton, who is now stationed nt Parris Island, S. C. He wrote in appreciation of the O. H. S. news and of the basketball team.

Watch for the big game. Oakland High will play Masontown here on February 21. Thomas girls will play Oakland girls in the preliminary game.

Mr. Ray Jones, of Oakland, gave a very interesting talk to the students of O. H. S. on Friday, February 10, on the life of Abraham Lincoln, which was enjoyed by all.

REPORTED SALE OF LANG-HORTON HUTTON INTEREST

Appaline Oil Company Said to be Purchasers of Property.

That the Lang-Horton interests at Hutton, six miles west of Oakland, had been sold to the Appaline Oil Co., which concern will use it as the base for a distributing station through this section, was circulated last night by residents of Hutton, but the report was unable to be verified this morning.

According to those responsible for the circulation of the report, all the holdings of the Lang-Horton Company, including the dwellings and the land formerly occupied by a tannery, which was burned two or three years ago, has been sold to the oil concern, which will start operations there on or about May 1, after making extensive repairs to the buildings now on the property and the erection of tanks and other required structures.

That a factory site had been donated for the erection of a woolen mill was also a report in circulation last night. It is understood that negotiations for the property have been pending for two or three months.

A telephone call to the general manager of the oil company at Kingwood failed to confirm the reported purchase of the property. He admitted, however, that there had been negotiations pending.

MORE VALENTINES SOLD THAN IN DAYS GONE BY

This Year's Sales Are The Largest Ever, Dealers Say.

St. Valentine is increasing in popularity each year in Oakland at least, according to those who handle the bits of card and tinsel conveying to the recipients a sentimental verse or message of love and affection, which at once disproves the popular belief that all sentiment is being done away with on occasions marking the anniversary of this occasion.

ropolitan press from time to time repolitan press from time to time regret the passing of the romantic idea which has been clustered about the day commonly known as St. Valentine's Day and has also hinted that the practice of sending Christmas and birthday cards and letters of good will and cheer is passing. But if Oakland can be taken as a criterion, then the practice is increasing and rapidly, at that.

"We sell more of all kinds of cards each year," one shop keeper who deals largely in this class of goods said yesterday. "Last year's sales were more numerous than the year before and this past season was the leargest we have yet experienced."

Sales of comic valentines were larger also, which might go to show that there are more funny people in the world than ever before, or that the kids are becoming more "onery."

Those who say that romance and sentiment are dying out seem to be all "wet." Perhaps it is because they have grown up and can see nothing but their own age. Why it is a known fact that it required the services of two men and a dray to deliver a single valentine to one of Oakland's most eligible bachelors no later than on Monday evening, and then the theory is advanced that sentiment is a thing of the past.

It makes no difference how thick the argument, it is still applesauce.

Surprise Program to be Given Friday at K. of P. Meeting

A surprise program, consisting of many thrills, laughs and much enjoyment has been promised for the weekly meeting of the Knights of Pythias lodge tomorrow night by Reese Friend, chairman of the program committee. He would not divulge in any degree the nature of entertainment but stated that those who were not present at the meeting tomorrow night would miss something worthwhile.

At the meeting last Friday night, Paul Naylor related his experiences while hunting in the big game country of Canada and Maine during the recent fall.

The weekly prize, a Shaeffer lifetime fountain pen, donated by the Oakland Jewelry Company, was presented to George D. White.

Two other prizes will be given away each week from now on, Mr. Friend stated.

SUICIDE ATTEMPT FAILS AFTER FIRING FIVE TIMES

Lee Gortner, Loch Lynn, Fires Five Bullets Into Region of Heart But Still Lives.

Lee Gortner, about forty years of age, son of Mr. Fred. Gortner, Loch Lynn Heights, is in a very serious condition following his attempt at suicide this morning about 9:30 o'clock when he shot himself five times, the bullets entering his chest in the region of his heart.

The elder Mr. Gortner has been in poor health for some time and it is thought that his condition affected the mind of the son and led him to attempt to take his life. The deed was committed in a barn located on the Loch Lynn Hotel property.

Dr. N. I. Broadwater was called to attend the would-be suicide who had him removed to a home nearby where he was given first aid. Sheriff W. D. Casteel was also called and he secured the revolver with which the man attempted to take his life.

Gortner is unable to converse and the exact reason for his action cannot be learned at this time. He has a chance for recovery, Dr. Broadwater says.

Gortner is unmarried and finds employment from time to time with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.

A brother was mysteriously murdered by being shot by someone unknown at Cumberland about two years ago and another brother died of illness at the home of the father in Loch Lynn about the same time. The mother has been dead a number of years.

At noon today it was thought expedient that the injured man be taken to a hospital for attention and care. At that hour he was placed in Bolden's ambulance which immediately left for the Western Maryland Hospital in Cumberland. He was accompanied by Alva Gortner, a cousin, of Oakland.

TWELVE LICENSES ISSUED DURING WEEK'S PERIOD

Number Is Still Below Normal —Four Marked "Don't Publish"

The week ending Tuesday at noon was another slim period for the issuance of marriage licenses at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit Court in Oakland, as only twelve received such papers. This week's issuance brings the total for the month of February up to 27.

Four licenses issued during the seven-day period were marked "don't publish," and two applicants were refused licenses on account of being under the required age.

NEW SMALLPOX OUTBREAK SHOWS VACCINATION NEED
Have Been 100,000 Cases in U. S. in Last 10 Years

Following the discovery of two cases of smallpox, a few days ago, among colored people who have recently moved to Baltimore, all persons who have been in contact with them were vaccinated, and a general warning has been issued to all unvaccinated persons of the ever present danger of contracting the diseasc, by the Health Commissioner of Baltimore City, Dr. C. Hampson Jones.

When asked "Is smallpox decreasing?' Dr. R. H. Riley, chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the State Department of Health, answered, "There have been 100,000 cases of smallpox in the United States in the last three years; 600,000 cases in the last ten years. There are more cases of smallpox in the United States every year than in any part of the world except parts of India, and there is always danger of the disease flaring up in unvaccinated communities in this country.

"In 1926," he continued, "the last year for which there are complete returns, there were 30,450 cases of smallpox throughout the United States with 380 deaths. This was an improvement over 1925 when there were 39,639 cases, and over 1924 when there were 55,538 cases."

Asked about Maryland's share in these totals, Dr. Riley said: "Maryland has one of the best vaccination laws in the country and the majority of the people in the State have cooperated willingly and intelligently with county, city and state departments of health in conforming with the law. Therefore Maryland's contributions to these tremendous totals have been slight compared with those from other States. Over against the 100,000 cases throughout the United States in the last three years, Marylan has had 30 cases, 16 in the counties and 14 in Baltimore City.

"Every case of smallpox that occurs is regarded as a potential epidemic and is treated as such and an effort is made to find and vaccinate every individual who has been in contacs with the patient. In addition to making provision for emergency measures, our Maryland law requires every child to be protected against smallpox by vaccination before he or she can be admitted to school. Observance of these regulations over a long period of years has been a means of protection for a large part of our population.

"Previous to enrollment in school, the responsibility rests upon the parents. After that it is shared by the teacher and any teacher who admits a child who does not show evidence of successful vaccination is responsible under the law and is subject to a fine.

"We can picture what could and probably would happen if our health officers were lax in the administration of this law, by observing what happens in other communities which do not avail themselves of this means of protection. Take Nebraska, which has a population of approximately 250,000 less than Maryland, as an example. Recent reports from that State show that they had 806 cases of smallpox in 1925, and 691 in 1926.

"In these days of unlimited travel by every imaginable means of transportation, disease knows no boundaries. Nobody can afford to take chances on smallpox. Vaccination has stamped out the disease wherever it has been systematically practiced.

Our Maryland record proves that it pays to be vaccinated.'

Va., and have its eastern portal at Piedmont, W. Va., a distance of 28 miles. Following the contemplated work the engineer was stricken and he went to Europe to recuperate his health and there he died. The report is again being circulated in railway circles that the work is again being contemplated.

POLITICS AND THE CHURCH

A specious argument being made just now by the wet press of the entire country in an effort to bolster up a losing cause is an assault upon three of the leading churches of the nation—the Presbyterian, Baptist and Methodist.

The assault upon these denominations is being led by the New York Telegram. Its effect may have the opposite hoped for by the writer in the metropolitan journal above cited in that it will make every loyal member of these three denomination exert themselves to the utmost to overcome the apparent laxity of their organizations if such laxity exists.

The Telegram's article is published in The Republican simply to show to what end the wet press will go in order to carry a point, in this case, we believe, a bad selection:

While foes of prohibition may find some satisfaction in the falling off in efficiency in the three biggest Protestant churches, others who feel the need of religious influence on advancing civilization will consider it a serious matter that the Presbyterian, Methodist and Baptist churches appear to be losing their grip.

The Men's Church League asked prominent clergymen in these three denominations this question: "What is the matter with the churches?" The replies were significant. The report, after a canvass of the replies, says:

"Of 9,299 Presbyterian churches, 3,269 had no converts last year; of 8,765 Baptist churches, 5,471 lacked converts in 1927, and of 16,581 Methodist churches 4,651 went without attracting a single convert.

"If the same ratio holds for all the Protestant churches in America, then there are 60,000 out of a total of 200,000 churches that failed to bring a single convert into the Christian faith last year."

Various explanations have been offered by as many leading churchmen, but none of them touches upon what many laymen will believe is the real reason for this situation. It so happens that the largest and most active backers of the political lobby known as the Anti-Saloon League are the Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian churches. They are largely responsible for making that organization the political arm of the Protestant evangelical churches, and hence must bear the chief responsibility for dragging the churches into the mire of bitter partisan politics.

Nor is a falling off in converts all of the story. If there is any way of getting at the facts, it would probably be discovered that a vast number of members of these churches have lost some of their zeal, even though they have retained their church membership. Turning over pulpits to political lobbyists who discuss politics instead of religion may have helped that kind of politics but it has not helped religion, and it hasn't helped the churches that have gone into politics.

When our clerical friends learn that partisan politics has no place in the pulpit and that real Christians want their religion unadulterated, they will have found out one thing that is the matter with some of the churches. Certainly there is nothing wrong about Christianity. The spirit of its Founder is just as vivid and forceful as it ever was, and there has been no diminution in the appeal to humanity of the gospel of love. But politics and controversial politics, at that, has brought into it too much bigotry, intolerance and the anti-Christian gospel of hate.

ARE COWS GOING WEST?

For what the following editorial from the Wall Street Jorunal might mean as a topic for thought for dairymen and others of Garrett county and who may thus more fully interest themselves in dairying, it is reproduced here:

"On the six railroads which bring the New York metropolitan area its daily milk ration of 113,500 forty-quart cans the maximum hauls of the precious fluid vary from 290 and 530 miles. New York has been sending far afield for its milk for 85 years, but always the radius of its producing area has been growing wider. Commuters and their seven-room model cotttages have ousted the cow from the suburban district, lying within thirty to forty miles of Columbus Cir-

King, county health nurse, will return to Oakland this evening from the seventh annual convention of the International Society for Crippled Children, which was held at the Peabody Hotel, Memphis, Tennessee, on Monday, Tuesday and yesterday. Miss King attended the convention for the purpose of better acquainting herself with the mode of treatment and up-to-date methods of handling requests for treatment and surgical aid from the unfortunate cripples.

Addresses which particularly cover the type of work now being done in Garrett county were made by leading men and women of the country.

Among the addresses made were "Education of Crippled Children in Rural Districts," "Relation of Crippled Children's Work to Health, Welfare and Educational Movements." "Preparing Cripples for Employment," "How to best Help Every Cripple Find his Proper Place for Service," "Public Health and Crippled Children," "The Value of Co-operation" and "Corodination of Work for Crippled Children and Disabled Adults."

Material gathered from these addresses will benefit the people of the county as Miss King expects to bring back and put into practice many of the things which she heard discussed.

York and adjacent states? These are questions pertinently raised by R. W. Quackenbush, agricultural agent of the New York Central lines, who politely refrains from saying that they are of more serious concern to the farmers of the East than McNary-Haugenism or prohibition. The Volstead act does not yet apply to milk and there is a practically unlimited market for it almost at the Eastern farmer's barnyard.

"It is not literally true, of course, that New York's dairy herd, as a whole, has moved three to five hundred miles away. But the milk industry is clearly enough getting away from the East and its movement may hereafter be more rapid than in the past because of ever-improving transport facilities and new devices protecting the milk en route. Certainly the consumer will not benefit, either in the price or the quality of his milk, by the extension of the producing area; the Eastern farmer would still more certainly suffer from the loss of another line of production or increasingly severe competition.

"His forebears saw dominance in grain production pass irrevocably to the prairie states. The Eastern farmer of the present generation has doubtless reconciled himself to that, hut his own eyes have seen apples and eggs from the Pacific slope come in to command the Eastern urban markets. Will he now stand hy and see milk, butter and cheese, with the profits therefrom, slip further from his grasp?

"If not, it will be no easy week-end job to prevent just that from happening. It can he prevented, if dairymen will collectively exert themselves in time."

SPARKS FROM AN OAKLAND PULPIT

LINCOLN—THE IDEAL SCOUT.
(From a sermon preached Sunday, February 12, to Oakland Troop, Boy Scouts of America.)

When Abraham Lincoln was a boy he formulated for himself the Scout motto: "I will study and prepare and perhaps my time will come."

Lincoln had none of the advantages which you and I enjoy. He had to create his own opportunities and then, at the cost of stupendous labor and self-denial make the most of them. And when fate called him to the Presidency of the nation, when destiny summoned him to take the helm of the ship of state and guide her through the most terrible storm of her voyage, Lincoln was ready. His motto was: Be Prepared.

He was prepared, physically. The rail-splitter had toughened his muscles and had given to his great physique a herculean strength, every ounce of which he was in need in carrying the tremendous burdens which his country was to place upon his shoulders.

He was prepared, mentally. Lincoln had to fight for his education. Incredible obstacles lay in his path. For instance, he used to do the chores in the morning and walk to Booneville, seventeen miles away, to listen to John A. Breckenridge, a prominent lawyer of those days; then seventeen miles home again to do the chores at night. Day after day he did this while the court was in session. At such cost he gained his legal training. Lincoln struggled as desperately to get an education as many a boy struggles to get away from one.

Thus he prepared himself mentally so that when in later years he was called to meet in debate the keenest men in America, such as Stephen Douglas, Lincoln was able to hold his own; yes, and more than hold his own.

He was prepared, morally. No human being ever lived a straighter, cleaner life. "Honest Abe," his neighbors called him. His was an absolute integrity of soul which all the wealth of Midas could not buy, which all the flattery of the devil could not sway, which all the threats of a million enemies could not shake. "With malice toward none, with charity for all," Abraham Lincoln was the very incarnation of the spirit of Christlikeness.

Lincoln never let an opportunity go by to do a good turn to someone in trouble. He was as chivalrous as any legendary knight of King Arthur's Round Table. Wherever he was, that strong hand of his was always a helping hand. His heart was a heart of compassion which embraced not only the whole of humanity, but even the dumb brutes of the field and the wild things of the wood.

An attorney who was associated with him during the period of his legal practice in Illinois used to tell the story of how Lincoln spoiled his best suit of clothes on the way to the court house one day because he simply had to go back to a lonely spot in the road where he had seen a pig helplessly struggling in quicksand, and build a platform of rails and pull the pig out. Yes, many a creature and many a man did Lincoln stop to pull out of some hole of misfortune.

Again and again Lincoln amazed his associates by rendering unexpected services to men who hated and despised him; as, for example, when he appointed to the all-important position of Secretary of War the very man who, years before, had publicly insulted him in a crowded court room. Thus it was his habit to return good for evil and to love not only his neighbor but even his enemy as himself.

Surely, Abraham Lincoln was the truest Scout who ever lived, for in a unique sense he lived the Scout oath: "On my honor, I will do my best to do my duty to God and my country; to help other people at all times; to keep myself physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

POTOMAC STATE AND B. AND O. Y ARE NEXT FOES

Oakland A. A. Will Meet Cumberland Team Tomorrow Night Potomac State Monday Night

With four victories out of the last five starts, the Oakland Collegians are out to still further increase their average by arranging games with the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Y. M. C. A. team of Cumberland tomorrow evening, February 17, and Potomac State school on Monday evening, February 20. Both games will be played at Naylor's Hall, Oakland, and it is hoped by the management and the local players that a good turnout of interested fans will be present.

The B. & O. "Y" has a good record so far this year, being composed of former high and preparatory school teams. Potomas State is said to have this year one of the fastest and best teams that they have ever had. They swamped Frostburg Normal, Shepherd College and other teams by big margins, and stacked up well against Detroit City College, the team which defeated West Virginia University, and every team they played on their eastern trip. Admission will he 25 and 35 cents. The Crellin Boys' Band has been asked to be present at this game and furnish music.

Berlin Defeated.

The Collegians evened accounts with the Berlin Independents on Tuesday by the score of 33-29. Last week Berlin won on its home court by the score 48-40. Killen, McComas and Nally were the high point getters for Oakland. The score stood 14-14 at half time. Field goals, Oakland—Killen, 5; Hollen, 1; McComas and Nally, 4 each; Hanst. 1. Berlin—E. Miller, 4; Hoff, 6; Zimmerman. 2. Fouls—Killen, 1-3; McComas, 2-2; Zimmerman, 1-5. Referee, Helbig. The O. H. S. Seniors won from the Sophomores, 25-14.

Piedmont Beaten.

A furious rally in the last quarter, when Oakland scored 20 points, stampeded the Tri-Towns Collegians at Piedmont on Saturday night and caused them to lose their first game of the season, 43-56. Killen got nine field goals to lead his team mates in the scoring. Piedmont led at the end of the first quarter, 9-4, but Oakland was ahead at the half, 16-14. Wolf scored five field goals and one foul to be second high scorer for the locals. Nally made 3 goals and Hanst. 4.

Broadway Club Trimmed.

The Broadway Club of Meyersdale was beaten by the local team at Naylor's Hall Thursday evening, 27-18. McComas led the Oakland scoring with five field goals. Killen got 3, Nally, 3, and Hanst, 2.

In the preliminary game the single men defeated the married men by the score 21-20. Harry Stemple, Bob Stewart, Louis Waingold, Mike Liller and Doctor Kercheval composed the married men's team.

Lutherans Trim High School.

The Lutherans defeated the High School in the City League game on Monday night by the score of 31-19, and the Presbyterians forfeited their game to Mountain Lake Park by not appearing for the contest.

The Lutherans took the lead in the start and maintained it throughout the greater part of the contest. Field goals were made as follows: Hoffman, 4; Graves, 2; Kahl, 1; Hanst, 7; Stemple, 3; Stanton, 1; Sanders, 4. Hoffman and Stemple made two fouls each and Graves and Sanders, one each.

On next Monday the Catholics will meet the High School and the Lutherans will meet the Presbyterians.

GARRETT COUNTY 'COON SKINS COME HIGH TO SOME

Those Especially Who Are On The Make Dishonestly.

(Salisbury Correspondence of Meyersdale (Pa.) Republican.)

Henry Lichty, now a resident of Ashland, O., but formerly a resident of Elk Lick Township, once raised a lot of seed sweetcorn that brought him about $1 per ear because the fellow who paid such a high price for it did not bargain for it before gaining possession of the coveted corn. Well, even if Henry did get a record price for his corn, he didn't have much on Jesse Merrill, of Garrett county, Md., at that, as a financier.

Mr. Merrill lives near Avilton, and in addition to farming, also does a little 'coon hunting for the fun he gets out of it, and to make a little money on the side out of raw fur. Two Salisbury fur-buyers recently called at Mr. Merrill's place to see if he had any fur to sell. Mr. Merrill was not at home when the thrifty fur-buyers called, and Mrs. Merrill informed the men in quest of fur that all her husband had in that line was one raccoon skin, adding that she would not sell it without authority from her husband.

The fur-buyer then asked tto be shown the coveted 'coon pelt, so that they could leave word for Mr. Merrill as to what they would be willing to pay for it. Mrs. Merrill sent her little boy to the barn to show it to them. It was a pelt of large size and worth easily $8, but even though the man issuing the checks for the fur the two men had been buying was the same man who paid Henry Lichty about $1 per ear for seed sweetcorn, he did not seem willing to pay over $4 for an $8 'coon pelt, which he told the little boy was a big price, and induced the little fellow to accept a $4 check for it for his father.

The boy thought he did the right thing when he accepted the check, but his mother did not, and sent the lad to a neighbor's house where the fur-buyers next stopped to return the check to the man who gave it to him, and to recover the pelt. But the man refused to accept the check or to return the skin, saying "We're going to keep the 'coon skin and you'll keep the check."

When the lad's father returned home and learned of the fur-buyers' visit and its result, he made up his mind not to stand for a deal of that sort. So the next day he came to Salisbury, accompanied by his neighbor, 'Squire George Brown, and soon found the fur-buyers, who begged to be allowed to settle the matter, and to be let out of their trouble at as small a cost as possible. The matter was compromised by the fur-buyers paying $4 additional for the 'coon pelt and $5 to Mr. Merrill and $3 to 'Squire Brown for their trouble in coming to Salisbury to make the additional collection, running the total up to $16 to get possession of one 'coon pelt.

MISS REBECCA MILLER WILL SOON BE NINETY-ONE BUT IS STILL ENJOYING LIFE TO ITS FULLEST EXTENT

Has Cared For 3 Generations in in One Family and Has Lived in Town More than 50 Years

Today, somewhere in the United States, a youth of 21 or less will have hanged himself by the use of his bed clothes, or jumped from some rock-bound cliff, leaving his sweetheart behind with a note saying that he had found nothing in life worth living for.

At the same time, there is an aged woman in Oakland, Maryland, who will be 91 years of age in July. She has enjoyed life and still sees reason for continuing to enjoy it until the last breath, and why not?

Miss "Becky" Miller, born July 7, 1837, at Salisbury, Pa., and who has been a resident of Oakland for more than a half century, sits at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. W. McComas and reads all the latest novels with the greatest enjoyment and converses about them and news events of the day along with the best in the house.

She is in good health, eating three hearty meals a day, and climbs a flight of stairs with 21 steps several times between daylight and midnight.

She has taken care of three generations, Mrs. H. W. McComas, Mrs. McComas' daughter, Mrs. E. C. Lawrence, and Mrs. Lawrence's daughter, Ann.

Three presidents of the United States have been seen by this aged woman, which does not seem so much out of the way until they are named: Abraham Lincoln, Grover Cleveland, and Benjamin Harrison.

"Becky" will continue to go on loving life and all its charms because she decided long ago that there was something worthwhile in being alive. It is all in the attitude of the mind. Yes, there are many such women, but the world has plenty of room for many more.

Mayor L. M. Fraley went to Baltimore Tuesday night on a business trip, expecting to return to Oakland today.

Mr. Richard Sollars, of near Deer Park, was in town this morning, when he called at The Republican office on business.

In Cumberland yesterday a marriage license was issued to Alfred Walter Georg and Barbara Grace Kahl, both of Accident, Garrett county.

Reports from the bedside of Rev. A. D. Craig, local Methodist pastor, who remains a patient in the City Hospital at Fairmont, West Va., indicate that he is not improving.

Next Wednesday, February 22, which is Washington's birthday, has been declared a holiday and as a consequence the banks of Oakland and the postoffice will not be open on that day.

A valentine dinner party was given by Miss Nell Offutt at the William-James hotel last night at which the guests were Mrs. Offutt, Mr. D. E. Offutt, Misses Dorothea Sturgiss, Adeline Sincell and Helen Offutt.

Mr. Henry Sahlin, inspector in the employ of the State Roads Commission, who has been located at Red House for several months past, has been transferred to Cumberland for the present, leaving for that point on Tuesday.

The Library Association is anxious that the library books be used and that it shall be a real public asset. The library is open every Wednesday afternoon and Saturday afternoon and evening. The librarian will be glad to give any information desired.

In the Orphans' Court on Tuesday letters of adminstration on the estate of the late Aden C. Wilt were granted to Lulu Wilt, his widow, and letters testamentary on the estate of the late Mrs. Annie E. Hoover were issued to Bertha V. Hare, executrix of the decadent's last will and testament.

The regular services will be conducted in St. Paul's M. E. church on Sunday. At the morning hour of worship a minister from out-of-town will preach and in the evening the sermon will be delivered by Rev. W. B. Brock, of the local Presbyterian church.

The Garrett County Public Library Association benefit picture shown at the Maryland Theatre in Oakland last night was patronized by a goodly number of people, notwithstanding the fact that the streets were covered with a glare of ice making traffic dangerous. The music, furnished hy the Boys' Band and the Oakland Orchestra added much to the enjoyment of the evening. Oakland audiences are always glad to hear Reeves Blandford sing. A solo rendered by him last night was splendid.

The ministers of the Synod of West Virginia will meet in St. Luke's Lutheran church at Grafton on Monday afternoon for a pre-Lenten retreat. This retreat was brought into being when the conference of the Synod met in Oakland last October when Revs. C. A. Shilke, D. M. Funk and Paul L. Folk were appointed as a committee to arrange for the assemblage. The purpose of the retreat is to prepare more fully by prayer, communion and thought for the sacred Lenten season.

Miss Mildred Casteel, who has been employed as bookkeeper in Miller's Sanitary Market for the past three years, has taken a like position in the E. S. Evans' Garage in Oakland, beginning her work there on last Monday in the place of Mr. Ernest Hardesty, who has been transferred to the Terra Alta office of the Evans organization. Miss Beatrice Wilt has taken the place left vacant by Miss Casteel. Mr. Hardesty's transfer to the Terra Alta office has been held in abeyance for some time. His removal to our neighboring town is regretted by his many friends in Oakland.

LEAGUE LEADERS BEATEN BY POSTOFFICE BOWLERS

Methodists Lose Two Out of Three to Uncle Sam's Men

The Postoffice took two games out of three from the Methodists on Tuesday night, knocking them from their 1,000 per cent standing to second place in the second round of the Oakland Bowling League. On the Thursday preceding the Methodists took three games from the Lutherans.

Other winners this week: Presbyterians took two out of three from the Merchants; K. of C., two from Crellin; Gortner, two from the Rotary Club; Merchants, three from the Ramblers.

Fred. Peddicord was highest for the week in a single game with 191 pins. Joe Hinebaugh was high for a total of three games with 453.

Morgantown Defeated.

Morgantown was defeated by Oakland bowlers on Tuesday night in a three-game engagement played at the Recreation. Those bowling for Oakland were Joe Hinebaugh, Walter, Mason, A. Gortner, Peddicord and E. Gortner. Peddicord rolled 463 pins for a total in three games with the visitors.

The standing of the leagues on last Friday was as follows:

Union Lenten Services.

Preparations have been completed by the ministers of Oakland to celebrate this year as they did last, the sacred season of Lent in a series of mid-week services beginning on next Wednesday evening, February 22, in the Lutheran church, and alternating each Wednesday thereafter with the Presbyterian and Methodist churches.

Palm Sunday evening, April 1, a union service will be conducted in the M. E. church which will be addressed by some outstanding churchman.

Holy week will be observed with a half-hour service daily in the Presbyterian church. On Good Friday, beginning at noon a service will be held in the Episcopal church which will end at three o'clock.

These services will likely be well attended as they have been in past years. A good service with an interesting sermon is promised for each evening.

The valentine social held by the Christian Endeavor Society of St. Mark's Lutheran church on Tuesday evening in the Sunday school room of the church, was attended by about 70 persons. Miss Hazel Nine, chairman of the program committee, directed the musical numbers, recitations and games of many kinds. Refreshments were served.

Mrs. Ernest Liller was hostess at a valentine party given Monday evening at her home on Third street. Four tables of bridge were in play. Those present were Mrs. T. Bullard, Mrs. Rose C. Hamill, Mrs. Bernard Gonder, Mrs. E. Z. Tower, Mrs. M. P. Sollars, Mrs. Cecil Smith, Mrs. Charles Tower, Mrs. G. C. Stemple, Mrs. L. K. Dixon, Mrs. Byron Besse, Mrs. Nettie L. ## A SUBSIDY AND AN UNFAIR DISCRIMINATION.

There is now before the postoffice committee of the House a bill that is of intense interest to every country community. It is a postal rates bill introduced by Representative Griest of Pennsylvania. It provides new postage rates on several classes of mail, but that part of it of interest to the small cities and towns of the nation is in connection with third-class mail.

Through preferential rates on third-class mail to the large users of this class of mail it proposes to subsidize the mail order houses and the big city merchants in their efforts to secure the merchandizing business of the smaller towns and cities by giving these mail order houses and big city merchants a cheaper rate on their business solicitations carried through the mails than would be accorded to the merchant of the smaller city or country town.

It proposes direct discrimination against the merchants of the smaller cities and towns in favor of the merchants and mail order houses of the larger cities.

All of this is tied up in a "joker" clause in the bill that provides that if the total weight of the total number of circulars of one kind to be mailed shall be twenty pounds or more the postage rate shall be one cent for each piece weighing two ounces or less, but if the total number of copies of any one circular to be mailed shall weigh less than twenty pounds, the postage charge on each piece of two ounces or less shall be one and one-half cents.

Any one piece of direct-by-mail advertising of the mail order houses or the big city merchants is mailed to many thousands of prospective buyers, and covers very wide sections of the country. The total number of such pieces of such direct-by-mail advertising would easily weigh many times twenty pounds, and because the total weight of all of these was twenty pounds or more the postage rate would be one cent on each piece. The merchant doing business in the smaller city or the country town who wished to mail a piece of direct-by-mail advertising to the possible purchasers in his town and in the trade territory of that town would have a mailing list of but a few hundred, possibly one thousand names at the most. The total weight of this number of circulars or small booklets would be less than twenty pounds, and this small city or country town merchant must pay one and one-half cents on each piece as a postage charge.

In the case of the mail from the mail order house or the big city merchant the government must pay for the handling and sorting of these thousands of pieces of mail at the office at which they are deposited for mailing; the government must transport them on railroad trains for which the government must pay the railroads; when they arrive at destination the government must pay for sorting them by indivdiual addresses and must pay the carriers for delivering them to the individuals to whom they are addressed.

But in the case of the same class of mail used by the merchants of the small cities and towns, practically all of it would be delivered direct to the persons to which the pieces are addressed through but the one post office and the government would save the cost of handling and sorting in one postoffice and would save the cost of rail transportation. Yet it proposes to handle the mail that involves these additional costs at two-thirds the charge for which it will handle the mail that does not involve these additional costs.

During 1927 the charge for handling third-class mail of two ounces or less was one and one-half cents per piece, except for booklets of twenty pages or more and weighing ttwo ounces or less, for which the charge was one cent, and these one cent mailings were a comparatively small percentage of the more than four billion pieces of third-class mail handled by the Postoffice Department. During 1927 the cost to the government of handling each piece of third-class mail was 1.79509—approximately one cent and eight mills. Of this per piece total, .34941—approximately four mills—was the cost per piece for transportation and distribution in transit.

In other words, it cost the government a very small fraction less than one and a-half cents to handle each piece of third-class mail, weighing two ounces or less,when there were no transportation charges. That is, the third-class mail directly througt the one postoffice and to the people of the vicinity of that postoffie. That is the character of the third-class mail used by the merchants of the smaller cities and the country towns.

But for the third-class mail originating in the large cities—the direct- advertising of the mail order he big city merchants— ide areas, the cost better than more without granting the same reduction to the merchants of the smaller cities and towns whose mailings cost the government one-quarter of a cent less per piece to handle.

This is direct discrimination against the people of the small cities and country towns, whose communities depend for their prosperity and growth on the maintaining of a merchandising center; it is direct discrimination against the merchants of these communities against whom would be assessed a heavier sales cost in their effort to meet the competition of the mail order houses and the large city merchants than is assessed against these outside competitors; it is a direct discrimination against both the printer and the newspaper publisher of the smaller cities and towns who must depend for their prosnerity upon the prosperity of the merchants and the people of their communities.

It is a subsidy to the mail order houses and the big city merchants in that it proposes to render a service for these mail order houses and big city merchants at less than the established costs of that service and charge the deficit up to the taxpayers of the nation.

Any congressman, and especially any congressman representing a country district, who would vote for that bill is not entitled to the support of the people of such a distrlct. He would be voting to sacrifice not only the interests of the pople who have elected him, but the best interests of the nation as a whole because the best interests of the nation depend upon the prosperity of all of the nation and not upon the prosperity of the cities alone.

If congress wishes to pass a law making a one-cent postage rate on third-class mail there will be no great objection provided the law applies equally to all. It does not cost the government any more to transport and distribute one thousand pieces of mail mailed by one thousand different persons than it does to transport and distribute one thousand pieces of mail mailed by one person.

Maryland Team Second in Judging Poultry.

Maryland 4-H club members who took part in the National poultry judging contest at Madison Square Garden Poultry Show, New York, recently, have returned with two silver cups, one for placing highest in judging all breeds for production and the other for running up the highest score in judging the White Wyandottes.

The Maryland team, composed of Gilbert Henderson and Charles E. Hines, of Montgomery county, Martin L. Sutton, of Kent county, and Mae Montgomery, alternate, of Prince George county, placed second in the contest with a total score of 1,840 points.

According to W. H. Rice, poultry specialist of the University of Maryland Extension Service, who accompanied the team, the contest was the most spirited in years and the Maryland participants were forced to give way to their rivals from Virginia. The Old Dominion team, led by Pearl Scott and Jack Latture, with individual scores of 680 and 670 respectively, succeeded in running up 1,930 points for the first place in the contest. The score made by Miss Scott, it is said, is the highest ever made in the contest.

In addition to Maryland and Virginia, states competing were New York, Connecticut, Mississippi, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

The contest requirements called for the judging of four breeds of poultry, White Leghorns, Barred Plymouth Rocks, White Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds for both standard qualifications and production characteristics.

Those who composed the Maryland team were chosen as the result of a State contest held at the Hagerstown Fair in October. The trip to the New York show was provided for the winners, the funds being contributed by the Maryland State Bankers' Association and E. A. Lakin, superintendent of the poultry department at the Hagerstown Fair.

Maryland has been represented at two previous contests, placing second each time, and winning altogether eight cups.

Conservative Course Advocated For Farmers.

While the outlook for agriculture in Maryland during the coming year appears reasonably promising, conditions as viewed by specialists of the University of Maryland are not such as to encourage an indiscriminate increase of production in any line.

The agricultural outlook report for Maryland, as prepared by specialists of the University of Maryland Experiment Station and Extension Service, is based in part upon the recently issued outlook report of the United States Department of Agriculture. With reference to the agricultural situation generally the report says:

"In 1927 there was a better balance between the different lines of agricultural production than in any other recent year. Agricultural income in 1928 for the country as a whole is likely to show some improvement over that of 1927, provided total agricultural production is maintained at its present volume and farmers continue to make further adjustments toward a more balanced production. Expansion, especially in cash crops, is to be guarded against.

"During 1927 the average prices of farm products for the United States as a whole advanced, as shown by the increase of ten points in the index of farm prices from 127 in Decemher, 1926, to 137 for December, 1927. This increase was due largely to higher prices for cattle, cotton, feed grains, apples and tobacco, which more than offset the marked decline in hog prices and lower prices received for wheat, hay, potatoes and eggs. The net advance in farm prices is the result not of any better demand situation, but rather of reduced production of cotton, cattle, and fruits and vegetables.

"The gross agricultural income in the United States for the crop year 1926-1927 was about $12,1000,000,000 for 1925-1926 it was $12,700,000,000; for 1921-1922, it was $9,200,000,000. While the gross income from agriculture in 1926-1927 was practically the same asin 1925-1926, the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar was higher. The relative purchasing power of farm products in terms of non-agricultural commoditites stood at 91 per cent of the pre-war level in November, 1927, as compared with 80 per cent for November, 1926.

"The gross value of farm crops for Maryland in 1927 was $70,346,000 as compared with $69,772,000 for 1926.

"The livestock industry in the State has been in a relatively favorable position, althought there was a considerable decline in hog prices in 1927. Beef cattle prices in 1928 promise to average higher than in 1927, the outlook for wool appears favorable, the dairy industry is in a relatively stable position while poultry produc- er... ...ve reasonably good prospects of a hi... ...r level of prices for eggs and dress... and live poultry, at least during the first half of 1928."

EVOLUTION— Industrial; Economic

By F. F. CORLISS.

When the public think of evolution they relate the word with Darwin's Origin of Species and seldom think of it as being a factor in changes other than those of organic life and growth.

Evolution is the name for a long order. It cites a process of progressive changes, growth and improvement in all the affairs of human life—social, economic, industrial. It shows itself in religion, politics; in the distribution of ideas, merchandise and the transportation of passengers.

While evolution is the method, back of it the thing causative is necessity.

In this land of the home and the free, man's expression of individuality has had but few restrictions. He could engage in any business he likes if he could show qualifications.

He could manufacture anything not dangerous or detrimental to the public good, with no limitations on the amount of his produet.

So our American civilization began life in a crude and primitive way. We had the elements to fight but here nature had been lavish and bestowed on man everything he needed to fight them with.

With a virgin soil so wonderfully fertile and free to those who would take it, live on and cultivate it, and nature's vast resources of mineral wealth untouched, it is not surprising that the land-hungry and oppressed of all the earth should flock to the American shores to enjoy a freedom of life they had never known.

Each man worked for himself unmindful of what his neighbor might be doing, and in due time we, as a nation, had become so thrifty as agriculturalists that we had more farm products than we could consume and began to feed the needy nations of Europe.

This led to the development of our maritime commerce and our entry into the manufacturing of every conceivable utility that can be made from cotton, wool, hides, copper, iron, steel, petroleum and wood.

We used all the scientific and mechanical genius of the nation in inventing labor-saving devices, our paramount purpose being to create wealth—wealth in material and needful things.

At first the markets of the world were open to us and competition was negligible. We grew so fast in population and material wealth that the effete, depleted nations of the old world began to be jealous and considered us a commercial menace.

Called us mercenary—a nation of money grubbers as we had neglected music, sculpture, painting, the fine arts nnd the cultivation of the ethical and aesthetic nature in man.

At first we built crooked, narrow streets, as seen in older Boston, without regard to convenience or future growth. We built our homes, factories, towns and cities as though utility and quick profits were all that mattered. Symmetry, uniformity, appropriateness and architectural beauty of design were indifferently considered.

Then we had, as a nation, n crude, raw look. Everything had a helter skelter thrown-together appearance.

But we have outgrown that stage of immaturity. In organic evolution one things grows out of some former thing. Life pushes itself up from lower to higher, better forms and takes on materiality.

In social, industrial and economic aspects of the same law old things are superseded by new; inferior and inefficient methods are displaced by adoption of superior devices.

Thus we have outgrown the "one hoss chaise" for automobiles;the pony dispatch for the fast express, the airplane and wireless. Thirty years ago the majoritty of our homes were illuminated with candles or kerosene, heated with wood or coal fires. Today it is possible for the well-to-do to light and heat their homes, do their laundry work, baking, sweeping, even toast the bread and make coffee by electricity.

A hundred and fifty years ago the use of electricity was but little known. About that time the electric battery was devised, but not until 1875 did we know how to make a dynamo which makes it possible to generate electricity continuously, generously and convey it long distances.

The combined electric plants of the country today produce electrical energy equivalent to the working energy of 290,000,000 h. p.

If we worked our men and machines to capacitty our production in excess of home consumption would feed and clothe all Europe, give them all of life's necessities and untold luxuries.

Our created wealth, our development of nature's vast resources has no precedent in history, and while the working man's condition has been bettered as never before, still we hnve not improved and developed the higher qualities in the masses of men as we have done in discovering the merits of petroleum and a host of other material things.

One illustration will express our whole financial and industrial system.

A close corporation with a million dollars nvested in plant and equipment, employs 200 men, and their net divisible yearly profits amount to one million dollars, besides half a million dollars' worth of unsold goods.

Twenty per cent of net profits go to labor which gives each workman one thousand dollars yearly. Eighty per cent goes to the eight directors and owners, making $100,000 yearly. Allowing six per cent interest for each directors' capital, his salary service draws $92,500

The directors' technical skill in making the profits may be worth 92 times as much as the workman's, but the division of profits is unsatisfactory to labor, which makes labor indifferent in his workmanship, discontented and often dangerous.

Capitulists have made a new discovery: not all of them, but its great leaders have, which means that the lesser capitalists must in time follow suit.

Prior to the World War, wages were based on the cost of living by the American standard. On the basis of feed your horse only what he needs for energy to draw a full load. In the illustration here given this basis for the distribution of profits was in vogue though the percentages differ in different industries.

The heads of governments learned long ago that if a nation's food supply became so depleted that the populace were half famished that government soon tottered and fell.

So our government has long scrutinized our agriculture with an eagle eye, has encouraged production unto abundance, has kept statistical data on crop acreage, on yield per acre, on the amount we need yearly for home consumption that there may be no danger of a shortage. But it has never been concerned about what an excessive crop production meant to the farmer.

Our home consumption of cotton averages about twelve million 500-pound bales. But too often cotton planters grow twenty million bales and find our foreign markets glutted with cotton from India and other sources, and he finds he has suffered a financial loss, or may be broken even—just worked for glory and the good of others.

Well, the cotton problem symbolizes a condition into which all our manufacturing industries have grown namely, to over-production.

Foreigners learned that the big money was to be made in manufacturing, so they have bought our patented machines and are supplying their home markets which once were ours.

Now over-production might be called under-consumption with more accuracy until everybody has had all his needs supplied.

The only reason why surplus production can not be sold and usefully consumed is that the masses have not the money with which to buy and they constitute about 98 per cent of our home consumers. The two per cent of our population furnish the brains and capital for the rest of us and draw eighty per cent of the nation's earnings. But without gross indulgence the 2 per cent rich man can't consume, eat, drink and wear more than the common man would like to have, and the common man, who so greatly outnumber the rich man. is in reality the natyon's consumer.

He is also a consumer, a would-be consumer, of the rich man's unsalable goods.

So a new light is dawning in the minds of our leaders in the great industries. Now whether the father of this new idea is for the rich man, the law of self-preservation or whether it is born out a sense of justice and live for the well-being and betterment of our fellow man, it is not for me to say. The cause which is about to make a more equitable distribution of earnings may include both reasons.

The big,broad-minded man of business has begun to imitate the policy of our government. He sees at last that his safety and the security of society depends not on just giving men enough work and enough pay to live on, but that he must give them more of his eighty per cent that they may be contented and happy and enabled to enjoy more of life's good things and be made into better citizens, better husbands and fathers.

And thus will be cured this craze for Bolshevism, Communism and the other isms.

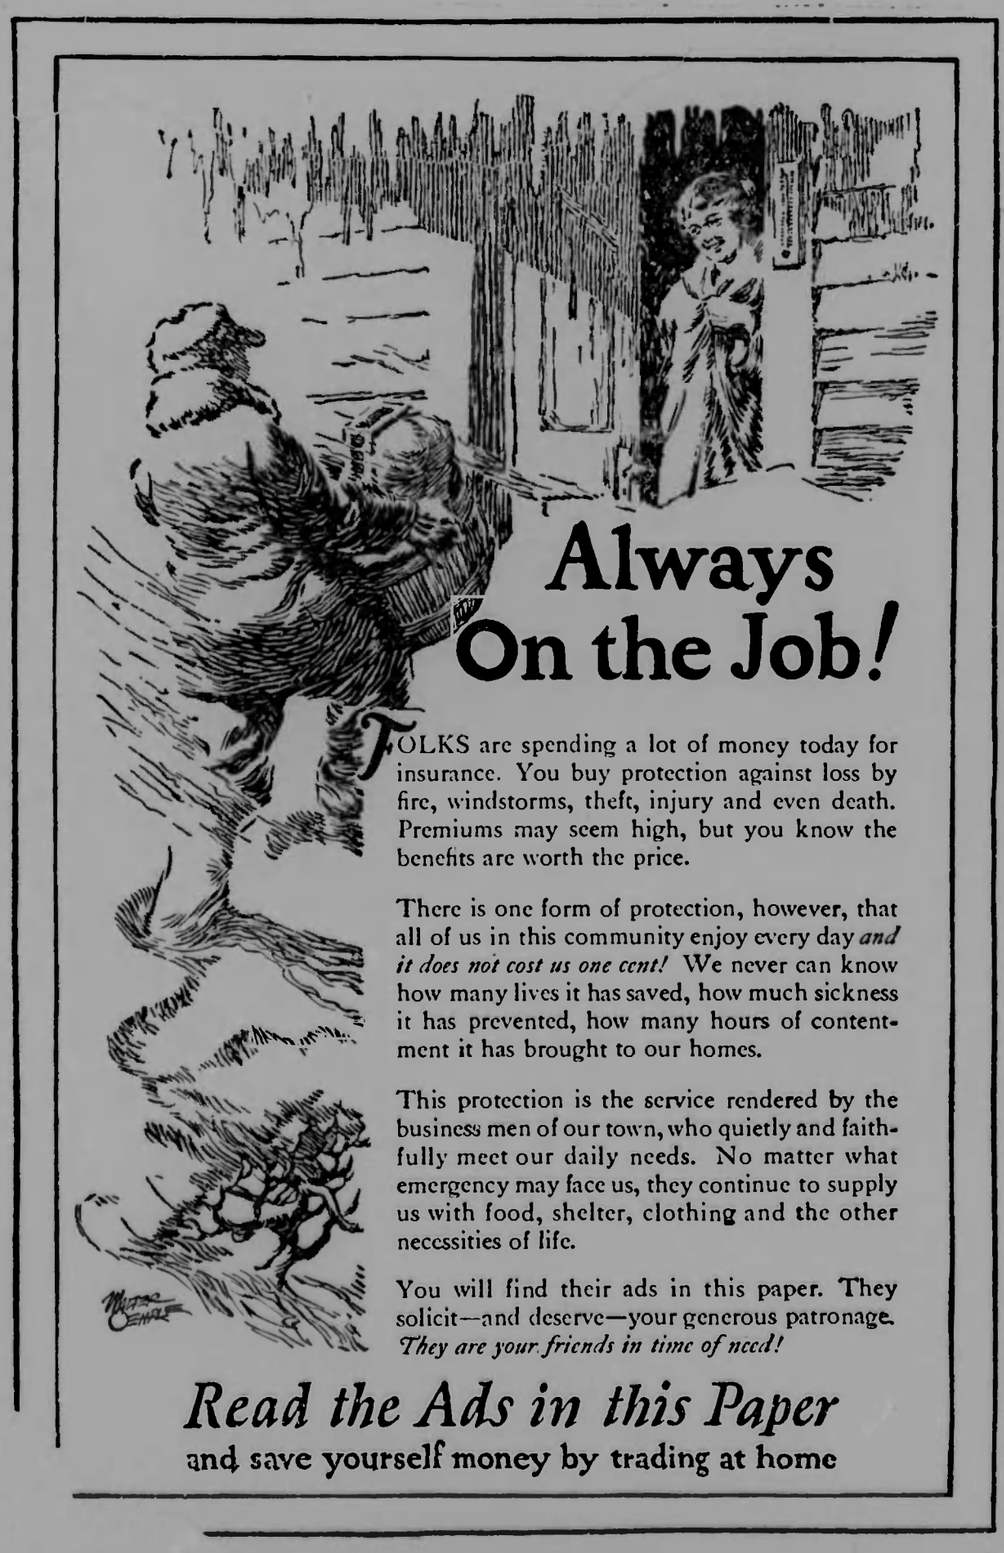
Another long-known evil in business is going to be guided by statistics and given advice. We have had so much freedom that we have done as we pleased. Men have started four groceries, four drug stores and other kinds of merchandising establishments where the purchasing power of the people could not support over two.

Take for instance the manufacturing shoe industry. The shoe trade of the nation will be comprehended as though it was operated by one manufacturer. The individual concern will be provided with statistics showing him how many millions pairs of shoes were made last year, how many sold and the millions unsold in excess of public needs, even when sold at a loss.

The executive head of the Burenu of Statistics for the shoe trade will annually advise old firms to curtail their production to meet public needs, which may be 30 to 50 per cent. It will advise new adventurers into the business to keep out or suffer probable bankruptcy if they go in.

In the textile trades their bureau will issue to individual corporations the same kind of data and counsel.

Thus the nation will be saved from needless waste and many firms from bankruptcy, because it is useless to produce in excess of the people's power to purchase.



Now when (a) who makes hats gets fifty per cent of the earnings instead of his present twenty per cent, and (b) who makes silk hose gets a like increase, each one can buy more of the products of the other's labor.

When this principle is introduced throughout the nation's industries under-consumption will soon eliminate over-production nnd prosperity among the 98 per cent of our populntion will reign as never before and the brotherhood of man will have its beginning in manufacturing nnd merchandising where righteousness cnn be practiced.

Evolution in business, in society, is the unseen enzyme, the yeast in the dough which is made to lift and lighten the whole loaf of humanity. While leaders of men we must have, still it is contrary to nature's design to elevate a fortunate two per cent of humanity to abnormal nnd dangerous heights at the expense of the multitude.

Measures of n national scope are being formulated that will elevate the masses in a proportionnte degree with the evolution of their masters in all the moral, mental and material things that make life worth while and give it a meaning here and now nnd a fitness for what may be hereafter.

Some Party

At a party given recently by one of the many bridge or flinch clubs of Oakland (name will be given upon receipt of a plainly addressed envelope with two cent stamp) each member was requested to bring something that she did not care to throw away but which she found to be more or less useless. On the evening of the party 19 of the 20 women present brought their husbands.

Character Studies.

Starting this week and continuing indefinitely, Scoop will give some well-defined portraits of some of Oakland's citizens with a short character sketch of each one presented. Preparation for this feature has been under way for some time and it was only through the spending of some hard cash that the character studies were obtained.

Col. Jim Mutt Bell was engaged by Scoop as the oficial photographer and some of the exciting experiences he had while snapping the men at work will be told by him any day between the hours of 12 m. and 1 a. m. o'clock at his sttudio. Make your engagement in advance.

* * *

It required two days and three nights to get one snapshot of one of the characrers at work. No, he doesn't work in a mine, but the reason it took the Colonel so long is simple. He is one of those characters who is not often caught in such a predicament.

JAMES "AIRISH" KERINS

The above picture is supposed to be of James "Airish" Kerins. His broad, pleasant grin can be plainly seen in its proper place, and his eternal blush is even more apparent. The gas tank by which he is standing is located at Kerins Garage on Green street where "Bill" Browning's and other Standard brands of gasoline are dispensed at so much per. Jim has just completed the onerous work of giving Mike Helbig four gallons of gas for three gallons. The three men at the right are laughing up their sleeves because Mike thinks he put one over on Jim. Jim, who is handing back the change with his hand, is all to the wise, however, for the gas he gave Mike froze one night last summer and had to be sold at half price. The rear of the car seen on the left is another good customer of Jim's who is driving up for a supply of free water and free air. The coat tail to be seen on the right is Jim doing the disappearing act. He suddenly remembered that he had an engagement at a bowling alley to do some practice work and also at a restaurant to get a plate of stew and cup of coffee.

* * *

Who's the Next?

Who will the Colonel get a picture of this week? He had to get the last one from a rear elevation in the Hinebaugh buildnig, because Mr. Kerins was quoted as saying that they could not take any picture of anything concerning him which might later be used as evidence.

Bobby Hoffman hid behind the counter yesterday when he lit his cigaret so that the rest of tthe fellows wouldn't see that he had to use a match.

Speaking of those automatic cigar and cigaret lighters, Scoop has never seen one yet that will strike on an average of 60 in one hundred tries. Reeves Blandford holds the record so far. In a contest the other night he had 55 successful attempts in a total of 100.

TWO MIRACLES OF POWER

LESSON TEXT—Mark 4:35-5:20.

GOLDEN TEXT—What manner of man is this that even the wind and the sea obey him?

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Stills the Storm.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Rules the Storm.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Universal Power of Jesus.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus' Power over Nature and Human Life.

I. Jesus Calms the Sea (vv. 35-41).

1. Crossing the sea (vv. 35, 36).

Wearied by teaching the multitudes, He proposed that they take ship at evening time to the other side of the sea, doubtless to escape from the throngs of people.

2. Overtaken by a storm (v. 37).

Even though Jesus was in the boat with the disciples they were overtaken by a storm. It is not God's will that we should escape the storms, but those who have Christ on their boat are safe because that boat cannot go down.

3. Jesus asleep in the storm-tossed boat (v. 38).

In the midst of the turbulent elements He was resting in sleep. The day had been a very strenuous one and He was weary. He who made the sea could well lie down and sleep, though the storm violently raged.

4. The terrified disciples (v. 38).

In their minds nothing but disaster and death awaited them. They were not only terrified, but they chided Jesus for sleeping while they were in such great danger.

5. Christ's rebuke (vv. 39, 40).

(1) The wind (v. 39).

This showed the Lord's mighty power to control the forces of nature.

(2) The disciples (v. 40).

He rebuked them for their lack of faith. He showed that they were looking upon their circumstances instead of upon their Lord.

6. The effect upon the disciples (v. 41).

They were filled with great fear. A little while ago they were afraid in the face of the storm; now they are afraid in the presence of the Lord.

II. Jesus Heals the Gadarene Demoniac (5:1-20.)

After the stilling of the tempest Jesus crossed to the other side of the sea into heathen territory.

1. Met by a demon possessed man (vv. 1-6.)

This man was in a desperate condition. He was so fierce that no one could safely pass that way. He wore no clothes (Luke 8:27). No chains were strong enough to hold him and no one was able to tame him. In the night time his hideous cries could be heard while he vented his rage by cutting himself with stones. Many today are demon possessed. Much of the insanity of the age is traceable to this cause. As the coming of the Lord draweth nigh these things will increase (1 Tim. 4:1).

2. What the demons knew about Christ (vv. 7-9.)

They knew that He was the Son of God and that He had come to destroy the devil and his works. Among the demons there is no doubt as to the deity of Christ and the judgment to come, though we have many theologians and preachers who say they do not believe it. The devil blinds their eyes so they cannot understand (II Cor. 4:4.)

3. Christ's power to deliver from the devil (vv. 10-13.)

He cast out the demons from the man (v. 8). The demons quail before Christ, not daring to dispute His power, so they begged to be permitted to enter the swine. As soon as the Lord issued the permit, they hastened away to hurl the swine to destruction.

4. The effect upon the people of the city (vv. 14-17.)

The keepers of the swine fled to the city and made report of what had occurred. This miracle brought the people out, but when they realized the loss of their hogs they besought Him to leave their coasts. They cared more for their hogs than for Christ and the cure of this man. These Gadarenes have many successors today.

The man who was healed sent home to testify (vv. 18-20).

No doubt it would have been safe and pleasant to abide with Jesus, but his friends needed his testimony. The best witness for Christ is one who has been saved by Him. The best place to begin that testimony is at home where one is known best.

EIGHT months ago the farmers and business men of our community decided they wanted another enterprise in our county.

THEY have at last secured a contract for the location of one of the best dairies to locate a shipping station here.

THIS will mean thousands of dollars to be distributed among the farmers each year.

LET'S not stop with one enterprise; let's go after more.

Valentine Bridge Luncheon.

One of the most attractive and elaborate parties of the season was the valentine bridge luncheon given by Mrs. J. R. Gnagey and Mrs. T. O. Broadwater at the National Hotel on Saturday afternoon. The dining room and the dining table were beautifully decorated in hearts and with red carnations. Covers were laid for thirty-one. A delicious four-course luncheon was served, carried out in valentine design; also the hand-painted place cards, favors and tallies were used. Following the luncheon eight tables of bridge were in play at the home of Mrs. Broadwater. The honors were won by Mrs. A. C. Stanton, high; Miss Ruth Stanton, second; Mrs. Arthur Laney, third; Mrs. Harry Landis, consolation.

The guests were Mrs. C. A. Bender, Mrs. A. C. Stanton, Mrs. N. R. Davis, Mrs. A. J. Bender, Mrs. C. O. Keller, Mrs. Nevin Broadwater, Mrs. H. J. Bender, Mrs. B. T. Keller, Mrs. Fred. B. Dowling, Mrs. John Deetz and Mrs. Harry Landis, all of Cumberland.

Play Given by W. O. W. a Success

The minstrel and play given by the members of the local camp on last Friday and Saturday evenings was a great success. Crowded houses each evening greeted the jubilee minstrels in the opening chorus. Those participating in the minstrel were H. J. Bender, Harold Miller, A. C. Stanton, C. O. Keller, C. O. Bender, Harold Glotfelty and C. S. Zeller. They were roundly applauded in their specialty acts and for their singing.

The big song hit, "Henry Made a Lady Out of Lizzie," by C. S. Zeller, was splendidly rendered.

The second part, "Eliza Rosewater's Divorce Case," was very amusing as well as entertaining and brought forth some ridiculous situations.

Simon L. Maust Paralyzed.

Simon L. Maust, of Springs, Pa., well known in this locality, and father of Mrs. Stewart Rodamer, assistant postmaster in the Grantsville office, suffered a stroke of paralysis last Saturday afternoon. When stricken Mr. Maust was on his way from his home to a store. He was rendered speechless but not otherwise affected. Dr. N. R. Davis, of Grantsville, was summoned to attend the ill man. We are pleased to report that he is now recovering. Mr. Maust has been closely identified with the Springs Mutual Telephone Company ever since its organization, having been manager for a number of years and an operator at Springs ever since the necessity for a switchboard at that place existed.

Celesta Fike Livengood.

Mrs. Celesta Fike Livengood, wife of Joseph Livengood, died on February 4 at the State sanatorium, Cresson, Pa., of tuberculosis. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Fike, of Somerset county, Pa., and was married about twenty years ago. She was nearly forty-eight years of age and is survived by her husband, three sons and a daughter. The funeral services were conducted from the Salisbury, Pa., Church of the Brethren on the 7th inst. Mrs. Livengood was an exemplary woman, greatly beloved by all who knew her. She was a faithful member of her church, the Brethren.

Mrs. Gortner's Party.

Mrs. Harvey Gortner entertained with six tables of bridge last Thursday evening at her palatial home, there being twenty-five guests present, with six tables of bridge, the affair being one of the most brilliant of the year. High score was accorded Mrs. C. S. Zeller and second place to Mrs. Harry Bender. The hostess served an elaborate two-course luncheon. Those present were Mrs. C. A. Bender, Mrs. Oliver Bender, Mrs. J. F. Fahey, Mrs. Floyd Diehl, Mrs. Harry Edwards, Mrs. C. S. Zeller, Mrs. N. U. Broadwater, Mrs. N. R. Davis, Mrs. Harry Bender, Mrs. Eva Beachy, Mrs. Mary Livengood, Mrs. C. O. Keller, Mrs. T. O. Community House Benefit.

Junior and Senior Play.

The Junior and Senior classes of the high school will present a three-act comedy, "Prince of Liars," at the W. O. W. Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings, February 17 and 18.

Community Center at High School.

Considerable agitation has been astir in the community of late for a greater school plant to accommodate the ever-increasing school. This condition has been brought about by bus transportation and since the patrons of the smaller schools understand the advantages there has been a constant clamor for larger quarters and in connection therewith has come the suggestion that the town and community assist the school authorities financially and then use the school plant as a community center. This idea is gaining in popularity and very rightly so, for a good auditorium is much needed by both the school and the community, and whose property is the school plant if not that of the community? This being the case, the public has a right to its use so many persons argue.

Sugar Makers are Active.

Those of our people who have sugar groves have been quite busy getting their sap buckets in condition and into the groves for use when the time comes, which, apparently, is drawing near. A few of the early ones have already gathered small amounts of sap and turned it into sugar or syrup.

Church Services.

Services in the churches next Sunday will be as follows: Catholic, at 9:00 a. m. Methodist, Sabbath school at 10:00 a. m.; Christian Endeavor at 6:30 and worship at 7:30 p. m. Reformed, Sabbath school at 10:00 a. m. Lutheran, Sabbath school at 10:00 a. m. All are invited to any of these services.

Ministerial Pension Drive.

About one-third of the members were interviewed and the response was good. The drive will be continued until every member has made a pledge.

A Freak Egg.

J. B. Miller, who resides just north of town, exhibited a freak egg in town on Tuesday. It was of large size, in fact a double egg, for inside the outer shell was a well formed white and yolk and inside this another perfectly formed egg, shell and all.

John Yommer Injured.

John Yommer, an aged shoemaker of Grantsville, fell on the ice Tuesday evening and injured himself to such an extent that he was unable to rise. ## STATE COMMANDER VISITS THE LOCAL LEGIONAIRRES

Met Former Chaplain on Street —New Members Accepted

Hon. Wallace Williams, State Commander Maryland American Legion, paid Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, an official visit on Tuesday evening, upon which occasion a special meeting of the post was held in the City Hall on Third street.

The State Commander came to Oakland Tuesday afternoon from Baltimore, where he has his headquarters, and the visit paid the local post was his initial official call on the several posts in Western Maryland. He left Oakland yesterday morning to be in Cumberland last night and at Hagerstown this evening.

Commander Williams, in his address to the members of the local post, paid them a high tribute for the excellent work done during the past three years, and assured them that their departmental headquarters was an active body in the National organization, which was endeavoring to keep alive in the minds of American citizens their responsibility to preserve the traditions of this nation and to instill in them the "peace time" patriotism which he said he felt was essential for the continuance of the high type of government of the United States.

New Members Accepted.

A large number of Legionairres was present to greet the Commander at the meeting, and it is said that a number of former service men, not already enrolled as members of the post signified their intentions of becoming members and were accepted as such by the membership committee. Refreshments were served by James Fazzalari.

Meets Former Chaplain on Street.

While in Oakland on Tuesday, Commander Williams met Father William J. McVeigh, who during the World War was a Chaplain with the American forces, serving in the Fifth Division in which division Commander Williams also served as captain in a machine gun company. The meeting was by chance and both gentlemen expressed their pleasure at having met and renewed their acquaintance.

To Observe Maryland Day.

Past Post Commander Delbert Davis was directed to prepare a suitable program for the proper observance of Maryland Day, March 25, and according to Mr. Davis a program will be presented at the Maryland Theatre on the afternoon of that day at which time there will be a speaker of note present and a number of musical numbers will be given.

POULTRY SPECIAL TRAIN WILL ARRIVE MARCH 10

To Visit Ten Counties And Make Eleven Stops Between March 5 and March 10 Next.

A special poultry train to be operated over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Maryland from March 5 to March 10, will arrive in Oakland on the latter date, March 10, at 8:30 o'clock a. m., according to information received at the office of County Agent McGlone. The train is scheduled to remain in the local railroad yards until noon or a little later of that day.

It will carry exhibits covering practically every phase of breeding, brooding, rearing and marketing poultry, and short lectures will be given at each stop by specialists from the Extension Service, University of Maryland, and the United States Department of Agriculture.

The object of the exhibit, which is the first of its kind to appear in Garrett county, is to afford poultry raisers and breeders an opportunity to compare their own methods of rearing and marketing with those recommended by the specialists.

The tour will embrace ten counties in Maryland and stops will be made at Singerly, Aberdeen, Coventon, Sykesville, Ellicott City, Beltsville, Rockville, Frederick, Keedysville, Hancock and Oakland.

Special Feature for the Women.

J. L. McGlone, County Agent, began today to send out notices to poultrymen stating the time of the expected arrival of the train in Oakland.

Special provision has been made for women visitors at the train, and Miss Elsie Benthein, Home Demonstration Agent, will have charge of this part of the day's program. The exhibit and lectures will demonstrate the essential factors in reducing losses and making poultry production more successful and profitable.

The train will include an exhibit car containing live birds of the principal breeds grown in the State, a lecture car and a flat car, upon which a model laying house will be shown.

MAN IN JAIL FOLLOWING ALLEGED ROBBERY IN BUS

Miss Katherine Gocke Has Traveling Bag Rifled

After traveling from Davis, W. Va. to Oakland to attend a bridge party last Friday night, Miss Katherine Gocke was almost forced to attend in her street attire, when it was discovered, upon alighting from the bus, that her traveling bag had been opened and all contents removed.

James Gray, about 45 years of age, who gave his address as Bayard, W. Va., was arrested on the charge of larceny, and was committed to the Oakland jail. He will be given hearing on Saturday before Justice of the Peace, W. A. Gonder. The articles of clothing, amounting to about $70, it was estimated, were all recovered.

Mother's Circle of Oakland Has Interesting Meeting.

The Mother's Circle of Oakland held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Delbert Davis last Thursday evening, February 16. Mrs. Edward O'Donnell gave a very interesting talk on distinguishing truth from imagination.

The object of the organization, according to its members, is to awaken in the minds of all women engaged in child training, a keener appreciation of the responsibilities and possibilities and to give every mother the benefit of specific topics suited to her individual problems and needs.

The papers read at each meeting by the members are written by well known publicists and authors who have made a study of child life from a sociological or psychological standpoint.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. R. R. Gilbert on March 15, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

PASTOR OF LOCAL M. E. CHURCH DIES AT FAIRMONT

Rev. Albert D. Craig Succumbs To Septic Poisoning in West Virginia Institution.

Death came to Rev. Albert D. Craig at Cook's Hospital, Fairmont, West Va., last night, of septic poisoning. He had been pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church in Oakland since last October, having been assigned to this charge at the last meeting of the West Virginia Conference. Prior to coming to Oakland, Rev. Craig was pastor of Diamond St. Methodist Episcopal church, Fairmont, for five years and for a like period served the Methodist church at Kingwood. He was aged 54 years.

The Rev. Craig was a native of Huntingdon, Pa., and his wife was formerly Miss Jessie Somerville, of Huntington, W. Va., the wife and one son, George Craig, of Fairmont, W. Va., survive.

The minister was taken ill at his home in Oakland several weeks ago and he was taken three weeks ago to the Fairmont hospital where his ailment was determined after exhaustive examinations as septic poison.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Fairmont and the body taken to Point Pleasant, W. Va., for interment. A delegation from St. Paul's church and also representatives from St. Mark's Lutheran church will attend the services at Fairmont.

Rev. Craig's work as a pastor in Oakland, although of short duration, will be long remembered. He was loved by not only the people of his own particular faith but by all with whom he came in contact. He was a devoted churchman and one of the strongest preachers in the entire conference. His passing is greatly regretted by hundreds of people.

TRANSFORMER BURNS AND OAKLAND IN DARKNESS

Fire Sunday at Sub-Station Cuts Off Lights and Power

Fire, originating in the transformers of the Oakland sub-station of the West Maryland Power Company, located alongside the Military road just south of town, plunged Oakland, Mt. Lake Park, Deer Park and all other communities using the product of the company, into darkness Sunday night about 9:30 o'clock, and service was not resumed until Monday eveing at 8:15 o'clock.

New transformers to take the place of those destroyed, had to be transported to Oakland from Morgantown, and the icy condition of the road caused a long delay in their arrival here. In less than three hours after they had arrived, however, Oakland again had electricity. The power was again cut off on Tuesday afternoon and remained off until about 5:30 in the evening in order that proper adjustments could be made.

Lack of power with which to operate machinery created a hardship in many places, none moreso, however, than in The Republican office where the eight motors used to operate the various machines stood idle. This condition has to be met in every community and things are now running along smoothly.

In additon to destroying the transformers the fire also burned the two supporting poles, causing them to fall to the ground. The damage sustained by the power company can... t be estimated but it will probabl... several thousand dollars.

In celebration of the sixty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the Knights of Pythias order, the local lodge will hold a public meeting, to which all are invited, the members, friends, wives, sweethearts, sisters, brothers and relatives being included in the list. A special program has been arranged, the Oakland Orchestra engaged to furnish music and there will be an abundance of refreshments, Reese Friend, chairman of the program committee, has announced.

E. Ray Jones, local attorney, will be the principal speaker, and there will be several other short addresses, it was stated. The topics to be dwelt upon are the history, achievements and objectives of the Knights of Pythias as an organization.

According to a letter sent out by the national headquarters "the order is purely American. It was the first fraternal society to be chartered by Congress and its jurisdiction is confined to the North American continent. ### Mutual Understanding Between Dairymen and Washington Concern to be Reached

Following the assurance given by Henry P. Brawner, president of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, Washington, D. C., that his concern would locate a milk receiving station here, a meeting of farmers, dairymen and business men will be held at the Maryland Theatre at 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon for the purpose of having a mutual understanding between the milk producers of the county and the Washington concern.

County Agent J. L. McGlone will be chairman of the meeting and will talk on the possibilities of increasing the dairy business in this section of the county. Mr. McGlone and members of the dairy committee have been assured that Mr. John P. ## THE REPUBLICAN BEGINS ITS FIFTY-SECOND YEAR

Today's Issue Marks Start On Another Milestone.

With today's issue The Republican begins the fifty-second year of its existence, having been founded on Saturday, February 28, 1877 and its first issue appearing the following Saturday, March 3. Capt. James A. Hayden, of Mountain Lake Park, was the founder and editor until July 4, 1890. Capt. Hayden is still living at the Park and has a keen interest in every subject of the present day.

Volume 52, Number 1, resembles the first publication in masthead, but little else is similar. Professional cards and patent medicine advertisements, then the chief source of revenue for the average country newspaper, were printed on the front page, the "inside" pages being what was then known as patented or syndicated material were printed in Cleveland, Ohio, and contained little or no news of a local nature, and on the "home-printed" pages local news was woefully lacking. At that time, however, it can be safely said that the paper had all that there was, and the first attempt in the publication of The Republican was a credit to the editor who had purchased the plant from C. T. Ahell, of Baltimore, who had come to Oakland a few years before and established the Garrett County Gazette.

During the fifty-one years of its existence The Republican has had but two owners, Capt. Hayden, the founder, and the present published.

The Republican carries the most news of the county, has a very satisfactory and steadily growing circulation among the people of the county and has the most completely equipped printing plant in Western Maryland where it is the pleasure of those operating it to give service to a rapidly growing list of patrons.

Forty-eight years from now, when the century mark will have been reached, The Republican will still be Garrett county's best and most valued newspaper, but it will be a daily with morning and evening editions.

The best time to discover conditions that should be corrected is during the period from babyhood to school age.

forward to the time when it will be as much a matter of course for a child to be gotten ready—physically—for school, as it is for his parents to supply with the necessary clothing.

"Some notion of the conditions that are discovered after a child enters school, and that could have been detected just as readily before his enrollment, can be gathered from the report of one of the deputy State health officers of his examination of school children in one of the counties. In each one hundred children examined, he found 47 with one or more conditions needing attention. Six had defective vision; 13 diseased tonsils; 26 decayed teeth; 17 were undernourished; 1 had defective hearing; 1 nasal obstruction causing mouth breathing; 2 were threatened with heart disease; 2 were suffering from contagious diseases and some had chest or lung conditions marking the beginning of tuberculosis.

"Early detection of such conditions or of incipient disease, such as tuberculosis or heart disease, makes the possibility of their control all the greater. That is the encouraging side of this rather gloomy picture. It was my good fortune to visit one of the schools just one year after the first medical inspection had been made and the need for corrective treatment had been pointed out to the parents. The physical improvement and consequent corresponding mental alertness of the children who had had the necessary care was truly remarkable. Some of the children who had been classed as backward by pupils and teachers were forging to the front.

"Nearly 30,000 children in the public schools throughout the counties had physical supervision of this sort last year. And year by year the number increases. What that means in the way of health building for the men and women of the future of Maryland is beyond calculation."

THERE MUST BE INCREASE.

Every dairyman, farmer and business man interested in Garrett county as a dairying county, should attend the meeting Saturday afternoon in the Maryland Theatre, Oakland. At that time the Chestnut Farms Dairy manager or a reprsentative, will be there to point out the things that must be done by the farmers of the county so that there will be a sufficient amount of milk in sight when the milk shipping station is completed and ready for business.

It is not a ease of transferring milk from one milk station to another, for that would not benefit the county one bit and would be manifestly unfair to the Oakland Creamery Company, which has been buying the milk of produeers for several years.

It is obvious that the milk for the new dairy must come from an increased source of supply and it is for this reason that the meeting will be held Saturday. Ways and means of improving herds, barns and equipment will be explained and it is now up to the farmers to make these improvements.

Improvements must come before there can be any increased amount of money coming in each month, and now since it is assured that there will be that extra amount, providing the farmers will improve their barns and herds, there should be no reason in the world for hesitating.

The same principle applies here as it does in advertising. One advertises when business is bad and consequently improves his business. He doesn't wait until business is good to advertise his wares. Likewise the farmer must make a few improvements before he receives any material gain. The material gain will not come before the improvements. Every farmer knows what would happen if he attempted to put the cart before the horse.

So, in summing up, there are two things to keep in mind—that improvements must be made, and that there must be an increased supply of milk. Both will make Garrett county better and incidentally be much more profitable to the farmers.

WHY COUNTRY BOYS WIN.

Despite the great increase in city population in recent decades, country boys, that is boys reared on farms or in small towns, still seem able to capture their share of the important places in the business and professional world. The two richest men in America, Ford and Rockefeller, were both country boys, and so likewise was the world's greatest inventor, Edison. The President of the United States is a country boy and numerous instances could be cited to show that outstanding leaders in business, polities and the professions in this country were recruited from the rural districts. This, in spite of the fact that within the past 50 years the rural population, or those people living on farms and in towns, has shrunken from about 75 per cent to less than 50 per cent of the total population.

There are probably many good reasons why the country boys take high plaecs. Perhaps one reason is that the country boy usually arrives in a big city without friends or influence, with limited cash, hut with a fine determination to make good and show the folks back home what he can do. City boys, on the other hand, often have relatives and friends through whose influence they get a "comfortable berth" to start off with, and they gradually settle down to the business routine of a big corporation, enjoy the numerous diversions of a big city where the demands on their spare time are so heavy that it takes a Spartan determination to study instead of play after working hours.

The country boy, determined how his folks and friends that he ke good in the big town, "s. '; his superiors notice the diff ...een his attitude and that ...are ...tisfied with a con ...ioh, and the re- ...nce the "hay- ...nt positions

...ica, who, ...ment would quote ...n old fool," but they ...reminded of another proverb, ...ested by human experience, which notes that we are never too old to learn, and which is confirmed by the report from Columbia that most of the elderly persons listed above showed as much facility in learning as the same university's students under 20 who were only 102 in number among thousands.

Treaties, Not Cruisers, Is What Some Folks In the Land of the Free and Home of the Brave Want, and Their Argument Has Merit In It.

To the Editor of The Republican.

Treaties—not Cruisers—is the slogan carried by some communications being sent through the mails and these communications have to be many and swift just now.

The big naval bill before the House Committee on Naval Affairs has astounded the country and the world at large. The still larger proportions which nre hinted at from day to day stun one who reads and thinks of the affairs of the nation. The figures given out Feb. 10th are $4,200,000,000 to be "required for the Navy in the next nine years if Congress authorizes and carries out the Wilbur construction program and makes available money for the building of vessels already authorized."

One thing which has been brought home by the consideration of such astounding sums is that the public realizes more fully the uneven distribution of the national tax dollars which now devotes from 82 to 83 cents to war and its obligations. There is of course only the seventeen or eighteen cents left for all flood relief, harbor and river improvements, research in agriculture and health conditions, for civil government. Were the nation relieved from that tremendous burden of war requirements, from this unequal division, schools, hospitals, roads, flood control, agricultural matters, those things vital to the improvement of living conditions, would all be forwarded.

It is evident that these stupendous sums being asked for will lay a still greater burden of taxation upon the country if they are granted. Heavier taxes for the United States, heavier taxes for the world. For will England, France, Italy, Japan not feel the necessity of adding to their navies also?

Again the question of the utter futility of using the people's money for ships which are out of date before they can be finished should be considered. Everybody knows that inventions of aircraft are rendering battleships obsolete; also that constant discoveries, never so rapid and overwhelming as now, throw each day into the discard what a few days before was considered powerful as an agent of destruction.

Though why destroy? And why, the country asks itself, should hard-earned dollars be thrown away? America is so credited with being a rich country that few stop to think of the enormous number of its citizens who are always, and of neeessity, a few steps bheind their grocery bill. Could the conditions but be eased for the largest part of its citizens would not money be well spent, or rather, well saved?

So hail to the slogan: "Treaties—not Cruisers!"

In line with that ery we have the new treaty between France and the United States and the recognition of the fact that there has been for one hundred and fifty years an unbroken friendship between the two nations. The terms of the new treaty are not yet all known, but it is known that they are broader and firmer than those made before and that the preamble of the treaty deprecates war as a means of settling international disputes between countries.

In a short while the treaties between this country nnd England, this country and Japan, Italy and a number of lesser nations will have to be restated or renewed. Can not the United States now, at a critieal time which will certainly forecast the future of decades, declare that the desirable thing is Treaties—not Cruisers; that friendship is the strong factor in relations between nations of the world?

...one of nine states that ...ently entered into an agreement, through the respective departments of health, which makes provision for joint sanitary control over the waterways in these states. The other states participating in it are Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, New York, Indiana, Illinois and Tennessee. The underlying purpose of the plan is the protection and conservation of adequate and safe water supplies for drinking and commercial uses. Through the agreement, cooperative action is obtained for the abatement of the pollution of waterways in any one of these states when such pollution may he harmful to adjacent or down stream states.

To insure coordinated policies and methods of control in the sanitary engineering problems involved, an advisory board composed of the chief engineers of the states entering into the agreement has been appointed by the departments of health concerned in it. Mr. Abel Wolman, chief of the State bureau of sanitary engineering, has been appointed the representative of the Maryland State department of health on the board of Engineers.

In announcing the appointment, Dr. John S. Fulton, director of the State department of health, said: "A glance at the map of the United States showing the congestion of population along the waterways is all that is necessary for the realization of the interdependence and interrelation of the states in matters of this sort. One of the problems which an increasing population imposes upon a state is the ever increasing difficulty of providing adequately for the disposal of sewage and of other sources of pollution. Every community and each growing industry add to the pollution of our streams. It is obvious that some control must be provided to relieve the condition sufficiently to make it possible for populations to continue to have the necessary water resources for their domestic and commercial needs.

"For this reason, this interstate stream conservation agreement has been entered into and the appointment of this interstate river board—the first of its kind in the United States, is of importance. It is the first effort in this country to establish some uniform program for the control of interstate bodies of water so as to provide adequate water resources for the future, for municipal drinking supplies, for industrial uses, for recreational purposes, for power requirements and for navigation.

"Already much has been accomplished in the reduction and elimination of pollution of the Ohio river. The accomplishment is particularly notable because it was carried out thru cooperative action with municipalities and industries and without the necessity of invoking police power."

Oakland Some Forty Years Ago.

By J. W. KIMMELL.

How wondrous are the changes, Ben,
Since you and I were boys,
When your dad ran a blacksmith shop
And Cheap John sold his toys;
When father wore his cow-hide boots
And trousers, made of tow,
For people did no smearing on,
Some forty years ago.

There was no William-James Hotel
Nor Rotary Club to meet;
Sidewalks were made of twisted plank
That creaked beneath our feet;
The town was lit with coal oil lamps
That gave a glimmering glow—
There were no gas or electric lights
Some forty years ago.

The Glades Hotel along the Yough,
Then in her palmy days;
The B. & O. just opposite,
Have both been torn away;
Though the stream is flowing just the same—
Along its banks the willows grow,
But think how much the old town changed
Since forty years ago.

Then Wm. Totten kept a cheap cash store,
And Wiseman sold the booze,
And old Mr. Bell had a saddler shop
And Kepner mended shoes;
Hessen owned a livery barn
Down near the B. & O.,
With Maroney and Martin on the hill,
Some forty years ago.

Dan Chisholm sold all kinds of drugs
To cure all sorts of ills;
He had Foutz's horse and cattle powders
And Jaynes' patent pills—
The old folks all had rheumatiz
And corns on every toe;
There were no India rubber heels
Some forty years ago.

Then people went to meeting, Ben,
With oxen hitched to sleighs,
And wagons rode as easy then
As flivvers do nowadays.
But what on earth are we coming to?
Oxen now would be too slow,
For people lived not half so fast
Some forty years ago.

Yes, well do I remember, Ben,
Doc Henry's first mobile;
He eased her down the Court House hill
By sliding every wheel.
And how the neighbors shouted, Ben,
When he got the thing to go
"'Tis sure to swerve and kill us all,"
Some forty years ago.

...CONTINENTAL ROAD

President Coolidge Favors the Route That Includes Washington and Garrett County

Perhaps in a decade or two, Americans will motor down into South America as they do today from coast to coast and perhaps they will choose to motor over that most beautiful and historic road known all over the country as the National Highway, the beauty spots along the road being numbered by the thousands. but in its stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific no section contains more picturesque and unfolding surprises and pleasant charming and inspiring sights than are to be witnessed from Frostburg west through Garrett county to the Pennsylvania line near Addison.

Perhaps in 1938 we shall see automobiles with license plates from Argentina, Chile, or Brazil passing over the roadway through Grantsville and Keyser's Ridge just as we notice today from many of the 48 states in the Union, and it can be said without successful contradiction that almost every day winter and summer one may see such cars from many of the far western and southern states being operated over this highway.

By the year 1938 the greatest highway system in the world will have been completed, if the dreams and the plans ot Pan-American enthusiasts come true. This would be the Pan-American Highway, stretching from the Canadian border down through the United States, Central America, into every one of the South American countries and as far as the southernmost tip of that continent.

The route would cover a total distance of almost 10,000 miles along the west coast of South America, excluding its various branches extending into the countries to the east.

Official recognition of this dream has already been made in several ways. President Coolidge heartily approves the idea, and adds that such an international highway would be highly effective in bringing the entire western world into more harmonious relationship.

Bill Up For Road

Representative McLeod of Detroit has introduced a bill in Congress calling for the creation of a "Pan-American Peoples Great Highway Commission," with an original fund of $200,000 for arrangement of such an enterprise.

The same subject was discussed at the recent convention of the American Road Builders Association in Cleveland. In fact, Antonio Madrazo, the head of the Mexican delegation, reported that the first link in the great highway system, so far as his country was concerned, would be ready by 1929. This would reach from Laredo, Tex., to Mexico City and farther on to Guatemala.

The Pan-American Union is highly interested in the project and has taken it up at several of its conferences. As a result, it organized the Pan-American Federation for Highway Education, which is pushing the plan still further.

According to present plans, the Pan-American Highway would extend from the Canadian border to Laredo, Tex., and thence through the Central American states to Panama. From Panama, the road would follow the Pacific coast to South America as far as Puerto Montt, Chile. Then it would cut across to the border of Argentina, down to Puerto Deseado on the Atlantic coast and farther on almost to the very tip of the continent.

Must Gap 2175 Miles

From Laredo to Puerto Montt, the Bureau of Public Roads estimates, is a total of 7,967 miles. Gaps in this extension, totaling 2175 miles, have to be completed with new roads in order to make this a continuous highway.

A road from Valparaiso, Chile, would run eastward to Buenos Aires and then to Rio Janeiro. Another branch would extend from Colombia along the northern edge of South America through Venezuela and the Guianas, while another might be planned to cut off from Chile at the northern edge into Bolivia.

Thus every country in Central and South America would be fed by this system.

Coolidge for Cumberland

In North America there are various good routes from Canada to Laredo, the point which is conceded to be the best "jumping off place" into Latin-America. One would run from Montreal to Detroit, down to Indianapolis, through St. Louis, Little Rock, Fort Worth and San Antonio to Laredo.

Another route, suggested by President Coolidge would extend from the northernmost point of eastern United States, at Fort Kent, Maine, to Boston, New York, Washington nnd on w... ...h Cumberland and n... ...county to Wheeling, Columbus and Indianapolis and down the same route to Laredo.

Or, a route might go from Ottawa down to New York and then along the National Highway to the Mexican border.

MISS ARABELLA MARTIN.

The many friends of the late Miss Arabella Martin were grieved to learn of her death, which occurred at her home on Oak street Sunday, February 19. She was the daugter of the late Thomas and Ellen G. Martin and was born and reared in Oakland. Miss Martin had been in ill health for some time past, although not confined to her bed until two weeks preceding her death. She bore her sufferings with true Christian fortitude and met all who called with a smile and kind word. She united with the Presbyterian church at the age of 16 years and was a consistent member of that faith until ill health prevented her from taking an active part in the services. She was a kind and loving sister and a true friend, always cheerful and willing to do her part and will be missed greatly by a large circle of friends. Miss Martin is survived by two sisters, Mrs. John R. Kennedy, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and Miss Dora Martin, at her home here; also by three nieces. Her funeral took place from the Presbyterian church on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the services being conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. B. Brock, assisted by Rev. Paul Linaweaver, of St. Matthew's Episcopal church. The funeral was attended by a large circle of friends. The following were the pallbearers: Ronald McIntire, Walter Hardesty, Elwood Hinebaugh, Julius Walter, Albert Walter and Charles Welling. The flowers sent by friends were numerous and very beautiful, showing the high esteem in which she was held. The flower bearers were Alva Gortner, Joe Hinebaugh, Harry Hinebaugh and Philip Walter.

Little Help for Pike Expected From Maryland

In Clarksburg Saturday to confer with Dandridge Spotswood, industrial engineer of the Clarksburg Chamber of Commerce relative to West Virginia's effort to persuade Maryland highway officials to speed completion of their part of the Northwestern Turnpike, A. A. Pickering, of Rowlesburg, president of the Northwestern Turnpike Association, incorporated, declared that so far as he had been able to learn, Maryland highway commissioners appeared to be reluctant to give the project any immediate assistance for the reason that Baltimore interests looked upon the pike with disfavor.

Garthright "Skip" May, former Oakland High School student, who has been employed in the Amcelle plant, Cumberland, received quite a write-up in the papers of that city on account of the part he took in a recent basketball game. "Skip" plays with the Celanese. Here is the write-up: "Up in Barton four years ago when Ernie Schramm and his Braves were king-pins of high school quints, Joe May, a heavy-topped youngster, aided and abetted by four others playing with Oakland High School, slew the then Slocum-coached array for a red letter upset. Down at the State Armory yesterday afternoon this same May, garbed in the ermine of the Celanese A. A., carried on in the final quarter to enable the Silkmen to score a banner triumph over the Enoch Rauhs, of Pittsburgh, 27-22." And that wasn't all. ... time and energy to about
...ghteen boys of Oakland, is going to have a real boys' band before another six months is past, and through comparatively little active interest on the part of the citizens of town, organizations and parents of some of the boys who are members of the organization.

Following The Republican reproduces a portion of the article in question: "Training boys to become not only good musicians, but at the same time good men, has been the double objective in the making of the crack Rotary Club Boys' Band of Kansas City, an organization that commands instant attention and admiration wherever it performs. That appealing to the finer instincts of boys, in this case through music and strict discipline, is an assured way of bringing the best results, constitutes both the theory and the practice which have brought the band to a high degree of perfection and attainment.

"To take boys without previous musical training, boys often rough in appearance, careless in their habits of dress and behavior and to transform them into youths with the skill of experts in the handling of band instruments, youths thoughtful, courteous, erect and manly in bearing and appreciative of the best in music and in themselves, has been the task of Alois Winkler, founder and director of the Rotary Club Boys' Band.

"The story of this organization runs back through a period of nearly five years. Mr. Winkler, out of his previous extended experience with band music in organization and leadership of both men's and boys' bands, had a desire to devote his continuous effort to the building and maintenance of a first-class group of boy musicians.

"Mr. Winkler surveyed the local field. How was it possible, without considerable aid and dependable support, to organize, equip and to engage in the years of necessary training of such a band as he had pictured in his thought? Observing the interest and work of the Rotary Club in behalf of boys, he found his answer. When the proposition was taken up with the club an instant response was had. The club saw the undertaking, as did Mr. Winkler, the chance not only for promotion of a musical organization that would reflect credit upon the city but a profitable investment in the development of character and young manhood. The club agreed to finance the band, to furnish uniforms for the boys, headquarters, and to pay for the training.

"The boys themselves were to furnish the instruments, if they could find a way to do it. If not, assistance was to be given. But the great majority of the boy band members, through work in vacation, odd jobs about their homes and other ways provided their instruments. This arrangement has been continued.

"It has been my experience," said Mr. Winkler, "that it is not best to give a boy everything for nothing. Let him do something for himself. Let him hustle. He will be all the better for it.

"Many boys responded to the idea and the band consists of 80 pieces. The band never plays jazz. For their purposes with the organization the boy members do not know the meaning of jazz. Only classical music is used, which bears out another fundamental for which Mr. Winkler has contended. Music not only brings out the best in boys, but boys can learn to use and appreciate the best in music."

Paul McIntire, in response to a telephone call from his wife on Monday, was carrying an electric sweeper home at noontime because Mrs. Mac had said she wanted to do a little cleaning.

Another neighbor had her electric iron "heating" in preparation for a little session with the ironing board, only it failed to heat.

But one could listen to the radio in the dark, and as the thought struck a number of people, they inserted the plug in their electrically controlled machine. The last of which proves that it was profitable for a great number of people who had not the extra wherewithal to buy an electric radio earlier in the year. Those who had the kind with battery connections, and no transformers to burn out, enjoyed one of the best programs in many a day. The whistling wind was in resonance with the tunes of the pipe organ and the snow clinging to the aerial wires only served to make the tones sweeter and the voices more mellow.

The music sounded like the noise emanating from the back seat of Stanton's Taxi when the Oakland collegians take their trips away from home—three different singers and three different——shall Scoop say "tunes"?

The Republican used the old foot pedal on the job presses, the Oakland Model Bakery employes used the hand method of mixing, James Fazzalari was at a standstill, the milkshakers refused to shake, the washers to wash and the barbers even had to resurrect their hand clippers. In fact there wasn't much going on, and everything seemed to be just forty years behind the time as a poem in another part of the paper explains. All of which reminds us of the old saying, "Them was the Days."

This Week's Pate
"SCOOP" IN PERSON

This photograph of Scoop was taken as he lounged be ore his typewriter in the office of The Republican yesterday. Col. Jeems Mutt Bell had to make several attempts before he was able to catch Scoop in the proper position showing how the subjects works, especially about fifteen minutes before the dead hour on press day when everybody else in the office is devoting a hundred and ten per cent of energy in their various capacities to make the mail for Swallow Falls and intervening points with the latest edition of Garrett County's leading publication.

At the first attempt Col. Bell used too much flashlight powder, which practically demolished both the camera and the photographer, but after gathering up his wig and wiring to New York for an exceptional machine, the act was accomplished.

It required much coaching on the part of Col. Bell to have Scoop look nonchalant and still reserved. As this is the first (and last, we hope) photograph ever to be taken of Scoop it was though best to make it as presentable as possible. Needless to say the plate was touched up considerably after the flashlight had done its work.

WASHINGTON'S BELIEF IN DIVINE PROVIDENCE

"I shall rely confidently on that Providence which has heretofore preserved and been bountiful to me, not doubting that I shall return safe to you in the fall." So he wrote to Martha Washington as he journeyed to Cambridge to take command of the Continental armies.

When we read carefully the story of those magnificent and tragic times, it must be hard even for a skeptic to be blind to the many evidences that an unseen Power was directing the course of events and shaping the destiny of a nation.

For one thing, it seems simply incredible that the American forces could ever have proved victorious over the trained and disciplined European troops sent against them. It has been estimated that a regiment of the raw Colonial militia was scarcely a match in open battle for a single company of British regulars. It wasn't a question of relative courage; it was simply a question of knowing the game of war. The British had an army; Washington had a crowd—that was the difference.

Desperately Washington labored to discipline his crowd into an efficient fighting machine. Just when he was on the verge of success, their short enlistment terms expired! He had to start all over again with another crowd. And not a very big crowd either! What we might call the "labor-turnover" in the American forces was simply appalling.

In war there is something even more important than discipline, and that is morale. The Continental troops received their pay in Continental money, which "wasn't worth a continental." That did not improve the spirit of the men very much! They were asked to fight without bayonets, to march without food, to spend the winter at Valley Forge without shoes and almost without clothes. That did not help the morale of the patriotic army very much either.

That Washington, with such a half-hearted, half-trained, half-equipped crowd of volunteers finally succeeded in conquering the efficient military machine of England is one of the miracles of history.

It is all the more miraculous when we remember that the Colonies were not unanimous in that struggle. Approximately one-third of the American people were tories whose sympathies were with England and who never renounced their allegiance to the British sovereign.

It would take much too long even to enumerate the tremendous disadvantages which weighed against the American side, and seemed to foredoom the cause of liberty to defeat. But all through those long, dreary years, again and again some Unseen Hand seems to reach down at critical moments when disaster seems to be inevitable.

It is strange what little things may sometimes change the course of history. Lord Germaine, the British war minister in London, drafted two important military orders. One was to General Burgoyne in Canada to proceed south, along Lake Champlain, toward Albany; the other to General Howe to proceed northward from New York along the Hudson River and meet Burgoyne at Albany. The object was to drive a wedge between the northern and southern colonies. Had the plan been carried out, it would certainly have meant ultimate defeat of the American cause. Lord Germaine signed and dispatched the order to Burgoyne; hut just at that moment he was called from his desk. When he returned, he forgot to sign the other order. It lay in a pigeon hole for three fatal weeks. Then it was too late.

Burgoyne had immediately moved south, to Fort Ticonderoga, expecting Howe to cooperate with him from New York. Burgoyne was surrounded by superior American forces and his retreat cut off. Day by day he anxiously waited for Howe to move to his assistance. The days grew into weeks while his own supplies dwindled and the American forces surrounding him grew stronger and more menacing. Finally he was forced to surrender and America was saved—all because of a little slip of memory on the part of a man in London.

Thus the hand of Providence seemed to be shaping the destiny of America. The very stars in their courses were fighting with Washington.

At lenst that was his firm belief. And one thing he only believed, but knew, that a Power greater than himself supported him and gave him the strength to enrry on when every ounce of his own vitality had been exhausted, when every ray of hope had been darkened.

You remember that beautiful picture of Washington, alone in the ... near Valley Forge, kneeling In t... at picture gives us a c... ret of Washington's ...ievement. "He en- ...im who is invisible."

To understand these workers one must know the significance of America for the down-trodden Europeans of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. To an Old World overcrowded to the point of wretchedness, pressing down the workers to worse than slavery, America was the one hope on the horizon. Almost every one of any initiative and with scant store of this world's goods wanted to emigrate and no price was too great to pay.

Of course, all were at liberty to sail over by payment of the small cost of passage. But few needing to come had the little money, and for them there was an ironic recourse: the purchase of freedom through its temporary sacrifice.

Thus countless numbers of our sturdiest pioneers came to the land of democracy almost as slaves. For years sustained only by hope of the future they worked fettered and unpaid. At the end of the servitude they were given fifty acres of land, three suits of wearing apparel, corn for a year, implements.

Without the ... servants America must ha... a wilderness. To the early pro... tors as well as to the workers themselves white servitude was the only avoidance of an impasse. There were necessary for the development of those vast lands whole armies of servants, ones who were cheap and who would stay put. To have a servant for five years merely by the payment of his passage was certainly cheap enough. The conditions of servitude and the system of catching fugitives saw to it generally that the servants stayed put. It was indeed an arrangement to make the modern housewife envious.

After most of the land was settled the servants were bought mainly at the boats as in the above advertisement. But in the beginning it was different—the servants were brought over by the settlers themselves when they first came. Did the settlers bring English servants because they were in a position to travel de luxe with a whole entourage? Not at all—their reason was quite different. It was that the bringing of servants to America was the condition of their obtaining any lands and that the more servants they brought the more land they could obtain.

If one goes back to the beginning of Maryland history one is amazed to learn that Lord Baltimore gave away his lands for nothing to those who brought servants. What is the explanation of such philanthropy? It is that Lord Baltimore's problem was also a servant problem, that Maryland's history begins with a servant problem. This is a literal fact. Maryland as the holding of Lord Baltimore was worth nothing, either to him or anyone else without a horde of servants to work it into cultivation. Only in this way could sources of revenue be created.

Thus, many of the people who first settled in Maryland paid Lord Baltimore only in a currency represented by servants. After receiving their lands they paid him quit-rents out of the economic values which the labor of the servants created. Lord Baltimore received money eventually, but only because servants had made lands income-bearing. If he gave away 2,000-acre manorial tracts for every twenty servants it was because he had a genius of economic foresight.

century. It arose
ut of the circum-

then ... ambitiously ... by taking on more se... they obtained from "contrac... class of people like the master of the ship Sophia who made their business the transporting of servants from abroad.

Since servants were so much desired it was a happy coincidence that so many were eager to come. But in such a state of things it was inevitable that a great many were made servants against their will. All over Europe the most helpless of the lower class were kidnaped by rogues of contractors. Many a fellow who allowed himself to become drunk in the evening woke up in the morning to find himself on ship and en route for another continent. Also there were the "redemptioners," people who had come over of their own free will and had promised to pay back their passage in a certain period of time; if, as was too often the case, they were disappointed in their hopes of quick money, they were sold by the ship owners to pay for their passage.

Still other classes of the "shanghaied" were the rounded-up vagrants and unprovided-for or orphaned children. Finally there were the convicts, the one class of servants the Colonists did not want but whom His Majesty insisted on their accepting.

With all these classes of servants, a veritable army, we can see now, our forefathers were able to subdue a wilderness. One may be sure that under such a system servants took their orders immediately and did not talk back. The system of white servitude apparenttly was just the system for the times. It enabled our ancestors to effect a physical and social organization of their lives amid difficulties which were all but insuperable.

But even if white servitude helped the country was it not rather hard on the servants themselves? Strange to say, it does not seem to have been. The white servants not only refrained from many Bolshevistic activities but they did not evince any notable discontent. There were many runaway servants, to be sure, but more often than not they ran away out of their own perversity. It may be mentioned incidentally that the death penalty for fugitives was practically never applied; the punishment was taken out in imposition of additional time of service.

A certain minimum of good treatment was assured the servant by law. The papers of indenture signed before embarking committed the master to duties also, and if he did not give decent maintenance or treatment he was legally liable. Aside from the law itself there seems to have existed in most of the masters a certain spontaneous kindliness. On one occasion a woman servant of Maryland was ransomed by popular subscription because she had an obnoxious master and aroused sympathy.

It may, after all, seem strange that men could have so easily stomached serfdom. But one cannot read back into the workers of those times the proud passion for liberty of today. This clearly can be seen in the writings of George Alsop, a Maryland redemptioner, who left a literary document of the peculiar mentality of his class. In one place, after giving various instances of necessary relations of inferiority, he piously says: "And since it is ordained from the original and superabounding wisdom of all things that there should be degrees and diversities among the sons of men in acknowledgingof a superiority from inferiors to superiors; the servant with a reverent and befitting obedience is as liable to this duty in a measurable performance to him whom he serves, as the loyalist of subjects to his prince."

It is an interesting commentary on the late growth of democratic sentiment that not even the American revolution saw the end of this institution. So deeply rooted was it in the economic custom of the country that it did not die until about 1815. And then it was not so much hostile sentiment that killed it as the simple fact that it had outlived its usefulness.

By 1815 the country had been placed upon a firm economic basis; hordes of black slaves had been brought in and European conditions were no longer so bad as to cause wholesale immigration.

As for the white servants themselves their venturesome voyage to a new continent had in most cases resulted well for themselves and their posterity. Starting with the little nucleus of fifty acres, corn, etc., they had worked their way up into the middle classes as self-made men in the most eminent sense. Some of them become nationally famous and two of them, George Taylor and Matthew Thornton, signed the Declaration of Independence.

If the truth be told there is many a fine snob of today whose ancestors did not come over on eit... the May flower or the Ark and ..., but the contractors' ships ... ng ... servants to be sold ... on

We Must Work Together

EVERY thoughtful citizen of this community is interested in its development and progress. There's no question about that! We all want our children to enjoy better homes, better schools, better parks — more agreeable surroundings and greater comforts.

We all want our town to keep step with its neighbors, to take the lead in civic affairs. So there is only one sound plan for us to follow:

We must work together to increase the wealth of this community by doing everything we can to encourage local business.

When you and your family patronize our advertisers — the stores and banks of our town — and keep your money in circulation right here at home, there is no power on earth that can prevent our progress.

Many Attended Local Court.

Two civil cases were tried before Justice Keller on Tuesday which required the entire day and attracted many people to the village.

The first case was of long standing, having been before the justices on several previous occasions during the past three years. It was that of G. Broadwater vs. William Speicher, of Accident, and dates back to the time the Speicher Lumber Company was operating a saw mill near Jennings. The controversy concerns oats alleged to have been purchased by Mr. Speicher from Mr. Broadwater. A judgment was given Mr. Broadwater and Mr. Speicher immediately appealed the case. Renninger & Offutt represented Mr. Broadwater and Mr. E. R. Jones was attorney for Mr. Speicher.

The second case was that of Russell Holliday vs. Peter H. Yost. Mr. Holliday alleges that a valuable draft horse was cut in wire which was negligently left lying upon the ground by the defendant when repairing his telephone line last summer. He was awarded $135 damages, but Mr. Yost took an appeal from the decision of the justice. Holliday was represented by Renninger & Offutt and Yost by Mr. E. R. Jones.

LESSON TEXT—Mark 5...
GOLDEN TEXT—Thy faith has made thee whole.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Great Hero.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Heroism of Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Giver and Preserver of Life.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Works of Faith.

The accounts of the raising of the damsel and the healing of the woman are so interwoven as almost to constitute one narrative. But since the persons are diverse and places separate, they should be treated separately.

I. Jairus' Daughter Raised from the Dead (vv. 22-24 and 35-42).

1. Jairus' urgent mission (vv. 22,23).

His only daughter (Luke 8:42), perhaps his only child, lay dying. In this time of utter helplessness he came to Jesus for he had faith in His ability to raise her up. In the providence of God, sorrow, sickness and death are often used to bring needy men and women into contact with Jesus. He showed the proper attitude toward Jesus, "He fell at His feet" (v. 22).

2. Jesus goes with Jairus (v. 21).

Jairus believed that if Jesus would lay His hand upon his daughter she would live. Such faith always gets a response from Jesus.

3. News of his daughter's death (v. 35).

The messenger who brought the news of her death suggested that Jesus should be excused from going further, as it was now too late.

4. Jairus' faith strengthened (v. 36).

As soon as Jesus heard the words spoken concerning the death of this girl, he said to the father, "Be not afraid, only believe."

5. The mourners rebuked (vv. 37-39).

He now dismissed the crowd and allowed only three of His disciples and the parents of the damsel to enter this chamber of death with Him.

6. Jairus' faith rewarded (vv. 41-43).

He took the damsel by the hand and issued the command for her to arise. The expression "Talitha cumi" in the Aramaic seems to be freely expressed, "Wake up, little girl." She straightway arose and walked and partook of food.

II. The Woman With an Issue of Blood Healed (vv. 25-34).

1. Her helpless condition (vv. 25, 26, cf. Luke 8:43).

She had been a great sufferer for twelve long years.

2. Her faith (vv. 27, 28).

She possessed a real and earnest faith. For a poor emaciate... after twelve years of sufferi... her way through a thro... tude shows that she po... termined purpose. The ... tuality and quality ... the activity whi... rides the ... life. Her faith ... so strong that she believed contact with the Master's garments would secure the needed help. Though her faith was strong, it was imperfect. She only knew Him as a wonder worker, but through this experience she came to know Him as a compassionate Savior.

3. Her healing (vv. 29-32).

As soon as she touched the hem of His garment she experienced in her body His healing power. Jesus Himself was conscious of the outgoing of virtue, therefore inquired, "Who touched me" to which the disciples replied with amazement, "Thou seest the multitude thronging thee and sayest thou, 'Who touched me?'"

4. Her confession (v. 33; cf. Luke 8:47).

She thought secretly to get the blessing of healing, but Jesus perceived that virtue had gone out from Him and had her make a public confession.

5. Jesus' words of encouragement (v. 34).

With the communication of His healing virtue, He spoke most gracious and comforting words to this poor woman, telling her that it was her faith, not her touch that had saved her. Faith does not need to face dangers and to exhaust itself in active endeavor in order to gain Christ's blessing. All that is required is trusting prayer. Not only did ... gain the blessing, but had the distinction of being the only woman ... ord as having been addressed ... Jesus as "daughter," which she ... spirit of tenderness to ... come to Him with their ...

MT. LAKE PARK.

We are having another real ... of winter, causing us to increase ... heating in our homes.

Mr. R. C. Tassie created quite a exciting time Tuesday morning as ... went on a swift trot with his blac... span of horses, taking one of the... smaller houses from near the Office... on skids and carrying it to near the... lake to be used in his new chicken... ranch.

I am glad to know that there are plans for a more extensive advertisement of the western part of Maryland and especially for Garrett county. I am glad to give any information I can to further this interest at there are so many real advantages in our county and especially for summer residents.

One man who had visited all the popular resorts was greatly pleased to spend a while here where he said the balmy air was so different from other places. Others have said that our summer advantages here are superior to Florida as a winter resort.

The splendid cool soft water springs are many and the splendid building sites in so many parts of the county where they can get the very best crisp vegetables from their quick growth. Advantages are also offered to those who wish to cultivate the soil for any purpose, especially the farmer, who can produce one of the best and most profitable fertilizers right on his own ground by using the limestone found in abundance in different parts of the county.

A quarry and kiln was operated for years between Frankville and Bond until the B. and O. thought it necessary to dispense with that side track for the safety of the east bound trains. Another has been operated just south of Crellin, and others could be opened along Sang Run where there is quite a cavern and northward to either side of Gap Run. From this last mentioned place the farmers about Accident have made their farms very productive.

There is also a lime kiln near Bear creek, just south of the State road on the Friendsville route, which has been in use for some time.

STATE COMMANDER VISITS THE LOCAL LEGIONAIRRES

Met Former Chaplain on Street —New Members Accepted

Hon. Wallace Williams, State Commander Maryland American Legion, paid Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, an official visit on Tuesday evening, upon which occasion a special meeting of the post was held in the City Hall on Third street.

The State Commander came to Oakland Tuesday afternoon from Baltimore, where he has his headquarters, and the visit paid the local post was his initial official call on the several posts in Western Maryland. He left Oakland yesterday morning to be in Cumberland last night and at Hagerstown this evening.

Commander Williams, in his address to the members of the local post, paid them a high tribute for the excellent work done during the past three years, and assured them that their departmental headquarters was an active body in the National organization, which was endeavoring to keep alive in the minds of American citizens their responsibility to preserve the traditions of this nation and to instill in them the "peace time" patriotism which he said he felt was essential for the continuance of the high type of government of the United States.

New Members Accepted.

A large number of Legionairres was present to greet the Commander at the meeting, and it is said that a number of former service men, not already enrolled as members of the post signified their intentions of becoming members and were accepted as such by the membership committee. Refreshments were served by James Fazzalari.

Meets Former Chaplain on Street.

While in Oakland on Tuesday, Commander Williams met Father William J. McVeigh, who during the World War was a Chaplain with the American forces, serving in the Fifth Division in which division Commander Williams also served as captain in a machine gun company. The meeting was by chance and both gentlemen expressed their pleasure at having met and renewed their acquaintance.

To Observe Maryland Day.

Past Post Commander Delbert Davis was directed to prepare a suitable program for the proper observance of Maryland Day, March 25, and according to Mr. Davis a program will be presented at the Maryland Theatre on the afternoon of that day at which time there will be a speaker of note present and a number of musical numbers will be given.

POULTRY SPECIAL TRAIN WILL ARRIVE MARCH 10

To Visit Ten Counties And Make Eleven Stops Between March 5 and March 10 Next.

A special poultry train to be operated over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in Maryland from March 5 to March 10, will arrive in Oakland on the latter date, March 10, at 8:30 o'clock a. m., according to information received at the office of County Agent McGlone. The train is scheduled to remain in the local railroad yards until noon or a little later of that day.

It will carry exhibits covering practically every phase of breeding, brooding, rearing and marketing poultry, and short lectures will be given at each stop by specialists from the Extension Service, University of Maryland, and the United States Department of Agriculture.

The object of the exhibit, which is the first of its kind to appear in Garrett county, is to afford poultry raisers and breeders an opportunity to compare their own methods of rearing and marketing with those recommended by the specialists.

The tour will embrace ten counties in Maryland and stops will be made at Singerly, Aberdeen, Cowenton, Sykesville, Ellicott City, Beltsville, Rockville, Frederick, Keedysville, Hancock and Oakland.

Special Feature for the Women.

J. L. McGlone, County Agent, began today to send out notices to poultrymen stating the time of the expected arrival of the train in Oakland.

Special provision has been made for women visitors at the train, and Miss Elsie Benthein, Home Demonstration Agent, will have charge of this part of the day's program. The exhibit and lectures will demonstrate the essential factors in reducing losses and making poultry production more successful and profitable.

The train will include an exhibit car containing live birds of the principal breeds grown in the State, a lecture car and a flat car, upon which a model laying house will be shown.

James Gray, about 45 years of age, who gave his address as Bayard, W. Va., was arrested on the charge of larceny, and was committed to the Oakland jail. He will be given hearing on Saturday before Justice of the Peace, W. A. Gonder. The articles of clothing, amounting to about $70, it was estimated, were all recovered.

Mother's Circle of Oakland Has Interesting Meeting.

The Mother's Circle of Oakland held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Delbert Davis last Thursday evening, February 16. Mrs. Edward O'Donnell gave a very interesting talk on distinguishing truth from imagination.

The object of the organization, according to its members, is to awaken in the minds of all women engaged in child training, a keener appreciation of the responsibilities and possibilities and to give every mother the benefit of specific topics suited to her individual problems and needs.

The papers read at each meeting by the members are written by well known publicists and authors who have made a study of child life from a sociological or psychological standpoint.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. R. R. Gilbert on March 15, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

PASTOR OF LOCAL M. E. CHURCH DIES AT FAIRMONT

Rev. Albert D. Craig Succumbs To Septic Poisoning in West Virginia Institution.

Death came to Rev. Albert D. Craig at Cook's Hospital, Fairmont, West Va., last night, of septic poisoning. He had been pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church in Oakland since last October, having been assigned to this charge at the last meeting of the West Virginia Conference. Prior to coming to Oakland, Rev. Craig was pastor of Diamond St. Methodist Episcopal church, Fairmont, for five years and for a like period served the Methodist church at Kingwood. He was aged 54 years.

The Rev. Craig was a native of Huntingdon, Pa., and his wife was formerly Miss Jessie Somerville, of Huntington, W. Va., the wife and one son, George Craig, of Fairmont, W. Va., survive.

The minister was taken ill at his home in Oakland several weeks ago and he was taken three weeks ago to the Fairmont hospital where his ailment was determined after exhaustive examinations as septic poison.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at Fairmont and the body taken to Point Pleasant, W. Va., for interment. A delegation from St. Paul's church and also representatives from St. Mark's Lutheran church will attend the services at Fairmont.

Rev. Craig's work as a pastor in Oakland, although of short duration, will be long remembered. He was loved by not only the people of his own particular faith but by all with whom he came in contact. He was a devoted churchman and one of the strongest preachers in the entire conference. His passing is greatly regretted by hundreds of people.

TRANSFORMER BURNS AND OAKLAND IN DARKNESS

Fire Sunday at Sub-Station Cuts Off Lights and Power

Fire, originating in the transformers of the Oakland sub-station of the West Maryland Power Company, located alongside the Military road just south of town, plunged Oakland, Mt. Lake Park, Deer Park and all other communities using the product of the company, into darkness Sunday night about 9:30 o'clock, and service was not resumed until Monday eveing at 8:15 o'clock.

New transformers to take the place of those destroyed, had to be transported to Oakland from Morgantown, and the icy condition of the road caused a long delay in their arrival here. In less than three hours after they had arrived, however, Oakland again had electricity. The power was again cut off on Tuesday afternoon and remained off until about 5:30 in the evening in order that proper adjustments could be made.

Lack of power with which to operate machinery created a hardship in many places, none moreso, however, than in The Republican office where the eight motors used to operate the various machines stood idle. This condition has to be met in every community and things are now running along smoothly.

In additon to destroying the transformers the fire also burned the two supporting poles, causing them to fall to the ground. The damage sustained by the power company can... yet be estimated but it will probably be several thousand dollars.

In celebration of the sixty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the Knights of Pythias order, the local lodge will hold a public meeting, to which all are invited, the members, friends, wives, sweethearts, sisters, brothers and relatives being included in the list. A special program has been arranged, the Oakland Orchestra engaged to furnish music and there will be an abundance of refreshments, Reese Friend, chairman of the program committee, has announced.

E. Ray Jones, local attorney, will be the principal speaker, and there will be several other short addresses, it was stated. The topics to be dwelt upon are the history, achievements and objectives of the Knights of Pythias as an organization.

According to a letter sent out by the national headquarters "the order is purely American. It was the first fraternal society to be chartered by Congress and its jurisdiction is confined to the North American continent. The order has 200,000 members and approximately 60,000 lodges in the United States and Canada. It has four auxiliaries. The Pythian Sisters, the women's branch, has over 300,000 members; the Knights of Khorassan about 100,000 members, and the Uniform Rank, the military branch, has about 100,000 men in uniform, most of whom would be ready for service to the country in time of war. ### Mutual Understanding Dairymen and Washington Concern to be Reached

Following the assurance given by Henry P. Brawner, president of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, Washington, D. C., that his concern would locate a milk receiving station here, a meeting of farmers, dairymen and business men will be held at the Maryland Theatre at 1:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon for the purpose of having a mutual understanding between the milk producers of the county and the Washington concern.

County Agent J. L. McGlone will be chairman of the meeting and will talk on the possibilities of increasing the dairy business in this section of the county. Mr. McGlone and members of the dairy committee have been assured that Mr. John P. Dugan, General Baggage and Milk Agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad will be present, and while it is not definitely known at this time whether W. V. ## THE REPUBLICAN BEGINS ITS FIFTY-SECOND YEAR

Today's Issue Marks Start On Another Milestone.

With today's issue The Republican begins the fifty-second year of its existence, having been founded on Saturday, February 28, 1877 and its first issue appearing the following Saturday, March 3. Capt. James A. Hayden, of Mountain Lake Park, was the founder and editor until July 4, 1890. Capt. Hayden is still living at the Park and has a keen interest in every subject of the present day.

Volume 52, Number 1, resembles the first publication in masthead, but little else is similar. Profes... cards and patent medicine ... ments, then the chief so... nue for the average co... per, were printed on ... the "inside" pages ... then known as patent ... material were printe... Ohio, and contained li... of a local nature, and ... the "home-printed" pages local news was woefully lacking. At that time, however, it can be safely said that the paper had all that there was, and the first attempt in the publication of The Republican was a credit to the editor who had purchased the plant from C. T. Abell, of Baltimore, who had come to Oakland a few years before and established the Garrett County Gazette.

During the fifty-one years of its existence The Republican has had but two owners, Capt. Hayden, the founder, and the present published.

The Republican carries the most news of the county, has a very satisfactory and steadily growing circulation among the people of the county and has the most completely equipped printing plant in Western Maryland where it is the pleasure of those operating it to give service to a rapidly growing list of patrons.

Forty-eight years from now, when the century mark will have been reached, The Republican will still be Garrett county's best and most valued newspaper, but it will be a daily with morning and evening editions.

[illegible] hood and girlhood [illegible] the regular medical supervision [illegible] child from birth throughout the period of getting-ready-for-school.

"If a child is to get the utmost out of his school life," Dr. Riley said, "he or she should start in to school unhampered by physical conditions that need correction and protected as far as possible against diseases that are everywhere prevalent. The best time to discover conditions that should be corrected is during the period from babyhood to school age.

"The object of the summer-round-up of the children of preschool age, and as a matter of fact, of all the year-round conferences for the children of that age, is the detection of such conditions. If this plan is carried out to its fullest possibilities, children entering school for the first time should have been vaccinated against smallpox, should have received [illegible] admissio[illegible] of such e[illegible] conferenee[illegible] throughout [illegible] ties under [illegible] direction of the State Bureau of Child Hygiene. And we look forward to the time when it will be as much a matter of course for a child to be gotten ready—physically—for school, as it is for his parents to supply with the necessary clothing.

"Some notion of the conditions that are discovered after a child enters school, and that could have been detected just as readily before his enrollment, can be gathered from the report of one of the deputy State health officers of his examination of school children in one of the counties. In each one hundred children examined, he found 47 with one or more conditions needing attention. Six had defective vision; 13 diseased tonsils; 26 decayed teeth; 17 were undernourished; 1 had defective hearing; 1 nasal obstruction causing mouth breathing; 2 were threatened with heart disease; 2 were suffereing from contagious diseases and some had chest or lung conditions marking the beginning of tuberculosis.

"Early detection of such conditions or of incipient disease, such as tuberculosis or heart disease, make possibility of their control al greater. That is the encouraging of this rather gloomy picture. It was my good fortune to visit one of the schools just one year after the first medical inspection had been made and the need for corrective treatment had been pointed out to the parents. The physical improvement and consequent corresponding mental alertness of the children who had had the necessary care was truly remarkable. Some of the children who had been classed as backward by pupils and teachers were forging to the front.

"Nearly 30,000 children in the public schools throughout the counties had physical supervision of this sort last year. And year by year the number increases. What that means in the way of health building for the men and women of the future of Maryland is beyond calculation."

THERE MUST BE INCREASE.

Every dairyman, farmer and business man interested in Garrett county as a dairying county, should attend the meeting Saturday afternoon in the Maryland Theatre, Oakland. At that time the Chestnut Farms Dairy manager or a reprsentative, will be there to point out the things that must be done by the farmers of the county so that there will be a sufficient amount of milk in sight when the milk shipping station is completed and ready for business.

It is not a case of transferring milk from one milk station to another, for that would not benefit the county one bit and would be manifestly unfair to the Oakland Creamery Company, which has been buying the milk of producers for several years.

It is obvious that the milk for the new dairy must come from an increased source of supply and it is for this reason that the meeting will be held Saturday. Ways and means of improving herds, barns and equipment will be explained and it is now up to the farmers to make these improvements.

Improvements must come before there can be any increased amount of money coming in each month, and now since it is assured that there will be that extra amount, providing the farmers will improve their barns and herds, there should be no reason in the world for hesitating.

The same principle applies here as it does in advertising. One advertises when business is bad and consequently improves his business. He doesn't wait until business is good to advertise his wares. Likewise the farmer must make a few improvements before he receives any material gain. The material gain will not come before the improvements. Every farmer knows what would happen if he attempted to put the cart before the horse.

So, in summing up, there are two things to keep in mind—that improvements must be made, and that there must be an increased supply of milk. Both will make Garrett county better and incidentally be much more profitable to the farmers.

WHY COUNTRY BOYS WIN.

Despite the great increase in city population in recent decades, country boys, that is boys reared on farms or in small towns, still seem able to capture their share of the important places in the business and professional world. The two richest men in America, Ford and Rockefeller, were both country boys, and so likewise was the world's greatest inventor, Edison. The President of the United States is a country boy and numerous instances could be cited to show that outstanding leaders in business, politics and the professions in this country were recruited from the rural districts. This, in spite of the fact that within the past 50 years the rural population, or those people living on farms and in towns, has shrunken from about 75 per cent to less than 50 per cent of the total population.

There are probably many good reasons why the country boys take high places. Perhaps one reason is that the country boy usually arrives in a big city without friends or influence, with limited cash, but with a fine determination to make good and show the folks back home what he can do. City boys, on the other hand, often have relatives and friends through whose influence they get a "comfortable berth" to start off with, and they gradually settle down to the business routine of a big corporation, enjoy the numerous diversions of a big city where the demands on their spare time are so heavy that it takes a Spartan determination to study instead of play after working hours.

The country boy, determined to show his folks and friends that he can make good in the big town, "sa[ys] himself"; his superiors notice the diff[erence] between his attitude and th[at] of those who are satisfied with [a] well-paying job, and [by] steady advance[ment] [be]comes in[dis]pensable [to] the firm.

Waterways

...aryland is one of nine states that has recently entered into an agreement, through the respective departments of health, which makes provision for joint sanitary control over the waterways in these states. The other states participating in it are Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia, Kentucky, New York, Indiana, Illinois and Tennessee. The underlying purpose of the plan is the protection and conservation of adequate and safe water supplies for drinking and commercial uses. Through the agreement, cooperative action is obtained for the abatement of the pollution of waterways in any one of these states when such pollution may be harmful to adjacent or down stream states.

To insure coordinated policies and methods of control in the sanitary engineering problems involved, an advisory board composed of the chief engineers of the states entering into the agreement has been appointed by the departments of health concerned in it. Mr. Abel Wolman, chief of the State bureau of sanitary engineering, has been appointed the representative of the Maryland State department of health on the board of Engineers.

In announcing the appointment, Dr. John S. Fulton, director of the State department of health, said: "A glance at the map of the United States showing the congestion of population along the waterways is all that is necessary for the realization of the interdependence and interrelation of the states in matters of this sort. One of the problems which an increasing population imposes upon a state is the ever increasing difficulty of providing adequately for the disposal of sewage and of other sources of pollution. Every community and each growing industry add to the pollution of our streams. It is obvious that some control must be provided to relieve the condition sufficiently to make it possible for populations to continue to have the necessary water resources for their domestic and commercial needs.

"For this reason, this interstate stream conservation agreement has been entered into and the appointment of this interstate river board—the first of its kind in the United States, is of importance. It is the first effort in this country to establish some uniform program for the control of interstate bodies of water so as to provide adequate water resources for the future, for municipal drinking supplies, for industrial uses, for recreational purposes, for power requirements and for navigation.

"Already much has been accomplished in the reduction and elimination of pollution of the Ohio river. The accomplishment is particularly notable because it was carried out thru cooperative action with municipalities and industries and without the necessity of invoking police power."

Oakland Some Forty Years Ago.

By J. W. KIMMELL.

How wondrous are the changes, Ben,
Since you and I were boys,
When your dad ran a blacksmith shop
And Cheap John sold his toys;
When father wore his cow-hide boots
And trousers, made of tow,
For people did no smearing on,
Some forty years ago.

There was no William-James Hotel
Nor Rotary Club to meet;
Sidewalks were made of twisted plank
That creaked beneath our feet;
The town was lit with coal oil lamps
That gave a glimmering glow—
There were no gas or electric lights
Some forty years ago.

The Glades Hotel along the Yough,
Then in her palmy days;
The B. & O. just opposite,
Have both been torn away;
Though the stream is flowing just the same—
Along its banks the willows grow,
But think how much the old town changed
Since forty years ago.

Then Wm. Totten kept a cheap cash store,
And Wiseman sold the booze,
And old Mr. Bell had a saddler shop
And Kepner mended shoes;
Hessen owned a livery barn
Down near the B. & O.,
With Maroney and Martin on the hill,
Some forty years ago.

Dan Chisholm sold all kinds of drugs
To cure all sorts of ills;
He had Foutz's horse and cattle powders
And Jaynes' patent pills—
The old folks all had rheumatiz
And corns on every toe;
There were no India rubber heels
Some forty years ago.

Then people went to meeting, Ben,
With oxen hitched to sleighs,
And wagons rode as easy then
As flivvers do nowadays.
But what on earth are we coming to?
Oxen now would be too slow,
For people lived not half so fast
Some forty years ago.

Yes, well do I remember, Ben,
Doc Henry's first mobile;
He eased her down the Court House hill
By sliding every wheel.
And how the neighbors shouted, Ben,
When he got the thing to go
"It's sure to swerve and kill us all,"
Some forty years ago.

Route That Includes Washington and Garrett County

Perhaps in a decade or two, Americans will motor down into South America as they do today from coast to coast and perhaps they will choose to motor over that most beautiful and historic road known all over the country as the National Highway, the beauty spots along the road being numbered by the thousands, but in its stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific no section contains more picturesque and unfolding surprises and pleasant charming and inspiring sights than are to be witnessed from Frostburg west through Garrett county to the Pennsylvania line near Addison.

Perhaps in 1938 we shall see automobiles with license plates from Argentina, Chile, or Brazil passing over the roadway through Grantsville and Keyser's Ridge just as we notice today from many of the 48 states in the Union, and it can be said without successful contradiction that almost every day winter and summer one may see such cars from many of the far western and southern states being operated over this highway.

By the year 1938 the greatest highway system in the world will have been completed, if the dreams and the plans of Pan-American enthusiasts come true. This would be the Pan-American Highway, stretching from the Canadian border down through the United States, Central America, into every one of the South American countries and as far as the southernmost tip of that continent.

The route would cover a total distance of almost 10,000 miles along the west coast of South America, excluding its various branches extending into the countries to the east.

Official recognition of this dream has already been made in several ways. President Coolidge heartily approves the idea, and adds that such an international highway would be highly effective in bringing the entire western world into more harmonious relationship.

Bill Up For Road

Representative McLeod of Detroit has introduced a bill in Congress calling for the creation of a "Pan-American Peoples Great Highway Commission," with an original fund of $200,000 for arrangement of such an enterprise.

The same subject was discussed at the recent convention of the American Road Builders Association in Cleveland. In fact, Antonio Madrazo, the head of the Mexican delegation, reported that the first link in the great highway system, so far as his country was concerned, would be ready by 1929. This would reach from Laredo, Tex., to Mexico City and farther on to Guatemala.

The Pan-American Union is highly interested in the project and has taken it up at several of its conferences. As a result, it organized the Pan-American Federation for Highway Education, which is pushing the plan still further.

According to present plans, the Pan-American Highway would extend from the Canadian border to Laredo, Tex., and thence through the Central American states to Panama. From Panama, the road would follow the Pacific coast to South America as far as Puerto Montt, Chile. Then it would cut across to the border of Argentina, down to Puerto Deseado on the Atlantic coast and farther on almost to the very tip of the continent.

Must Gap 2175 Miles

From Laredo to Puerto Montt, the Bureau of Public Roads estimates, is a total of 7,967 miles. Gaps in this extension, totaling 2175 miles, have to be completed with new roads in order to make this a continuous highway.

A road from Valparaiso, Chile, would run eastward to Buenos Aires and then to Rio Janeiro. Another branch would extend from Colombia along the northern edge of South America through Venezuela and the Guianas, while another might be planned to cut off from Chile at the northern edge into Bolivia.

Thus every country in Central and South America would be fed by this system.

Coolidge for Cumberland

In North America there are various good routes from Canada to Laredo, the point which is conceded to be the best "jumping off place" into Latin-American. One would run from Montreal to Detroit, down to Indianapolis, through St. Louis, Little Rock, Fort Worth and San Antonio to Laredo.

Another route, suggested by President Coolidge would extend from the northernmost point of eastern United States, at Fort Kent, Maine, to Boston, New York, Washington and on westward through Cumberland and northern Garrett county to Wheeling, Columbus and Indianapolis and down the same route to Laredo.

Or, a route might go from Ottawa down to New York and then along the National Highway to the Mexican border.

DIED.

MISS ARABELLA MARTIN.

The many friends of the late Miss Arabella Martin were grieved to learn of her death, which occurred at her home on Oak street Sunday, February 19. She was the daugter of the late Thomas and Ellen G. Martin and was born and reared in Oakland. Miss Martin had been in ill health for some time past, although not confined to her bed until two weeks preceding her death. She bore her sufferings with true Christian fortitude and met all who called with a smile and kind word. She united with the Presbyterian church at the age of 16 years and was a consistent member of that faith until ill health prevented her from taking an active part in the services. She was a kind and loving sister and a true friend, always cheerful and willing to do her part and will be missed greatly by a large circle of friends. Miss Martin is survived by two sisters, Mrs. John R. Kennedy, of Parkersburg, W. Va., and Miss Dora Martin, at her home here; also by three nieces. Her funeral took place from the Presbyterian church on Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, the services being conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. B. Brock, assisted by Rev. Paul Linaweaver, of St. Matthew's Episcopal church. The funeral was attended by a large circle of friends. The following were the pallbearers: Ronald McIntire, Walter Hardesty, Elwood Hinebaugh, Julius Walter, Albert Walter and Charles Welling. The flowers sent by friends were numerous and very beautiful, showing the high esteem in which she was held. The flower bearers were Alva Gortner, Joe Hinebaugh, Harry Hinebaugh and Philip Walter.

MRS. W. L. BOUGHNER

The death of Mrs. Anne Delawder Boughner, wife of William L. Boughner, occurred suddenly on Saturday morning, February 4, in her home in Morgantown, W. Va. Death was due to heart failure.

A daughter of the late Augustus and Martha Adair Delawder, Mrs. Boughner was born in Oakland, where her early life was spent. She was 75 years of age at the time of her death. She was united in marriage with William L. Boughner of Morgantown on May 24, 1879.

She was a member of the Presbyterian church from early womanhood and was characterized by pleasing manners, refined sensibilities and a strong intellect.

She is survived by her husband and three children, James Vance Boughner, of Wheeling, Miss Jennie Boughner and Mrs. B. W. King, of Morgantown, one daughter, Mrs. Herbert F. Payne having died several years ago. She is also survived by several grandchildren. Other relatives who survive her are a brother, John A. Delawder, of Washington, D. C., and a sister, Mrs. L. Campbell Tabb, of Oakland.

Funeral services were held from the First Presbyterian church, Morgantown, on Monday, Feb. 6, interment being in the Oak Grove cemetery.

HOWARD LUTHER SELDERS.

Howard Luther Selders, aged 26 years, 2 months and 17 days, died at his home Sunday after several weeks' illness of pneumonia. Funeral services were held on Tuesday afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from St. Mark's Lutheran church, Rev. C. A. Shilke officiating. Interment was made in the Fairview cemetery. The deceased is survived by his wife and father and by two brothers, Earle, of Oakland, and Roy, of Elkins, W. Va. He had been in the employ of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad prior to his illness.

Death of An Infant.

Kenneth Frederick Nethkin, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson A. Nethkin, of Rosedale, died Wednesday morning as the result of an attack of pneumonia. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. C. A. Shilke officiating. Interment will be made in the Oakland cemetery.

Federal Government Takes Over Large Acreage For Forestry Purposes.

On last Thursday, February 16, Mr. Arthur L. Stull, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., treasurer of the Preston Lumber and Coal Company, met Mr. W. E. Hedges, of the United States Forestry Department at the office of Mr. Fred. A. Thayer, the company's attorney, and closed a transaction by which the Preston Company sells to the United States Government 10,700 acres of forest lands located in Tucker and Preston counties, West Virginia. The purchase price was not disclosed.

Construction work on the stone bungalow being erected by Mr. R. D. Houck on land which he acquired on the shore of Deep Creek Lake has been under way for two weeks or more.

USE OF BOYS' BAND TOLD BY A KANSAS CITY PAPER

There Is a Possibilty of Doing The Same Thing in Oakland

An idea of what it is possible to do for a boy in training him to play an instrument in a boy's band may be learned from a story appearing in a Kansas City (Mo.) newspaper on "The Use of a Boys' Band." The problem is of more interest to Oakland boys especially because R. R. Gilbert, who is devoting his time and energy to about eighteen boys of Oakland, is going to have a real boys' band before another six months is past, and through comparatively little active interest on the part of the citizens of town, organizations and parents of some of the boys who are members of the organization.

Following The Republican reproduces a portion of the article in question: "Training boys to become not only good musicians, but at the same time good men, has been the double objective in the making of the crack Rotary Club Boys' Band of Kansas City, an organization that commands instant attention and admiration wherever it performs. That appealing to the finer instincts of boys, in this case through music and strict discipline, is an assured way of bringing the best results, constitutes both the theory and the practice which have brought the band to a high degree of perfection and attainment.

"To take boys without previous musical training, boys often rough in appearance, careless in their habits of dress and behavior and to transform them into youths with the skill of experts in the handling of band instruments, youths thoughtful, courteous, erect and manly in bearing and appreciative of the best in music and in themselves, has been the task of Alois Winkler, founder and director of the Rotary Club Boys' Band.

"The story of this organization runs back through a period of nearly five years. Mr. Winkler, out of his previous extended experience with band music in organization and leadership of both men's and boys' bands, had a desire to devote his continuous effort he building and maintenance of a ss group of boy musicians. nkler surveyed the local as it possible, without and dependable sup- equip and to engage ears of necessary training of band as he had pictured in his ? Obesrving the interest and the Rotary Club in behalf of found his answer. When the on was taken up with the instant response was had. saw the undertaking, as did ler, the chance not only for of a musical organization reflect credit upon the city table investment in the de- of character and young The club agreed to finance nd, to furnish uniforms for the headquarters, and to pay for ne training.

"The boys themselves were to furnish the instruments, if they could find a way to do it. If not, assistance was to be given. But the great majority of the boy band members, through work in vacation, odd jobs about their homes and other ways provided their instruments. This arrangement has been continued.

"It has been my experience," said r. Winkler, "that it is not best to oy everything for nothing. something for himself. stle. He will be all the it.

oys responded to the idea and consists of 80 pieces. never plays jazz. For their with the organization the boy members do not know the meaning of jazz. Only classical music is used, which bears out another fundamental for which Mr. Winkler has contended. Music not only brings out the best in boys, but boys can learn to use and appreciate the best in music."

It is so seldom in this ... day of electricity beautiful horses and fast women, and whatnot, to be in total darkness. that it was somewhat of a shock (not a statie one) when the bulbs and buttons refused to function Sunday night about 9:30 o'clock. The power of habit, that irresistible force which compels you to do things because you did them yesterday and the day before, was working to perfection, however.

Paul McIntire, in response to a telephone call from his wife on Monday, was carrying an electric sweeper home at noontime because Mrs. Mac had said she wanted to do a little cleaning.

Another neighbor had her electric iron "heating" in preparation for a little session with the ironing board, only it failed to heat.

But one could listen to the radio in the dark, and as the thought struck a number of people, they inserted the plug in their electrically controlled machine. The last of which proves that it was profitable for a great number of people who had not the extra wherewithal to buy an electric radio earlier in the year. Those who had the kind with battery connections, and no transformers to burn out, enjoyed one of the best programs in many a day. The whistling wind was in resonance with the tunes of the pipe organ and the snow clinging to the aerial wires only served to make the tones sweeter and the voices more mellow.

The music sounded like the noise emanating from the back seat of Stanton's Taxi when the Oakland collegians take their trips away from home—three different singers and three different——shall Scoop say "tunes"?

* * *

The Republican used the old foot pedal on the job presses, the Oakland Model Bakery employes used the hand method of mixing. James Fazzalari was at a standstill, the milkshakers refused to shake, the washers to wash and the barbers even had to resurrect their hand clippers. In fact there wasn't much going on, and everything seemed to be just forty years behind the time as a poem in another part of the paper explains. All of which reminds us of the old saying, "Them was the Days."

This Week's Date
"SCOOP" IN PERSON

This photograph of Scoop was taken as he lounged before his typewriter in the office of The Republican yesterday. Col. Jeems Mutt Bell had to make several attempts before he was able to catch Scoop in the proper position showing how the subjects works, especially about fifteen minutes before the dead hour on press day when everybody else in the office is devoting a hundred and ten per cent of energy in their various capacities to make the mail for Swallow Falls and intervening points with the latest edition of Garrett County's leading publication.

At the first attempt Col. Bell used too much flashlight powder, which practically demolished both the camera and the photographer, but after gathering up his wig and wiring to New York for an exceptional machine, the act was accomplished.

It required much coaching on the part of Col. Bell to have Scoop look nonchalant and still reserved. As this is the first (and last, we hope) photograph ever to be taken of Scoop it was though best to make it as presentable as possible. Needless to say the plate was touched up considerably after the flashlight had done its work.

The three heavy lines in Scoop's brow shows the tremendous effort he has to put forth in preparing this column for the edification of the readers of The Republican and to impress the business manager at the end of the ... that he has earned his salary. works with the b. m. as ... nce of $2.48 in The other of grime wer ...

To the right of the desk may be seen J. L. McGlone, county agent, who has just handed Scoop an "exclusive" story for this week's issue of The Republican.

The frown on Scoop's face is caused by a mix-up in a basketball schedule. One of the most frequent expressions told Scoop around the office is "don't let your business interfere with your pleaure or your basketball affairs."

GORTNER.

This community was indeed shocked to learn of the tragic death of Mr. Lee Gortner. Lee was raised in the community and was liked by all. ### ...AL PROVIDENCE

"I shall rely confidently on that Providence which has heretofore preserved and been bountiful to me, not doubting that I shall return safe to you in the fall." So he wrote to Martha Washington as he journeyed to Cambridge to take command of the Continental armies.

When we read carefully the story of those magnificent and tragic times, it must be hard even for a skeptic to be blind to the many evidences that an unseen Power was directing the course of events and shaping the destiny of a nation.

For one thing, it seems simply incredible that the American forces could ever have proved victorious over the trained and disciplined European troops sent against them. It has been estimated that a regiment of the raw Colonial militia was scarcely a match in open battle for a single company of British regulars. It wasn't a question of relative courage; it was simply a question of knowing the game of war. The British had an army; Washington had a crowd—that was the difference.

Desperately Washington labored to discipline his crowd into an efficient fighting machine. Just when he was on the verge of success, their short enlistment terms expired! He had to start all over again with another crowd. And not a very big crowd either! What we might call the "labor-turnover" in the American forces was simply appalling.

In war there is something even more important than discipline, and that is morale. The Continental troops received their pay in Continental money, which "wasn't worth a continental." That did not improve the spirit of the men very much! They were asked to fight without bayonets, to march without food, to spend the winter at Valley Forge without shoes and almost without clothes. That did not help the morale of the patriotic army very much either.

That Washington, with such a half-hearted, half-trained, half-equipped crowd of volunteers finally succeeded in conquering the efficient military machine of England is one of the miracles of history.

It is all the more miraculous when we remember that the Colonies were not unanimous in that struggle. Approximately one-third of the American people were tories whose sympathies were with England and who never renounced their allegiance to the British sovereign.

It would take much too long even to enumerate the tremendous disadvantages which weighed against the American side, and seemed to foredoom the cause of liberty to defeat. But all through those long, dreary years, again and again some Unseen Hand seems to reach down at critical moments when disaster seems to be inevitable.

It is strange what little things may sometimes change the course of history. Lord Germaine, the British war minister in London, drafted two important military orders. One was to General Burgoyne in Canada to proceed south, along Lake Champlain, toward Albany; the other to General Howe to proceed northward from New York along the Hudson River and meet Burgoyne at Albany. The object was to drive a wedge between the northern and southern colonies. Had the plan been carried out, it would certainly have meant ultimate defeat of the American cause. Lord Germaine signed and dispatched the order to Burgoyne; but just at that moment he was called from his desk. When he returned, he forgot to sign the other order. It lay in a pigeon hole for three fatal weeks. Then it was too late.

Burgoyne had immediately moved south, to Fort Ticonderoga, expecting Howe to cooperate with him from New York. Burgoyne was surrounded by superior American forces and his retreat cut off. Day by day he anxiously waited for Howe to move to his assistance. The days grew into weeks while his own supplies dwindled and the American forces surrounding him grew stronger and more menacing. Finally he was forced to surrender and America was saved—all because of a little slip of memory on the part of a man in London.

Thus the hand of Providence seemed to be shaping the destiny of America. The very stars in their courses were fighting with Washington.

At least that was his firm belief. And one thing he only believed, but knew, that a Power greater than himself supported him and gave him the strength to carry on when every ounce of his own vitality had been exhausted, when every ray of hope had been darkened.

You remember that beautiful picture of Washington, alone in the woods near Valley Forge, kneeling in the snow. That picture gives us a clue to the secret of Washington's superhuman achievement. "He endured as seeing Him who is invisible."

Down at the State Armory yesterday afternoon this same May, garbed in the ermine of the Celanese A. ## USE OF BOYS' BAND TOLD BY A KANSAS CITY PAPER

There Is a Possibilty of Doing The Same Thing in Oakland

An idea of what it is possible to do for a boy in training him to play an instrument in a boy's band may be learned from a story appearing in a Kansas City (Mo.) newspaper on "The Use of a Boys' Band." The problem is of more interest to Oakland boys especially because R. R. Gilbert, who is devoting his time and energy to about eighteen boys of Oakland, is going to have a real boys' band before another six months is past, and through comparatively little active interest on the part of the citizens of town, organizations and parents of some of the boys who are members of the organization.

Following The Republican reproduces a portion of the article in question: "Training boys to become not only good musicians, but at the same time good men, has been the double objective in the making of the crack Rotary Club Boys' Band of Kansas City, an organization that commands instant attention and admiration wherever it performs. That appealing to the finer instincts of boys, in this case through music and strict discipline, is an assured way of bringing the best results, constitutes both the theory and the practice which have brought the band to a high degree of perfection and attainment.

"To take boys without previous musical training, boys often rough in appearance, careless in their habits of dress and behavior and to transform them into youths with the skill of experts in the handling of band instruments, youths thoughtful, courteous, erect and manly in bearing and appreciative of the best in music and in themselves, has been the task of Alois Winkler, founder and director of the Rotary Club Boys' Band.

"The story of this organization runs back through a period of nearly five years. Mr. Winkler, out of his previous extended experience with band music in organization and leadership of both men's and boys' bands, had a desire to devote his continuous effort [illegible] he building and maintenance of a [illegible]ss group of boy musicians.

"[illegible]kler surveyed the local [illegible]as it possible, without [illegible]nd dependable sup- [illegible]gan[illegible]e. equip and to engage [illegible]ears of necessary training of [illegible]and as he had pictured in his [illegible]? Obesrving the interest and [illegible] the Rotary Club in behalf of [illegible] found his answer. When the [illegible]on was taken up with the [illegible] instant response was had. [illegible]saw the undertaking, as did [illegible]ler, the chance not only for [illegible] of a musical organization [illegible] reflect credit upon the city [illegible]table investment in the de- [illegible] of character and young [illegible] The club agreed to finance [illegible]nd, to furnish uniforms for the [illegible] headquarters, and to pay for [illegible]e training.

"The boys themselves were to furnish the instruments, if they could find a way to do it. If not, assistance was to be given. But the great majority of the boy band members, through work in vacation, odd jobs about their homes and other ways provided their instruments. This arrangement has been continued.

"It has been my experience," said [illegible]r. Winkler, "that it is not best to [illegible]oy everything for nothing. [illegible]o something for himself. [illegible]istle. He will be all the [illegible]it.

"[illegible]oys responded to the idea [illegible]and consists of 80 pieces. [illegible]never plays jazz. For their [illegible]with the organization the boy members do not know the meaning of jazz. Only classical music is used, which bears out another fundamental for which Mr. Winkler has contended. Music not only brings out the best in boys, but boys can learn to use and appreciate the best in music."

EX

It is so seldom in this [illegible] day [illegible] electricity beautiful horses and fast women, and whatnot, to be in total darkness. that it was somewhat of a shock (not a static one) when the bulbs and buttons refused to function Sunday night about 9:30 o'clock. The power of habit, that irresistihle force which compels you to do things because you did them yesterday and the day before, was working to perfection, however.

Paul McIntire, in response to a telephone call from his wife on Monday, was carrying an electric sweeper home at noontime because Mrs. Mae had said she wanted to do a little cleaning.

Another neighbor had her electric iron "heating" in preparation for a little session with the ironing board, only it failed to heat.

But one could listen to the radio in the dark, and as the thought struck a number of people, they inserted the plug in their electrically controlled machine. The last of which proves that it was profitable for a great number of people who had not the extra wherewithal to buy an electric radio earlier in the year. Those who had the kind with battery connections, and no transformers to burn out, enjoyed one of the best programs in many a day. The whistling wind was in resonance with the tunes of the pipe organ and the snow clinging to the aerial wires only served to make the tones sweeter and the voices more mellow.

The music sounded like the noise emanating from the back seat of Stanton's Taxi when the Oakland collegians take their trips away from home—three different singers and three different——shall Scoop say "tunes"?

The Republican used the old foot pedal on the job presses, the Oakland Model Bakery employes used the hand method of mixing, James Fazzalari was at a standstill, the milkshakers refused to shake, the washers to wash and the barbers even had to resurrect their hand clippers. In fact there wasn't much going on, and everything seemed to be just forty years behind the time as a poem in another part of the paper explains. All of which reminds us of the old saying, "Them was the Days."

This Week's Pate
"SCOOP" IN PERSON

This photograph of Scoop was taken as he lounged before his typewriter in the office of The Republican yesterday. Col. Jeems Mutt Bell had to make several attempts before he was able to catch Scoop in the proper position showing how the subjects works, especially about fifteen minutes before the dead hour on press day when everybody else in the office is devoting a hundred and ten per cent of energy in their various capacities to make the mail for Swallow Falls and intervening points with the latest edition of Garrett County's leading publication.

At the first attempt Col. Bell used too much flashlight powder, which practically demolished both the camera and the photographer, but after gathering up his wig and wiring to New York for an exceptional machine, the act was accomplished.

It required much coaching on the part of Col. Bell to have Scoop look nonchalant and still reserved. As this is the first (and last, we hope) photograph ever to be taken of Scoop it was though best to make it as presentable as possible. Needless to say the plate was touched up considerably after the flashlight had done its work.

The three heavy lines in Scoop's brow shows the tremendous effort he has to put forth in preparing this column for the edification of the readers of The Republican and to impress the [illegible]siness manager at the end of the [illegible] that he has earned his salary. ## [illegible] PROVIDENCE

"I shall rely confidently on that Providence which has heretofore preserved and been bountiful to me, not doubting that I shall return safe to you in the fall." So he wrote to Martha Washington as he journeyed to Cambridge to take command of the Continental armies.

When we read carefully the story of those magnificent and tragic times, it must be hard even for a skeptic to be blind to the many evidences that an unseen Power was directing the course of events and shaping the destiny of a nation.

For one thing, it seems simply incredible that the American forces could ever have proved victorious over the trained and disciplined European troops sent against them. It has been estimated that a regiment of the raw Colonial militia was scarcely a match in open battle for a single company of British regulars. It wasn't a question of relative courage; it was simply a question of knowing the game of war. The British had an army; Washington had a crowd—that was the difference.

Desperately Washington labored to discipline his crowd into an efficient fighting machine. Just when he was on the verge of success, their short enlistment terms expired! He had to start all over again with another crowd. And not a very big crowd either! What we might call the "labor-turnover" in the American forces was simply appalling.

In war there is something even more important than discipline, and that is morale. The Continental troops received their pay in Continental money, which "wasn't worth a continental." That did not improve the spirit of the men very much! They were asked to fight without bayonets, to march without food, to spend the winter at Valley Forge without shoes and almost without clothes. That did not help the morale of the patriotic army very much either.

That Washington, with such a half-hearted, half-trained, half-equipped crowd of volunteers finally succeeded in conquering the efficient military machine of England is one of the miracles of history.

It is all the more miraculous when we remember that the Colonies were not unanimous in that struggle. Approximately one-third of the American people were tories whose sympathies were with England and who never renounced their allegiance to the British sovereign.

It would take much too long even to enumerate the tremendous disadvantages which weighed against the American side, and seemed to foredoom the cause of liberty to defeat. But all through those long, dreary years, again and again some Unseen Hand seems to reach down at critical moments when disaster seems to be inevitable.

It is strange what little things may sometimes change the course of history. Lord Germaine, the British war minister in London, drafted two important military orders. One was to General Burgoyne in Canada to proceed south, along Lake Champlain, toward Albany; the other to General Howe to proceed northward from New York along the Hudson River and meet Burgoyne at Albany. The object was to drive a wedge between the northern and southern colonies. Had the plan been carried out, it would certainly have meant ultimate defeat of the American cause. Lord Germaine signed and dispatched the order to Burgoyne; but just at that moment he was called from his desk. When he returned, he forgot to sign the other order. It lay in a pigeon hole for three fatal weeks. Then it was too late.

Burgoyne had immediately moved south, to Fort Ticonderoga, expecting Howe to cooperate with him from New York. Burgoyne was surrounded by superior American forces and his retreat cut off. Day by day he anxiously waited for Howe to move to his assistance. The days grew into weeks while his own supplies dwindled and the American forces surrounding him grew stronger and more menacing. Finally he was forced to surrender and America was saved—all because of a little slip of memory on the part of a man in London.

Thus the hand of Providence seemed to be shaping the destiny of America. The very stars in their courses were fighting with Washington.

At last that was his firm belief. And one thing he only believed, but knew, that a Power greater than himself supported him and gave him the strength to carry on when every ounce of his own vitality had been exhausted, when every ray of hope had been darkened.

You remember that beautiful picture of Washington, alone in the woods near Valley Forge, kneeling in the snow. That picture gives us a clue to the secret of Washington's superhuman achievement. "He endured as seeing Him who is invisible."

When Maryland Slaves were White

Indenture Ended Only In 1815

By ALBERT K. WEINBERG
Special writer for the Baltimore Sun.

One who rummages through old Maryland newspapers will come on many an item incongruous with the present. Casual announcements of the time-yellowed sheets bring up forgotten customs, unsuspected institutions, abandoned social values. Thus, the following advertisement, appearing in the Baltimore Advertiser of 1765:

...ude was prevalent
...al America and
...t American coloni-
...as the second decade
...th century. It arose
...y out of the circum-stances of the times and in practice was not quite as bad as it sounds.

To us the strangest thing about the whole institution is that the status of white servitude was entered by many quite voluntarily. In fact, the greatest number of white servants had entered eagerly upon their subordination in order to gain the most coveted opportunity of those days, free transportation to America.

The men to be sold on the ship Sophia were Irish workers who had signed contracts or papers of "indenture" to work unpaid for four or five years in return for their transportation to the New World. They had signed contracts with the ship's master or with the other brokers, but were to be disposed of for $75 or so to the planters of Maryland. By these contracts, protective indeed in a few fundamental rights, they became essentially like so much chattel. They were bound to their prospective master's domicile and will and were threatened with punishment of death for leaving his service before completion of their time.

To understand these workers one must know the significance of America for the down-trodden Europeans of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. To an Old World overcrowded to the point of wretchedness, pressing down the workers to worse than slavery, America was the one hope on the horizon. Almost every one of any initiative and with scant store of this world's goods wanted to emigrate and no price was too great to pay.

Of course, all were at liberty to sail over by payment of the small cost of passage. But few needing to come had the little money, and for them there was an ironic recourse: the purchase of freedom through its temporary sacrifice.

Thus countless numbers of our sturdiest pioneers came to the land of democracy almost as slaves. For years sustained only by hope of the future they worked fettered and unpaid. At the end of the servitude they were given fifty acres of land, three suits of wearing apparel, corn for a year, implements and sundry other necessaries.

Without the work of these white servants America must have remained a wilderness. To the early proprietors as well as to the workers themselves white servitude was the only avoidance of an impasse. There were necessary for the development of those vast lands whole armies of servants, ones who were cheap and who would stay put. To have a servant for five years merely by the payment of his passage was certainly cheap enough. The conditions of servitude and the system of catching fugitives saw to it generally that the servants stayed put. It was indeed an arrangement to make the modern housewife envious.

After most of the land was settled the servants were bought mainly at the boats as in the above advertisement. But in the beginning it was different—the servants were brought over by the settlers themselves when they first came. Did the settlers bring English servants because they were in a position to travel de luxe with a whole entourage? Not at all—their reason was quite different. It was that the bringing of servants to America was the condition of their obtaining any lands and that the more servants they brought the more land they could obtain.

If one goes back to the beginning of Maryland history one is amazed to learn that Lord Baltimore gave away his lands for nothing to those who brought servants. What is the explanation of such philanthropy? It is that Lord Baltimore's problem was also a servant problem, that Maryland's history begins with a servant problem. This is a literal fact. Maryland as the holding of Lord Baltimore was worth nothing, either to him or anyone else without a horde of servants to work it into cultivation. Only in this way could sources of revenue be created.

Thus, many of the people who first settled in Maryland paid Lord Baltimore only in a currency represented by servants. After receiving their lands they paid him quit-rents out of the economic values which the labor of the servants created. Lord Baltimore received money eventually, but only because servants had made lands income-bearing. If he gave away 2,000-acre manorial tracts for every twenty servants it was because he had a genius of economic foresight.

Servants, then, were the real coinage of those times. They were the means of obtaining not only one's first land here, but also any later increm... Settlers did not stop with their first two thousand acres, but ambitiously increased their holdings by taking on more servants. These they obtained from "contractors," a class of people like the master of the ship Sophia who made their business the transporting of servants from abroad.

Since servants were so much desired it was a happy coincidence that so many were eager to come. But in such a state of things it was inevitable that a great many were made servants against their will. All over Europe the most helpless of the lower class were kidnaped by rogues of contractors. Many a fellow who allowed himself to become drunk in the evening woke up in the morning to find himself on ship and en route for another continent. Also there were the "redemptioners," people who had come over of their own free will and had promised to pay back their passage in a certain period of time; if, as was too often the case, they were disappointed in their hopes of quick money, they were sold by the ship owners to pay for their passage.

Still other classes of the "shanghaied" were the rounded-up vagrants and unprovided-for or orphaned children. Finally there were the convicts, the one class of servants the Colonists did not want but whom His Majesty insisted on their accepting.

With all these classes of servants, a veritable army, we can see now, our forefathers were able to subdue a wilderness. One may be sure that under such a system servants took their orders immediately and did not talk back. The system of white servitude apparenttly was just the system for the times. It enabled our ancestors to effect a physical and social organization of their lives amid difficulties which were all but insuperable.

But even if white servitude helped the country was it not rather hard on the servants themselves? Strange to say, it does not seem to have been. The white servants not only refrained from many Bolshevistic activities but they did not evince any notable discontent. There were many runaway servants, to be sure, but more often than not they ran away out of their own perversity. It may be mentioned incidentally that the death penalty for fugitives was practically never applied; the punishment was taken out in imposition of additional time of service.

A certain minimum of good treatment was assured the servant by law. The papers of indenture signed before embarking committed the master to duties also, and if he did not give decent maintenance or treatment he was legally liable. Aside from the law itself there seems to have existed in most of the masters a certain spontaneous kindliness. On one occasion a woman servant of Maryland was ransomed by popular subscription because she had an obnoxious master and aroused sympathy.

It may, after all, seem strange that men could have so easily stomached serfdom. But one cannot read back into the workers of those times the proud passion for liberty of today. This clearly can be seen in the writings of George Alsop, a Maryland redemptioner, who left a literary document of the peculiar mentality of his class. In one place, after giving various instances of necessary relations of inferiority, he piously says: "And since it is ordained from the original and superabounding wisdom of all things that there should be degrees and diversities among the sons of men in acknowledgingof a superiority from inferiors to superiors; the servant with a reverent and befitting obedience is as liable to this duty in a measurable performance to him whom he serves, as the loyalist of subjects to his prince."

It is an interesting commentary on the late growth of democratic sentiment that not even the American revolution saw the end of this institution. So deeply rooted was it in the economic custom of the country that it did not die until about 1815. And then it was not so much hostile sentiment that killed it as the simple fact that it had outlived its usefulness.

By 1815 the country had been placed upon a firm economic basis; hordes of black slaves had been brought in and European conditions were no longer so bad as to cause wholesale immigration.

As for the white servants themselves their venturesome voyage to a new continent had in most cases resulted well for themselves and their posterity. Starting with the little nucleus of fifty acres, corn, etc., they had worked their way up into the middle classes as self-made men in the most eminent sense. Some of them become nationally famous and two of them, George Taylor and Matthew Thornton, signed the Declaration of Independence.

If the truth be told there is many a fine snob of today whose ancestors did not come over on either the Mayflower or the Ark and Dove, but on the contractors' ships bringing white servants to be sold at auction.

We Must Work Together

EVERY thoughtful citizen of this community is interested in its development and progress. There's no question about that! We all want our children to enjoy better homes, better schools, better parks — more agreeable surroundings and greater comforts.

We all want our town to keep step with its neighbors, to take the lead in civic affairs. So there is only one sound plan for us to follow:

We must work together to increase the wealth of this community by doing everything we can to encourage local business.

When you and your family patronize our advertisers — the stores and banks of our town — and keep your money in circulation right here at home, there is no power on earth that can prevent our progress.

Many Attended Local Court.

Two civil cases were tried before Justice Keller on Tuesday which required the entire day and attracted many people to the village.

The first case was of long standing, having been before the justices on several previous occasions during the past three years. It was that of G. Broadwater vs. William Speicher, of Accident, and dates back to the time the Speicher Lumber Company was operating a saw mill near Jennings. The controversy concerns oats alleged to have been purchased by Mr. Speicher from Mr. Broadwater. A judgment was given Mr. Broadwater and Mr. Speicher immediately appealed the case. Renninger & Offutt represented Mr. Broadwater and Mr. E. R. Jones was attorney for Mr. Speicher.

The second case was that of Russell Holliday vs. Peter H. Yost. Mr. Holliday alleges that a valuable draft horse was cut in wire which was negligently left lying upon the ground by the defendant when repairing his telephone line last summer. He was awarded $135 damages, but Mr. Yost took an appeal from the decision of the justice. Holliday was represented by Renninger & Offutt and Yost by Mr. E. R. Jones.

GOLDEN TEXT—Thy faith ha... made thee whole.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Great Hero.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Heroism of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus the Giver and Preserver of Life.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Works of Faith.

The accounts of the raising of the damsel and the healing of the woman are so interwoven as almost to constitute one narrative. But since the persons are diverse and places separate, they should be treated separately.

I. Jairus' Daughter Raised from the Dead (vv. 22-24 and 35-42).

1. Jairus' urgent mission (vv. 22,23). His only daughter (Luke 8:42), perhaps his only child, lay dying. In this time of utter helplessness he came to Jesus for he had faith in His ability to raise her up. In the providence of God, sorrow, sickness and death are often used to bring needy men and women into contact with Jesus. He showed the proper attitude toward Jesus, "He fell at His feet" (v. 22).

2. Jesus goes with Jairus (v. 24). Jairus believed that if Jesus would lay His hand upon his daughter she would live. Such faith always gets a response from Jesus.

3. News of his daughter's death (v. 35).

The messenger who brought the news of her death suggested that Jesus should be excused from going further, as it was now too late.

4. Jairus' faith strengthened (v. 36).

As soon as Jesus heard the words spoken concerning the death of this girl, he said to the father, "Be not afraid, only believe."

5. The mourners rebuked (vv. 37-39).

He now dismissed the crowd and allowed only three of His disciples and the parents of the damsel ter this ... of death

II. The Woman Blood Healed (vv. 2...

1. Her helpless co... 26, cf. Luke 8:43).

She had been a grea... twelve long years.

2. Her faith (vv. 27,...

She possessed a rem... faith. For a poor emaciated ... after twelve years of suffering to ... her way through a thronging multitude shows that she possessed a determined purpose. The test of the actuality and quality of one's faith is the activity which characterizes the life. Her faith was so strong that she believed contact with the Master's garments would secure the needed help. Though her faith was strong, it was imperfect. She only knew Him as a wonder worker, but through this experience she came to know Him as a compassionate Savior.

3. Her healing (vv. 29-32)

As soon as she touched th... His garment she experience... body His healing power. J... self was conscious of the o... virtue, therefore ... inquire... touched me" to which the disc... replied with amazement, "Thou s... the multitude thronging thee and say est thou, 'Who touched me?'"

4. Her confession (v. 33; cf. Luke 8:47).

She thought secretly to get the blessing of healing, but Jesus perceived that virtue had gone out from Him and had her make a public confession.

5. Jesus' words of encouragement (v. 34).

With the communication of His healing virtue, He spoke most gracious and comforting words to this poor woman, telling her that it was her faith, not her touch that had saved her. Faith does not need to face dangers and to exhaust itself in active endeavor in order to gain Christ's blessing. All that is required is a trusting prayer. Not only did she gain the blessing, but had the distinction of being the only woman on record as having been addressed by Jesus as "daughter," which shows His spirit of tenderness to those who come to Him with their needs.

MT. LAKE PARK.

We are having another real spell of winter, causing us to increase our heating in our homes.

Mr. R. C. Tassie created quite an exciting time Tuesday morning as he went on a swift trot with his black span of horses, taking one of the smaller houses from near the Office on skids and carrying it to near the lake to be used in his new chicken ranch.

I am glad to know that there are plans for a more extensive advertisement of the western part of Maryland and especially for Garrett county. I am glad to give any information I can to further this interest at there are so many real advantages in our county and especially for summer residents.

One man who had visited all the popular resorts was greatly pleased to spend a while here where he said the balmy air was so different from other places. Others have said that our summer advantages here are superior to Florida as a winter resort.

The splendid cool soft water springs are many and the splendid building sites in so many parts of the county where they can get the very best crisp vegetables from their quick growth. Advantages are also offered to those who wish to cultivate the soil for any purpose, especially the farmer, who can produce one of the best and most profitable fertilizers right on his own ground by using the limestone found in abundance in different parts of the county.

A quarry and kiln was operated for years between Frankville and Bond until the B. and O. thought it necessary to dispense with that side track for the safety of the east bound trains. Another has been operated just south of Crellin, and others could be opened along Sang Run where there is quite a cavern and northward to either side of Gap Run. From this last mentioned place the farmers about Accident have made their farms very productive.

There is also a lime kiln near Bear ereek, just south of the State road on the Friendsville route, which has been in use for some time.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR REV. CRAIG HELD FRIDAY

Were Conducted In Fairmont, W. Va., and Interment Took Place at Point Pleasant.

Funeral services for Rev. Albert D. Craig, who died last Wednesday, February 22, at Cook's Hospital, Fairmont, West Va., where he had been taken several weeks preceding suffering with septic poisoning, were conducted Friday afternoon in the Diamond Street Method' Episcopal church, Fairmont, at 2:3[illegible] the Rev. W. M. Shultz and Re[illegible] Bird conducting the services. Quite number of the members of St. Paul's church, Oakland, of which Rev. Craig was the pastor, were in attendance at this service.

The body was taken from Fairmont to Point Pleasant where interment was made on Saturday afternoon.

Rev. Craig had been pastor of St. Paul's M. E. church in Oakland since last October. Prior to coming to Oakland Rev. Craig was pastor of Diamond Street church, Fairmont, for five years, and served a like period in Kingwood from 1910 to 1915. Prior to going to Fairmont he was pastor of the M. E. church at Elkins, W. Va.

Rev. Craig was a native of Huntingdon, Pa., and his wife was formerly Miss Jessie Somerville, of Huntington, W. Va. The wife and one son, George L., of Fairmont, survive.

The following from Oakland attended the services at Fairmont: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Harned, Mr. Arthur Townshend, Mr. Jesse J. Ashby, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Shirer, Mrs. J. W. Butt, Mrs. Walter Hardesty, Mr. Stanton Whipkey, Rev. William Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Stemple, Mr. Cheston Browning, Mr. Townshend Naylor, Mr. Cecil Smith and Rev. I. M. Middaugh.

A tribute is paid the deceased pastor in a recent issue of the Fairmont West Virginian, which is printed below:

"Fairmont feels keenly today the loss of a beloved former resident, the State of West Virginia has suffered the loss of a loyal citizen and the Methodist Episcopal Conference mourns the loss of a true and faithful member in the death of the Rev. Albert D. Craig of Oakland, Md., until recently the beloved pastor of the Diamond Street Methodist Episcopal Church.

"The death of the Rev. Mr. Craig occurred at 10:40 o'clock last evening in Cook Hospital, where he was admitted several weeks ago suffering with septic poisoning of the blood, which affected his heart. He was brought here from Oakland, where he was taken ill, and everything that loving hands and medical skill could do was done to save his life, but for days it had been feared he could not recover. Mrs. Craig accompanied him here and has been staying at the home of the Rev. W. M. Shultz, district superintendent of the Morgantown District of the Methodist Episcopal Conference, and Mrs. Shultz, in order that she might be near the hospital.

"The Rev. Mr. Craig was 54 years old and served five years efficiently and faithfully as pastor of the Diamond Street Methodist Episcopal Church, his pastorate being outstanding for good accomplished and for growth in all lines of church activity. During his five years of residence here, the Rev. Mr. Craig was a member of the Fairmont Ministers' Association and was active in many community civic and religious activities.

"At the 1927 conference of the Methodist Episcopal denomination, to the regret not only of his congregation, but the public as well, he was transferred to Oakland, Md., and with Mrs. Craig went there to reside. Since that time, they frequently had visited their son, George Craig, in this city.

"The Rev. Mr. Craig was married to Miss Jessie Somerville, of Huntington, who survives him with one son, George Craig. A sister and brother also are living.

"The Rev. Mr. Craig was a native of Huntingdon, Pa., and early in life began to study for the ministry. He located in West Virginia soon after completing his theological course and had been a member of the Methodist Episcopal Conference 26 years. He had been located at various towns during his ministry and came to this charge from Elkins.

"Possessing a genial and pleasing personality, the Rev. Mr. Craig had endeared himself to all with whom he came in contact and had become popular in the offices of the local newspapers, where he was a weekly visitor, and in the homes of the city where his cheery word and smile brought comfort to those sick.

"In his daily life, the Rev. Mr. Craig lived his teachings, and it was his greatest happiness to minister to those in sorrow, and his services were gladly given to his friends, associates and church members whenever called upon. The Rev. Mr. Craig took a particular interest in young people and was an inspiration to the young people of his congregation, joining with them in their duties and pastimes with a whole-heartedness peculiar to himself.

"Possessing those qualities which had enderer him to the community in general, his passing is sincerely regretted here and elsewhere."

BAND PLANS FOR BENEFIT PICTURE; MORE DONATIONS

Three Checks During the Week Adds $20 To Horn Fund.

That there would be a benefit picture for the Boys' Band at which time a concert would also be rendered by the organization, was announced yesterday by R. R. Gilbert, director.

Tuesday and Wednesday, March 27 and 28, are the dates chosen upon which the picture is to be presented, Mr. Gilbert said, and at this time he plans to have the band ready to put on a very creditable concert. The proceeds will go toward the purchase of a bass horn for which donations have been coming in during the past seveeks.

[illegible] received this week, which total [illegible] were from Mr. Willoughby Harrison, $10; C. Harry Loar, $5, and Charles Wenige, St. Louis, Mo., $5. The check from Mr. Wenige resulted from reading the stories of other donations received from former Oakland people which have appeared in recent issues of The Republican, of which paper Mr. Wenige has been a reader for several years: about thirty.

A statement showing the amounts received an ddisbursed was handed The Republican yesterday by Harry Porter, treasurer of the Band Auxiliary, and shows the following: That, exclusive of the unsolicited donations which have come in during the past few weeks, there have been received $240.95. The sum of $145.84 has been paid out, leaving a balance of $95.11. Voluntary donations have amounted to $40, including the checks mentioned above.

"This is very encouraging," Mr. Gilbert said, "and I certainly hope it continues."

Further donations are solicited from former residents of town who read The Republican. They may be sent direct to Mr. Gilbert or to The Republican and due acknowledgment will be made.

BALTIMORE AND OHIO IS ONE YEAR PAST CENTURY

One Hundred and One Years of Age Tuesday, February 28.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company Tuesday, February 28, 1928, was 101 years old.

It was chartered by the State of Maryland February 28, 1827, to construct a railroad from Baltimore to the Ohio River, which it did, and still bears the name given it at that time, operating under the same charter.

The Blatimore and Ohio was the first railroad to be operated in the United States for the general transportation of passengers and freight, and the first locomotive built in America in 1829, Peter Cooper's "Tom Thumb," ran on it from Baltimore to Ellicott's Mills in 1830.

The evolution of railroad transportation in America was shown last year during a 23-day public exhibition and pageant at Halethorpe, Baltimore, commemorating the Baltimore and Ohio's first 100 years, and attracted over a million and a quarter visitors. The motion picture version of this centenary observance is now on tour over the Company's lines in a special train.

The Fourth of July this year will be the one hundredth anniversary of the laying of the "First Stone" which marked the heginning of the construction of the railroad.

HOOVER'S NAME TO BE ON BALLOTS IN MARYLAND

Presidential Candidate Files Application For Place On Republican Primary Ballot

Working, apparently in harmony with the recently organized Maryland Hoover-for-President committee, Herbert Hoover on Tuesday filed a certificate of candidacy for the Republican nomination for President. The certificate was filed with David C. Winebrenner 3d, Secretary of State, at Annapolis.

The certificate and the legal fee of $270 were sent by Mr. Hoover to Baltimore and delivered to J. Craig McLanahan, chairman of the Maryland Hoover committee. Representatives of Mr. McLanahan filed the papers at Annapolis.

3 File For G. O. P. Convention.

About the time the Hoover papers were being filed, three Baltimoreans, supported by Mayor Broening, filed with the Supervisors of Elections for delegates to the Republican State Convention, which will meet in May next. Each announced that he had filed as an unpledged candidate.

Later, Mayor Broening said he was not committed to any Presidential candidate and thought it was good advice for every one to adopt the same attitude at this time. Roland R. Marchant, Republican city leader, who has announced himself for Hoover, remarked that "the Mayor and I are in complete accord."

Would Support Weller

In addition to annoucing that he and the Mayor held the same views, Mr. Marchant said:

"If Senator Weller (Ovington E. Weller, former United States Senator) desires to run for the Senate again and will announce his candidacy, I will support him.

"I told Senator Weller this several months ago. I also told him that as hetween him and Senator Jackson (Wm. P. Jackson, of Salisbury, Republican National Committeeman) I was in favor of the latter for National Committeeman."

Mr. Marchant made the statement in connection with a report that his views were at variance with those of Mayor Broening. The names of Mr. Marchant and Mr. Broening were associated with the Hoover movement when the formation of the Maryland committeee was announced. Since that time, however, each has denied that he had anything to do with the formation of the committee or its activities.

Although Mayor Broening declared Tuesday that he had "not taken any public position for or against any candidate for President," it is a matter of record that Mr. Marchant was the first Republican leaders in the State to advocate the candidacy of Mr. Hoover.

Explained by Mr. McLanahan.

In a statement issued Tuesday, Mr. McLanahan said:

"The certificate of candidacy of Mr. Hoover for the Republican nomination for President was sent from Washington and was delivered to the Maryland Hoover-for-President Committee.

"The certificate properly signed and acknowledged by Mr. Hoover before a notary public in the District of Columbia, were sent by the Marylnad Hoover-for-President Committee, through Mr. McLanahan, as president thereof, by messenger to D. C. Winebrenner 3d Secretary of State at Annapolis, and was then received there before closing hour.

"Under the Presidential primary law of Maryland, if but one person files for President he receives an instructed delegation to the Republican National Convention, unless there be more votes cast in a major portion of the units of the State in favor of an uninstructed delegation.

To Obtain Delegates.

"It is, therefore, necessary in Maryland that a candidate file to secure the delegates from the State, as otherwise any candidate could file at the last moment and secure an instructed delegation, whether or not he was the real choice of the Republican voters.

"This action on the part of Mr. Hoover following the filing of his name in Ohio and other States is further evidence of the determined conduct of his campaign for the Republican nominatlon.

"It is customary for formal action to he taken through Hoover committees, but in Maryland, as in other States, very many leading members and workers in the Republican organization favor Hoovers candidacy."

The filing fee was in the form of a check drawn on the Riggs Bank, of Washington, and, according to Mr. McLanahan, bore the signature of Perry K. Heath.

Those who filed as candidates for delegates to the Republican State Convention and the districts they represent are: Henry T. Reutter, First district; Adolph F. Schuch, Second district, and Edmund Hardy, Fifth district.

RECESSED COURT MET AND ADJOURNED THURSDAY

Four Indicted at Regular Term Sentenced to Pay Fines or go to House of Correction.

The recessed term of the December Circuit Court for Garrett county, with Chief Judge D. Lindsay Sloan presiding was in session for a few hours on last Thursday at which time a number of matters was taken up and disposed of by the Court, among them being several civil cases.

Four criminal cases were also heard by the Court and in each case the traverser was fined except in one instance.

Lee R. Durst, indicted on the charge of selling liquor, entered a plea of guilty. Durst was paroled for one year upon condition that he be of good behavior and pay the costs of prosecution.

Walter Smith, of near McHenry, also indicted for having disposed of liquor for money and whose bond was forfeited when his case was called in December, appeared for trial. The order of the Court declaring the forfeiture of the bond was stricken out when Smith entered a plea of guilty. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $300 or stand committed to the Maryland House of Correction for a period of six months. Following Smith's conviction and sentence his fine was paid and he was released from Jail.

Guy Gilson, also indicted at the December term for manufacturing and selling liquor, entered a plea of guilty and was fined $400 and costs. Gilson's sentence, in lieu of the payment of the fine, carried with it a term of confinement in the House of Correction.

Daniel McRobie, indicted jointly with Gilson on the charge of manufacturing liquor, asked for a trial after he had entered a plea of not guilty. The trial was had before the Court who rendered a verdict of guilty and assessed a fine of $100. McRobie will also spend a term in the House of Correction unless the fine is paid. Both he and Gilson are still in the local jail.

O. H. S. Notes of Interest

Mr. Blackwell, director of vocational agriculture in Maryland, visited the school on Thursday last.

The Parent-Teachers' Association held their meeting on Thursday evening, February 23, in the school auditorium. The Senior Latin class gave an interesting play which was enjoyed by all.

Mr. Harry Porter, president of the Association, suggested that the parents do something to help the school.

An interesting talk was made by Miss Conley, principal of the school, on the needs of the school and special stress was laid upon the need of a higger and better library. The parents decided at once that they would be glad to prepare a program whereby funds could be raised to increase and improve the library. A committee was selected including Mrs. E. R. Parker, Mrs. Jack Stevenson, Mrs. Leo Helbig and Mr. Foster Speicher to plan such a program. All the help and cooperation which the town will give for the improvement of our library will he greatly appreciated.

The boys of the school will play the Catholics a league game as a preliminary to the game between Oakland A. A. and Masontown this evening.

The game between the O. H. S. and Masontown H. S. has been postponed. We expect to meet them later in the season. Masontown in a previous game, won from Oakland.

SCHOOL REPORTERS.

Miss King To Address Rotarians Tomorrow Evening.

Miss Rhesa M. King, County Health nurse, will be the speaker at the weekly meeting of the Oakland Rotary Club at the William-James Hotel tomorrow evening. She will talk to the Rotarians on the progress which she has been making in Garrett county along the lines of her work and will include especially her orthopedic activities.

Poultry Special, Saturday, March 10

TO BEGIN CAMPAIGN FOR EARLY T. B. DIAGNOSIS

Will Begin Today and Continue Through the Month

For the first time in the history of the Maryland Tuberculosis association and its county branches, a special educational campaign is to be waged placing exclusive emphasis on the early diagnosis of tuberculosis. It will begin March 1, and continue thru the month.

"Most easily cured of all chronic diseases when discovered early," stated Mr. W. B. Matthews, Managing Director of the Association, "tuberculosis is so insidious in its stealthy onslaught on the human body, that most victims do not know they are in danger until the disease has progressed so far that the chances of effecting a cure are greatly lessened.

"Let your doctor decide" is to be the slogan of the campaign. Posters, public speeches, printed literature and motion pictures will be used. The public is to be fully informed of the initial symptoms, some of which are: too easily tired, loss of weight, indigestion and cough that hangs on.

"Of the 1808 persons who died of tuberculosis in this state last year, fully 85 percent would still be living if their condition had bee discovered in time.

"Maryland is not alo[illegible] in its campaign. It is being w[illegible] all over the country by the t[illegible]osis associations, 1,400 in r[illegible]hich conduct the Christmas [illegible]ue at the holiday season. P[illegible] will he put up all over the Un[illegible]es, and 2,000,000 ci[illegible]rs [illegible]istributed."

DAIRY MEETING SATU[illegible] ATTENDED BY 175 PERSONS

Several Baltimore and Ohio Railway Officials Were In Attendance as well as U. of M. Man

A mutual understanding was probably reached between the dairymen and prospective dairymen of this section of the county and the management of the Chestnut Farms Dairy of Washington, D. C., Saturday, when a joint meeting between representatives of the Washington concern and the dairymen of the county was held here.

W. V. Davison, superintendent of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, was present at the meeting and again set forth the requirements relative to barn and cattle conditions as made by his company.

Several Baltimore and Ohio Railroad officials, including John P. Dugan, General Baggage and Milk Agent; O. K. Quivey, who has accompanied dairy specials to Oakland in the past several years, and Dr. DeVoe Meade, head of the Dairy Department of the University of Maryland, spoke at length on various subjects, all bordering, however, on the possibilities of developing Garrett county into a dairy section.

Nothing definite concerning the actual production of sufficient milk for the needs of the new concern as well as the Oakland Creamery Company, was stated at the meeting. However, County Agent McGlone has given assurance that enough milk will be produced by May 1 to justify the location of the additional creamery company in Oakland.

According to Henry P. Brawner, president of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, the new shipping station will be ready for use on May 1 and will be erected at a cost to the company of between $[illegible]0,000 and $15,000.

Raymond Houck announced at the meeting that he, associated with Howard Reinhardt, would stock at the Houck Auto Supply a complete line of fixtures and utensils necessary for the remodeling of the barns, milk houses, etc., including dairy cattl[illegible] and would allow 18 months' time f[illegible] the payment of such articles bou[illegible] by a dairy farmer. Mr. Houck [illegible] stated that he and his associate w[illegible] procure the services of an engi[illegible]or the purpose of advising dair[illegible] who need their barns remodeled, and assured them that the service of this man would be free of cost to the farmers and dairymen with whom he would consult.

There were approximately 175 farmers present at the meeting, which was held in the Maryland Theatre.

State Veterinarian Here Today.

Dr. C. E. Poe, State veterinary inspector, is here today, at the request of County Agent McGlone, and will make definite arrangements for a tuberculin test on cattle to be carried on in the county in the immediate future,

GARRETT COUNTY SECOND IN FOREST FIRES IN 1927

Thirty-One Blazes Reported Resulting in Loss of $1,339.88

Garrett county was second last year among the counties of the state in the number of forest fire outbreaks, causing a damage of $1,339.88, according to a tabulation sent out in the News Letter, a publication issued by the Maryland State Department of Forestry. Thirty fires were listed.

In the whole State there were 227 fires, a lower figure than that of any year since 1921. The fires burned over 4,202 acres, a smaller area than ever recorded before. The damage figure, $24,237, is but a few dollars more than the damage recorded in 1916, the previous low-damage year.

The tabulation shows that Garrett county had 31 outbreaks, covering 793 acres of land; amount of damage $1,339.88; and expense $118.25. Under causes of forest fires was the following: Garrett: railroad, 17; burning brush, 3; incendiarism, 4; smoking, 2; campers, 1; miscellaneous, 3, and unknown, 1.

Prince George's county had the largest number of fires, the total being 49, with Allegany third, totalling 27.

The Frankness of the Great Teacher. John 14:2. If it were not so, I would have told you

It He were judged according to modern high-pressure business methods, Jesus Christ would be rated as the worst salesman on record, for when people came to inquire about His gospel the very first thing he did was to tell them about its disadvantages. "Men shall revile you, and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake," He warned them.

The worst blunder a salesman can make at the start is to let his "prospect" know the cost of the thing, especially if the cost is heavy. But when the multitudes swarmed around the Master, eager to be His disciples, the very first word He said to them was "sit down and count the cost." And He told them bluntly what the cost of discipleship is—renunciation of all that one has, the bearing of a cross, and the possible enmity of former associates and friends.

The Master frankly told people about the disadvantages as well as the advantages of His way of life, the troubles they must expect as well as the rewards they would receive, the sorrows as well as the joys they would experience. He never held out any misleading hopes to win men. He never covered any politician's promises. Never covered up any blemishes of clever salesman's falsehoods. Men accepted His gospel they did it with their eyes open and their wits about them.

The Great Teacher faced the facts barely, however unpleasant the s might be. He would allow her Himself nor anyone else to refuge in comforting illusions. can trust this Teacher. We know that He speaks nothing but the truth.

We know, therefore, that He is telling us the truth when He says, "In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you." This Teacher never tolerated idle words or hearsay testimony. He had no use for day dreams and baseless hopes. He handled facts, nothing but facts. He was a ruthless realist. So we have to believe Him when He says, "In my Father's house are many mansions", for He speaks nothing but the truth.

We have to believe Him when He tells the pure in heart that they shall see God, the merciful they shall obtain God's mercy, the peace-makers that they shall be sons of God, and the persecuted that theirs is the kingdom of heaven. If it were not so, He would have told us.

We have to believe Him when he says to those in sorrow, "I will not leave you comfortless: I come to you. Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Because I live, ye shall live also." If it were not so, He would have told us.

Farm Relief First Declares Congressman Charles Adkins, of the 19th Illinois District, As Against Those Favorable To the Expenditure of Billions to Further The Naval Program.

To the Editor of The Republican.

"Agricultural interests have a righteous demand for attention," declared Hon. Charles Adkins, member of Congress from the Nineteenth District of Illinois. "Our problem of greatest national import right now and for some time to come is for this Congress to take the lead in attempting something to meet the grave agricultural situation and provide legislation to enable the farmers to get back to a basis of prosperity and happiness. We have been drifting along for several years, realizing that something must be done on this farm question. Conditions have grown steadily worse until from the point of national ...y the situation is grave. While have been trying to evolve a plan ...d method of procedure to step into the breach and prove to be the mechanics for changing this condition, we have generally adopted the idea of equalizing the burden of the farmer among the farmers themselves so that they may work out their own problems.

...ay take ...aps lots of it, in ... working out of the finally ...opted plan.

"Now let us face the matter squarely. Keep our military establishment adequate and ready for defense at all times, but before running wild on a new naval program, let us have Congress and the country at large back up with sympathy, help and resources this farm relief effort.

"It is well to sound this warning, that the agricultural interests have a righteous demand for attention, action, help and those of us who represent that element in our Congress propose to see that this action and help be not defeated for lack of vigorous championship." F. J. C.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. L. M'GLONE,
Resident County Agent,
Office, Court House.

Growers Experience Unusual Potato Losses.

Growers of potatoes throughout the greater portion of Maryland are reporting to Dr. R. A. Jehle, plant pathologist for the University of Maryland Extension Service, an unusual and serious condition of potatoes in storage due to late blight.

While the disease is not new in Maryland, it is usually confined to the higher altitudes and to the northern section of the State and as a rule does not affect potatoes in storage so seriously as has been the case this year. The unusual prevalence of the disease is directly attributed to the peculiar weather conditions of last August.

An interesting feature of the situation is the fact that the tubers gain their initial infection from spores of the disease that are washed down from the vines and into the ground by rains before the potatoes are dug.

Late blight is caused by a fungus ... attacks the vines, as well as tubers, causing dark, irregular spots on the leaves and stems. The affected areas of the plant die and frequently diseased fields look as if the vines had been scalded or frozen. The spores of the fungus are produced on the blighted vines from which they are washed by the rains through the soil to the tubers.

The disease begins to develop on the tubers when they are dug but it is not so apparent until after they have been stored. Its presence in stored potatoes is characterized ... dark, sunken areas on the surface and by dark, dead areas that extend into the flesh of the tubers. The disease will continue to develop in storage unless low temperatures are maintained. Under ordinary home storage conditions the temperature will be high enough for the disease to develop, it is said.

Cool wet weather, especially cool nights accompanied by heavy dews and fogs, favor late blight, Weather conditions last August were highly favorable for the development of the disease with the result that it spread to all parts of the State with the exception of the southernmost counties.

The disease has been found on all varieties of potatoes and while the vines of the Jersey Redskin and the McCormick are resistant to the disease, the tubers of all varieties are alike susceptible.

In all cases where blight is present in home stored potatoes, the crop should be marketed at once. Where the percentage of infection is small, seed from the crop may be saved if very carefully sorted, although the safest plan is to purchase new seed.

Certified and uncertified Jersey Redskin seed, free from late blight, is available in Worcester and Somerset counties, says Dr. Jehle, but the supply is limited, and growers who want it will have to place their orders immediately. County agents in the two counties will be able to assist in locating the good seed.

COST OF COUNTY PUPILS AVERAGED $47.26 IN 1927

State Superintendent Gives Average Expense for Education —Higher Than Last Year

Excluding general control and fixed charges, the expense of educating each white elementary school pupil in counties last year was $47.26, an increase of $1.24 over 1926, Albert S. In every county in the State except Caroline, Carroll, Cecil and Talbot, the cost per pupil increased in 1927, as compared with 1926, Mr. Cook added.

Calvert Highest With $57.

"Costs ranged from $39 a pupil in Washington county to $57 in Calvert," Mr. Cook asserted. "Six counties—Calvert, Montgomery, Kent, Queen Anne's, Garrett and Baltimore—have costs in excess of $50 a pupil. Seven counties—Washington, Harford, Frederick, St. Mary's Cecil, Somerset and Howard—spent less than $45 for each pupil enrolled. Nearly one-half of the counties required an annual expenditure of from $45 to $50 for each white elementary school pupil."

The teacher's salary item, Mr. Cook said, was the largest in the expense of instructing each pupil. It was dependent not only on the salary of teachers but was influenced by the size of the classes. With the exception of St. Mary's, Allegany, Baltimore, Montgomery and Prince George's counties, the eleven counties highest in salary cost per pupil were lowest in the size of the classes.

Despite small classes in St. Mary's county, the average cost per pupil was kept down by the average teacher's salary being lower than in any other county in the State.

Salaries Up 43 Cents A Pupil.

Salaries for teachers during the last year were increased by forty-three cents a pupil because of the employment of a larger number of teachers holding higher grades of certificates. There were decreases in salary costs in Anne Arundel, Baltimore, Caroline, Carroll, Kent, Montgomery, Queen Anne's and Talbot counties. Salary costs varied from $30.68 a pupil in Washington county, which ranked second in the State in the size of classes, to $42.45 in Garrett county, which ranked next to the lowest in size of classes.

Supervision costs increased to $1.42 against $1.35 for 1926. Part of the increase, according to Mr. Cook, is explained by the employment of an additional supervising or helping teacher in five counties which previously had not their full quota.

"The expenditure for supervision varied from 73 cents a pupil in Cecil county, which had only one supervising teacher, although it was entitled to three, to $2.71 in Calvert, the smallest county," Mr. Cook said. "Costs were above $2 in seven of the counties. Four of these—Calvert, Kent, Queen Anne's and St. Mary's—are our smallest counties.

"Garrett county has the largest area in the State, the largest number of one-teacher schools and th smallest number of pupils per teacher, which explains the high cost of supervision there. Carroll county employed a musical supervisor. The cost of supervision was under $1.20 a pupil in seven of the counties."

State Pays Two-Thirds.

The State pays two-thirds of the salary of each supervisor, while the county contributes the remainder.

The counties spent an average of $2.20 a pupil for books and other instruction materials during the year. This amount, Mr. Cook asserted, was 9 cents less than the expenditure in 1926. Aside from the aid for these purposes furnished the counties receiving money from the Equilization Fund, the counties received from the State for the purchase of books and materials approximately $1 for each pupil enrolled.

Talbot, St. Mary's, Cecil, Washington, Frederick, Worcester, Harford, Howard, Wicomico, Caroline and Prince George's counties spent from 23 to 91 cents to match each dollar contributed by the State.

Triples State Contribution.

Montgomery county spent three times as much as the state contributed while Allegany and Anne Arundel counties spent twice as much.

"It would seem not too much to expect the counties at least to duplicate the amount contributed by the State from the fund for books and materials in order to supply the necessary aids to instruction," Mr. Cook said.

The average cost for cleaning and heating the school buildings was $3.72 a pupil, or 23 cents higher than in 1926, Mr. Cook added. The expense per pupil for auxiliary agencies, which includes transportation, libraries, health and community activities, was $3.15. This amount was 50 cents more than in 1926.

Have you ever noticed that men who are the most successful in their own business and who have to work hard on their own projects, are usually the ones who have the most civic spirit and who do the most for their towns? Men on the brink of failure are generally not giving much time to civic enterprises. They say they haven't time. What they mean is that they do not manage their time properly. Perhaps one reason they are on the edge of failure is to be found in the fact that they take so little interest in community affairs.

Master Bond Weber celebrated his ninth birthday in a purely Washington manner on Saturday, school necessitating the celebration of the event to be delayed until that day, when one boy for each of the nine years arrived at the Weber home to help the youngster enjoy the day. In spite of the weather conditions the sunshine in the afternoon made a game of basket ball possible, which was a feature amusement of the occasion. Upon entering the house each boy was presented with a tiny bunch of paper cherries on a thread which they followed in a tangled mass through differene rooms and at last were rewarded by finding a bag of Jack and ball. Refreshments were served from a table decorated with cherries and hatchets, the centerpiece being a large white cake with the small host's name written in red cherries. The little guests left with their host many exquisite gifts and wishes for many happy returns of the day.

...ad the satisfaction of
...his polite wish come true, but ne was not so good a prophet in speaking of his "last public acknowledgment." For, instead of retiring to the restful private life he anticipated, he was to be called on to guide the destinies of the nation which he had been so instrumental in creating. So it was that on April 17, 1789, as he was on his way to New York to be inaugurated, he came to Baltimore again and was met and escorted to Grant's Tavern, where he held a public reception and graciously greeted a large number of the elated town people. It was too late for a formal dinner, but the general accepted a supper and next morning was escorted on his way by a notable cavalcade.

"These gentlemen escorted him seven miles," says the old chronicle of the visit, "when, alighting from his carriage, he would not permit them to proceed any further, but took leave after thanking them in an affectionate and obliging manner for their politeness."

He also left with the community the following pithy pre-inaugural:

"The tokens of regard and affection which I have often received from the citizens of this town were always acceptable because I believed them always sincere. Be pleased to accept my best acknowledgments for the renewal of them on the present occasion. If the affectionate partiality of my fellow-citizens has prompted them to ascribe greater effects to my conduct and character than were justly due, I trust the indulgent sentiment on their part will not produce any presumption on mine.

"I cannot now, gentlemen, resist my feelings so much as to withhold the communication of my ideas concerning the actual situation and prospect of our national affairs. It appears to me that little more than common sense and common honesty in the transactions of the community at large would be necessary to make us a great and happy nation. For if the general government, lately adopted, shall be arranged and administered in such a manner as to acquire the full confidence of the American people, I sincerely believe they will have greater advantages from the natural, moral and political circumstances for public felicity than any other people ever possessed.

"In the contemplation of those advantages, now soon to be realized, I have reconciled myself to the sacrifice of my fondest wishes, so far as to enter again the stage of public life. I know the delicate nature of the duties incident to the part which I am called to perform and I feel my incompetence, without the singular assistance of Providence, to discharge them in a satisfactory manner. But, having undertaken the task from a sense of duty, no fear of encountering difficulties and no dread of losing popularity shall ever deter me from pursuing what I conceive to be the true interests of my country."

In the following September Baltimore had an opportunity to pay her respects to the first President, for he and Mrs. Washington with their suite, arrived from the seat of Government at Philadelphia on their way home to Mount Vernon. They were suitably received and "elegantly entertained." There were other pleasant visits and finally, in the flurry over war with France, in 1798, Washington, who had consented to take command of the army again, stopped in Baltimore and reviewed the troops here, on his way to Trenton, where he was to reorganize the national forces.

This part of Maryland lies well within what might be called Washingtons peculiar "sphere of influence." His outstanding material monument, of course, is the city which bears his name, reared upon land which was once part of the State and given freely for the purpose. His great desire was to place the made-to-order capital on the Potomac and there were good and sufficient reasons for this. Roughly midway of the original States, inland, in a sense, and yet within easy reach of the sea and not too far distant from the all-important centers of New York and Philadelphia, probably no better location could present itself. A very human man with all his greatness, the founder could hardly have helped a sense of pleasure that these manifest alvantages fitted in so well with his love for the region of Mount Vernon and Alexandria. But 58 when the project started, he might well have hoped to see considerable of its growth from his retirement at Mount Vernon. However, he was not even to see the Government take up its abode in Washington.

It was in 1790 that Congress, still sitting in Philadelphia, provided for the permanent capital and a commission to select a site was chosen, with Washington at its head. Two years later he laid the cornerstone of the White House, the first of the public buildings to be erected, on a location said to have been selected by himself and in another year he performed a similar Masonic office for the Capitol. He lived to see the White House completed and had the satisfaction of walking through the rooms with Mrs. Washington shortly before his death in 1799. In the following year it was occupied by President Adams, though even then the capital was hardly more than a city on paper.

In the matter of monuments to Washington, taken in the stricter sense of the word, Baltimore, of course, was the pioneer. The old court house was about where the present Battle Monument stands and when it was taken down some of the town's prominent citizens, who had erected fine residences thereabouts, feared some unsightly structure might be reared to mar the surroundings. An idea! Why not erect a memorial to the Father of his Country and thus consecrate the neighborhood? So in 1809 John Comegys, James A. Bushanan, David Winchester and others petitioned the General Assembly for leave to raise $100,000 for the monument. Then came a shocking thought—it might fall down on them, and enthusiasm died.

The idea persisted, however. John Eager Howard provided the site in a part of his woodland and on July 4, 1815, the cornerstone was laid with all due ceremony in the presence of 25,000 or 35,000 people, all out for a big time, which they undoubtedly had. The General Assembly allotted $178,000 from the licensed lotteries then employed to raise money for public purposes and on November 25, 1829, the last section of the York road marble statue, sixteen feet in height, was lifted into place and the marble shaft "To George Washington by the State of Maryland" was declared complete. It shows no signs of falling down as yet and since its erection has been visited by a number of pilgrims, to whom the long and spiral climb may be accounted a rite of veneration to their country's tutelary genius.

Yet even before the completion of this shaft the good people of Boonsboro had determined to honor the man who gave their county its name. On a peak of South Mountain, near where Washington must have passed and which was later battled for by the armies of North and South, still stands a bechive-shaped pile of stones of the mountain with a doorway and a way to the top inside, and they will tell you that it was erected in 1827.

Another monument with which Baltimoreans are familiar is that in Washington itself. The site is said to have been chosen by the man it memorializes.

The visitor to the top goes up more comfortably than in Baltimore's own shaft, for there is an elevator which rises at a dignified speed. There are steps also and once the writer, when an eager lad, ran down all 900 of them in an effort to beat the elevator and put to proof some theory that now escapes. It was a dead heat, the young Newtonian was dead heat and spent two days upon a couch while his legs cried out in agony, thus proving whatever you think it ought to prove.

Of course, Washington left a thousand and one imprints in and around the city of his name. For instance, when you visit the Great Falls of the Potomac, on the Maryland side, you may cross the little canal which he built around the falls and may study the principles of lock construction. Close at hand are the foundations of the mill and iron foundry which he established in 1785, the noble brick arches of which still stand firm.

Alexandria and Mount Vernon, of course, are full of him, as is the countryside all about. Even now the Masons are putting up a noble marble memorial to the master of the Alexandria Lodge. It is rising on the summit of Arlington Ridge, near the Potomac, and when completed will be 200 feet high.

So they are still putting up monuments to Washington, but none to George III at last accounts.

But, more farseeing than some who since have sat in high places, he could realize that it must expand, what with more and more Congressmen and officeholders, until it inevitably would overspread Mrs. Washington's flowerbeds and the noble box hedges, and might even encroach upon the stately mansion itself. Moreover, there were his friends in Maryland to be thought of.

If you will borrow a map and ruler from your schoolboy son, you will readily see that the City of Washington could be no nearer than it is to Baltimore and Annapolis and still be on the Potomac. This last was essential that future Presidents might have a navigable river on which to sail and entertain their friends.

Evidently real affection existed between the General and the good folk of Baltimore. He seems always to have stopped here on his journeys between Mount Vernon and the North. The city was delighted to see him and invariably did him well, fed him handsomely and hardly ever let him get away without a complimentary "address," for it was a day of great politeness with pen and ink. Perhaps he could have done with a little less of this, for it meant that he must sit down and write out an equaly courteous reply, no matter how much time might press.

But Maryland gave him more than banquets. In war's stern days there were always Marylanders near on whom he placed reliance. Thomas Johnson, later to be Governor of the State, was the first to nominate him for commander-in-chief of the armies before the Continental Congress, then sitting in Philadelphia, June 15, 1775.

The Maryland Line had stood between Washington and complete disaster at Long Island, when a section of Smallwood's Regiment, under Major General Mordecai Gist, had flung itself on the oncoming British, checking the red wave and giving the rest of the army a chance to escape the deadly trap. Then it was that their general stood and watched the sacrifice, saying. "Great God, what must my brave boys suffer today!" At Yorktown in his triumph. Tench Tilghman, the Marylander, was at his side as aide-de-camp, and to him was granted the honor of riding to Philadelphia with the tidings that the infant republic, born in agony, was at last assured of life. And finally, it was in Maryland's capital that the general sheathed his sword.

Truly there was a fellowship between the man and the State. Maryland and Virginia were sisters and the people spoke the same language. It must have felt like home to him here after the alien speech and ways of New York and Philadelphia.

Washington doubtless knew other parts of the State before he became so well acquainted with Baltimore. In 1753, when he was but 21, he was sent by the Virginia Governor to see what the French in the northwest were up to. He found out only too accurately, and next year had to go again with troops behind him, and very badly he fared. His route took him over an old Indian trail, which had become a road when he and his soldiers finished with it. It later came to be known as Braddock's Road, from that ill-fated warrior's march on Fort Duquesne, but it might better have borne the name of Washington, for he preceded Braddock by a year, and the latter may well have wished he had never trodden it.

It led f... ... Creek, which now

... the ... sites of Rockville,
Clarksburg and Urbana, to Frederick; over the top of Braddock mountain, from which one of the loveliest views in Maryland may be had; over the Blue Ridge and down to Williamsport, where it crossed the Potomac. Thence it pursued its fairly straight course through what is now West Virginia to where the river bends at Paw ... and so on to Cumberland, and still westward to the French stronghold.

It may be that in these fearful journeyings was born the germ of thought that nearly a century later was to bear fruit in the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal. Doubtless the wearied pioneer thought often of the wonderful river that flows by the county of his birth, and of the ease of travel on it as compared with his present toilsome progress. At any rate, as early as 1774 he conceived the idea of a canal from Georgetown to Cumberland and thence to the west, if a way could be found through the Alleghenies. The Revolution interrupted this dream, but the idea stuck, and after the treaty of peace was ratified—at Annapolis, by the way, so closely linked was this State with the high points of the great struggle—a company was formed to construct the canal with Washington as its head. He retired from the project when elected President, and it was not until 1850 that, after many discouragements, the waterway was completed and began a career of usefulness that lasted until comparatively recently.

To go back a bit to Washington's visits to Baltimore:

"In the spring of 1775, with the Colonies definitely aligned against the tyranny of George III, the second Continental Congress convened in Philadelphia, for that famous Massachusetts shot already had been heard around the world. Colonel Washington, then a power in his own State, set out from Alexandria with the other Virginia delegates and some from North Carolina, to this gathering. On May 5 they reached Baltimore and were met by three companies of the militia which was to prove its mettle in the bloody days to come. They were escorted to the Fountain Inn, which stood on a part of the site later occupied by the old Carrolton Hotel and now by the Southern. Next day the militia was reviewed by the distinguished guests and commended for its appearance and bearing. An entertainment was given at the new court house and there was great festivity and cheerfulness.

Another pleasant interlude to the stern business of the day was on September 8, 1781, when the general and some of his officers came to Baltimore on their way south to Virginia. Again they put up at the Fountain Inn. They were given a rousing salute by the artillery companies and in the evening every part of the town was illuminated . There was a banquet and one of those famous addresses presented, of which the preamble said:

"May it please your Excellency, the citizens and inhabitants of Baltimore, impressed with the warmest sentiments of respect and esteem and with the most lively sense of the important service rendered by you to them and their country, beg leave to congratulate your Exellency upon your arrival in this town and to express the general joy diffused through every breast at the return of your Excellency to this place."

Naturally, the general was not the man to let such sentiments pass without reply. He responded thus:

"With the warmest sense of gratitude and affection, I accept your kind congratulations on my arrival in this town. Permit me to assure you that from the pleasure which I feel from having this opportunity to pay my respects to the worthy inhabitants of the town of Baltimore I participate in your sensations of joy."

In conclusion he said: "I thank you most cordially for your prayers and good wishes for my prosperity. May the Author of all blessings aid our united exertions in the cause of liberty and universal peace; and may the particular blessing of heaven rest on you and the worthy citizens of this flourishing city of Baltimore."

In the winter of 1783,with the fighting over, Congress found Philadelphia an alarming and uncomfortable place, with the disbanding Pennsylvania troops in a very sulky state of mind. So that body removed itself to the blander city of Annapolis and thither came Washington to surrender his commission. Evidently he was not averse to a good meal and a pleasant evening with his friends, for he stopped over in Baltimore and was given a public dinner. He was presented with the inevitable address, signed by a committee of prominent citizens, in reply to which he said:

"The acceptable manner in which you have welcomed my arrival in the ... Baltimore and the happy ... which you have communicated ... congratulations of its inhabitants ... lay me under the greatest obligation ... Be pleased, gentlemen, to receive ... this last public acknowledgment fo... the repeated instances of your poli... ess and to believe it is my earnest ... hat the commerce, the improv... and universal prosperity ... urishing town may, if

Death of John Yommer.

John Yommer, for many years known by the people of Grantsville as "Shuster" Yommer, a shoemaker of the old school, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Richard Younkin, on February 24 from pneumonia. Several weeks previous to his death he fell on the ice while crossing the street and was picked up by Thomas Younkin, who was nearby when the accident befell the aged man. Mr. Yommer suffered bruises and shock but was recovering from his hurts when pneumonia developed and claimed him as its victim. He was born in Muhlenburg, Germany, on June 7, 1844. He learned the shoemaker's trade and came to America at the age of 20, settling in Salisbury, Pa., where he worked for the late Lewis Emrick. He was married to Miss Dorothy Hanft, of the Cove and they made their home in Grantsville, where he followed his occupation until the time of the accident which terminated his life. ### Lesson for March 4

JESUS AND THE TWELVE

LESSON TOPIC—Mark 3:13-19; 6:7-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel unto every creature.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Chooses Twelve Helpers.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Twelve Apostles and Their Work.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Call to Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Training of the Twelve.

I. The Twelve Ordained (Mark 3:13-19).

Jesus, knowing that His earthly career would be cut short, made provision for the carrying forward of His work after He was gone by calling and ordaining the twelve. Before doing this He spent a whole night in prayer (Luke 6:12). The burden of His prayer is indicated by what He immediately did. From among His disciples He chose twelve, whom He ordained for a twofold purpose.

1. "That they might be with Him" (v. 14).

Fellowship with the Lord is not only the highest privilege of a disciple but the indispensable qualification for witnessing for Him. Personal association with Jesus Christ—the interaction of personalities—the impact of His personality upon ours is the essential preparation for Christian service.

2. "That He might send them forth to preach" (vv. 14, 15).

To proclaim the good news of salvation to the lost world was the supreme mission of the disciples. Their credential for this mission was the endowment of the power of the Spirit—"To heal sickness and to cast out devils" (v. 15). Concerning those who were to be Christ's messengers observe:

(1) That twelve were ordained (v. 14). This was the beginning of the process by which the triune God was to make known His grace to the whole world, therefore He sends forth the number of men corresponding to that purpose. The number twelve is the product of the heavenly three and the earthly four indicating the purpose of the triune God to reveal Himself to the four quarters of the world.

(2) Their characteristics. (a) Men of average ability. They were not from schools and colleges, yet men of mental capacity and efficiency. This has been the history of the church. Not many noble wise after the flesh are 1:26). (b) Middle They were not chos rich, neither from The most efficient who are able to sympathize common people. (c) Diverse t. mental gifts. They were so gifted as to have impulse and leadership—reflection and questioning went together, and among them were found men of practical business ability.

II. The Twelve Sent Forth (Mark 6:7-13).

1. They were sent forth in pairs (v. 7).

Two reasons may be assigned for this. (1) A cheering and comforting companionship for the workers.

(2) Confirmation of testimony. In the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established. People would more likely believe that which was verified by two.

2. Supernatural authentication of their mission (v. 7). He gave them power over unclean spirits. He endued them with power to work miracles, in order to demonstrate their divine commission.

3. Their maintenance (vv. 8, 9).

They were to depend wholly for their support upon the Lord who sent them. Having received the message and the power gratuitously they were to give them out in the same way (Matt. 10:9).

4. Contentment with hospitality (v. 10).

According to Matt. 10:11, inquiry was to be made upon entering a city as to a reputable place to stay. Upon being directed to such a place the missionary was to be content.

5. The responsibilities of the hearers (v. 11).

Judgment was to be pronounced upon those who rejected their message.

6. Their message and work (vv. 12, 13).

They went out and preached that men should repent. Matthew adds, "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand" (Matt. 10:7). This means that the kingdom promised to Israel was at hand, that the Messiah was present and ready to set up His kingdom. In confirmation of this message they cast out many devils, anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

MARRIAGE LICENSES STILL RUNNING BELOW NORMAL

Only Eleven Receive Permits In Week Ending Tuesday.

Marriage licenses still continued to be issued in small numbers during the week ending Tuesday at noon, only eleven couples having applied for and received the necessary certificates. This number brings the total to 53 for the month of February. If last year's record of sixty is to be reached seven more licenses must be issued from Tuesday until this morning. There is small likelihood of this being done, according to court house officials.

Two licenses were issued marked "don't publish," while one applicant was refused a license on account of the youthfulness of the applicants.

EXTRA WRONG FONTS

By Scoop.

Dug Up Once More

The following is again resurrected from the archives in order that some Garrett countian, who is not a subscriber to The Republican, may have a chance to escape such a predicament:

Many years ago there was a man so stingy (it wasn't Croesus or King Midas) that he wouldn't subscribe to his home paper, more appropriately The Republican, which contains the most news and is the most valuable to its readers, so he went out to borrow his neighbor's and was chased by a bull which threw him through a barbed wire fence, tearing his clothes, and then he fell into an old cistern and then his neighbor's dog bit him and the neighbor wasn't at home and going out of the yard he upset a bee hive and was chased home by a gang of bees, only to find that his house had been burglarized and his daughter had eloped with the hired man. The next day he subscribed for his home paper.—He was cured of borrowing it.

Another 4-Year's Wait.

Maidens, maids (old and young) or what have you, lost their chance yesterday if they didn't want to grow old alone, it being February 29, the date when it is perfectly proper (or so tradition says) for a girl to ask a man to marry her.

The four year's wait is only for those who must wait until it is perfectly proper. The majority are out for their man 365 days in the year. Like the Northwest Mounted Police, their unwritten code is "Get your Man." When they get that look in their eyes, —look out. Leap year doesn't mean a thing to the average. Yes, Scoop is still single.

Today's Balancer.
"BOBBIE" HOFFMAN.

This difficult slant of Bobbie, the Confederate-soldier-looking gentleman of Oakland, was taken on one of his busiest days. Colonel Bell spent two hours along Bobbie's mail route in search of him and returning from his fruitless hunt he was spied in Elliott's Music Store. He was snapped there amidst all his glory as he waltzed around to the tune of "Girl of My Dreams." He had no partner.

Besides being reasonably wild on dancing and music, the next best desire of Bobbie's is to read all the postcards he can. As the picture was taken Bobbie can be seen scrutininzing one of them very closely. The smile on his face shows that he has made out the words. They were written in a circle and were rather hard to discern. Scoop afterwards learned that this is what it read: "I'll bet Bobbie Hoffman has a hard time reading this."

The opening in Bobbie's mouth is caused by a cigar being in place. Col. Bell almost refused to snap the gentleman with a cigar as he feared a recurrence of his former experience with flashlight powder and fire. But Bobbie said, "Take me as I am or not at all." So he was took, with the foregoing result. Pass your own judgment, but keep it to yourself.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION TO BE HELD MONDAY, MARCH 12

Meeting [illegible] in City Hall To Select Ca[illegible]s—Polls To Open at 8:0[illegible] A. M.

One person for Mayor of Oakland, three persons to be members of the Town Council and one person to be the Town Treasurer, will be voted for in the municipal election to be held next Monday when the polls will be held in the City Council chamber.

The polls will be opened at 8:00 o'clock A. M., and will remain open until 6:00 o'clock P. M., between which hours the qualified voters of the town may cast their ballots for the nominees of their choice.

The retiring officials are L. M. Fraley, Mayor; Dr. W. W. Grant, Mrs. E. Z. Tower and Grover Stemple, councilmen, and Miss Frances Hamill, treasurer.

Citizens' Meeting Tomorrow.

A citizens' meeting will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock for the purpose of naming a ticket to be voted for on Monday, or if it transpires at the propsed meeting that two or more tickets are desired, then such will be the action of those attending the meeting.

It is thought by a number of the citizens who are interested in municipal matters that only one ticket will be named at this evening's meeting and if such should be the case, it is hinted that several of those who are now in office and are contemplating retiring from official duties will be nominated for reelection.

This Voter, Who Is Also a Taxpayer and a Leading Business Man of the Community, Reviews The Accomplishments of The Present Town Council and Asks That They Be Retained In Office, The Duties of which They Have Discharged Efficiently

To the Editor of The Republican.

Whatever might be the opinion of a voter of any town as to the why of a candidate for the position of town councilman, there are a few things that must enter into consideration for his or her vote to be cast in the best interest of the town in which he or she lives.

A councilman has but one duty, and that is to conduct the business of the town in an intelligent, efficient and economical manner. In order to do this there must be some qualifications and some interest in the affairs of the town within the individual councilman.

Nothing so speaks as to the requirements of an individual as an opportunity to demonstrate those requirements. When a duty is well done there is evidence that a person has been found who has the qualifications necessary to do that duty.

A study of the financial statement of the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland, found in this paper today, will prove to any fair-minded citizen that there has been some efficient work done in regard to the handling of the business of the town during the past year.

The time has come when a part of the present council must retire or be reelected. The voice of the citizens will determine whether or not they return to office. In fairness to them and at least in confidence that the affairs of the town will be in capable hands for the next year the voice of the voters should return them to their present positions.

A VOTER.

Oakland, March 7, 1928.

Oakland High School Notes of Interest.

The class of problems of American democracy is preparing a play entitled "Parlor Matches," for the benefit of the school library. It will be presented in the school auditorium at an early date.

The Problems in American Democracy class has also presented "The Oak" $50 in advertisements towards its success.

The members of the committee on advertisements for the annual are now on the job of getting advertisements which will pay for its publication. This year "The Oak" will be dedicated to Oakland, so please make it a success by giving us an advertisement.

The members of the team and the faculty of the school would appreciate anyone who would volunteer to take any of the players to Frostburg on Tuesday evening. Anyone who can do this kindly act please let the coach or the principal of the school know at once.

On Tuesday of this week the O. H. S. boys defeated the Masontown players by the score of 11-13.

Tuesday night, March 13, the Oakland High boys, Garrett county champions, will invade Frostburg to play the Allegany High of Cumberland, Allegany county's champions.

Another big game will be played on Monday night, March 12, at Naylor's all, when the Davis boys and girls will meet Oakland.

SCHOOL REPORTERS.

TO OIL AND RESURFACE CITY MACADAM STREETS

Town Council Reaches This Decision at Meeting Monday.

That all the macadam streets of Oakland will be oiled and resurfaced became an assured fact at the monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council at the City Hall on Monday evening, according to Mayor L. M. Fraley.

Final arrangements have been made between the town representatives and the State Roads Commission to have the streets resurfaced and oiled when the Commission repairs the Gortner road this spring. The decision to repair the town streets was the outcome of a letter written to John N. Mackall, State Roads Commissioner, by the local officials, when it was determined that to have the Commission do the work would be much more economical than to have some private contractor take it over.

Financial Statement Presented.

The annual financial statement for the year 1927 was presented by Clerk Ross and was passed by Council and approved by Mayor Fraley as will be seen by referring to another column in today's Republican wherein the statement is printed.

The passing of the monthly bills and other routine business occupied the remainder of the session on Monday night.

Monday evening's session was the final meeting of the present Council as the annual election for members of the body will be held on Monday next. The new Council will organize on April 2.

Former A. E. F. Champion Ill in Walter Reed Hospital.

With a blood clot or tumor on his brain, Sergeant Bob Martin, of Terra Alta, heavyweight boxing champion of the A. E. F. during the World War, lies on a cot at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington waiting for a medical discharge from the army, having reenlisted three years ago and until his illness was stationed at an army post in Georgia. There is nothing that can be done to relieve his condition, according to surgeons in the hospital.

Frequent dizzy spells now beset the fighting sergeant who nine years ago fought his way through the ranks of the A. E. F. fighters and knocked out Captain Gordon Coghill, of Australia, in the final bout of the allied armies' tournament. His present plight bears out reports of two years ago that he was unable to stay in the ring because of dizziness.

He is a former resident of Preston county, West Va., and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Martin, of Terra Alta, where the former champion lived for many years. He is a brother of Alvey R. Martin, furniture dealer, of Oakland. Another brother, Vestus, of Fairmont, W. Va., has been ill in a Baltimore hospital, but was discharged from the institution Tuesday and came to Oakland.

Rev. Paul L. Foulk Speaks At Brotherhood Meeting

Rev. Paul L. Foulk, pastor of St. Mark's Lutheran church, Clarksburg, West Va., was the speaker at the monthly meeting of the Lutheran Brotherhood Tuesday evening, held in the Sunday school room of the church in Oakland. His address was on the subject "Stead-fast or Stuck-fast?" and was much enjoyed.

The quartet sang the "Old Rugged Cross" and "O, Calvary." A number of songs were also sung. Wellington Yutzy presided. Miss Ruth Fike gave a reading.

St. Mark's accepted the invitation extended by the newly organized Brotherhood at Terra Alta to furnish a speaker for their monthly meeting to be held this evening at 7:30.

Refreshments were served by the committee of women. About 35 were present. The next meeting will be on April 10.

Methodists Still Leading Oakland Bowlers.

The Methodists are still leading in the Oakland Bowling League and with only a few games left to be played, the championship of the second round almost seems to be assured to them. During the past week's games they won three from the Ramblers, lost two out of three to Gortner and won three from the Rotarians.

Other winners this week were the Presbyterians, who took two from Crellin; the Postoffice, who took three from the Lutherans, and the K. of C., who won two from Gortner.

Wade Mason, of the Postoffice team, rolled 194 for one game and a total of 458 for three games.

MISS KING TELLS ROTARY ABOUT ORTHOPEDIC WORK

What Has Been Done Toward Aiding Cripples and What Must be Done are Stressed by Nurse

A review of orthopedic work in the United States and its gradual growth until it reached Garrett county and the work that has been done in aiding crippled children here and elsewhere, was told to the members of the Oakland Rotary Club at their weekly assembly last Friday night by Miss Rhesa M. King, County Health Nurse.

Miss King also told of her recent trip to Memphis, Tenn., where she attended the Seventh International Conference for Crippled Children, and of the work in Garrett county yet to be accomplished. Miss King was the principal speaker at the Rotary and her address was as follows:

Mr. President and Members of the Oakland Rotary Club:

I started my work in Garrett county two years ago yesterday and about two weeks later I was invited to talk to the Rotary Club. At that time I did not know just what was before me and have really forgotten what I did say to you and suppose you have, too, but this much I do remember: I asked you for your cooperation, which I have received and I feel sure shall continue to receive the cooperation of each member of this Rotary Club.

In May, 1927, our work with the crippled children was started in Garrett county. Dr. George Bennett, of Baltimore, conducted the first orthopedic clinic ever held in Garrett county. Sixty were in attendance at this clinic and out of that sixty eighteen have received treatment. I think this is very good when we take into consideration we have only one place to

BAND BENEFIT PICTURE TO FEATURE RICHARD DIX

Concert to Be Given by Members Between Shows.

Richard Dix, in "Shanghai Bound", will be the attreationn Tuesday and Wednesday, March 27 and 28, at the Maryland Theatre, the proceeds of which will go for the benefit of the Oakland Boys' Band.

Mr. R. R. Gilbert, director, is now having the members of the organization practice regularly on a concert program which will be rendered by the boys between the shows on the two nights of the presentation.

Another Donation Received.

The sum of $2 was donated during the week by Thane O. White, of Oakland, for the benefit of the band. This brings the total of voluntary donations since the first one received a short time ago, to $12.00. "I am sure we will have more next week," Mr. Gilbert said.

William Lauer To Return Home From Foreign Service

William H. Lauer, son of Henry Lauer, of Oakland, who has been with the United States Marines at Tien-Stein, China, for some months past, will arrive either in San Francisco or San Diego, Cal., the latter part of this month where he will receive his discharge from the service, according to a letter recently received by Mr. Lauer.

His discharge from the service follows an order from the War Department on account of the ill-health of his father. Upon his arrival in Oakland he will assist in the bakery business which was established here a number of years ago by Mr. Lauer as the Oakland Model Bakery.

Girls' Club Agent Visits Garrett County.

Miss Dorothy Emerson, Girls' Club Agent in Maryland, spent February 29 and March 1 and 2 in Garrett county visiting newly formed clubs and taking field trips with many.

Trips were made to the following named places: McHenry 4-H Club, Deer Park, Oakland Grammar school, Sunnyside, Swan Meadow and Red House schools and the Sunshine 4-H Club at Mountain Lake Park.

Miss Emerson met with the following local leaders in the office of Miss Elsie Benthein, Home Demonstration Agent, on Thursday: Dorothy Welch, Nina Sweitzer, Dorothy Stevenson, Lola King and Frances Thrasher.

It was with special interest Miss Emerson met with the four new 4-H clubs which were recently organized in the county. One treat for all the girls interested in club work was a dress which won second place at the National Boys' and Girls' Club Congress in Chicago. This garment was made by a 4-H Club girl of Harford county, Maryland. "With our own State of Maryland making such a wonderful record," Miss Bentchin said, "it certainly should inspire every 4-H girl in Garrett county to make a splendid record for herself."

FINANCIAL STATEMENT MAKES A GOOD SHOWING

Entire Indebtedness on City Hall Is Wiped Out and Other Obligations of Town are Lowered

The annual financial statement of the Mayor and Town Council of Oakland for the year ending February 29, which will be found on another page of The Republican today, is one of the best to be submitted in recent years, according to the figures set out in the report.

The statement shows that the indebtedness on the City Hall has been entirely cancelled by the payment of $2,400, and that all of the unpaid balance on old drafts issued in 1923 for water equipment, amounting to nearly $3,000 have also been paid.

The report shows a part payment on the water farm mortgage of $2,000 which leaves a balance on that property of $1,000. In addition to this 500 feet of new fire hose was bought at a cost of $365. Streets receiving improvement were Center street, 7670 square feet of hard surface; Wilson street, 8100 square feet; North Second street, 15,230 square feet; South Second street, 10,221 square feet; Eighth street, 10,500 square feet, a total of 52,001 square feet.

In addition to the above approximately 450 lineal feet of streets were improved with rock, screenings and cinder. All these expenditures are in addition to the ordinary and necessary expenses aggregating $1,000 per month. There is a cash balance in the treasury of $1,483.52.

Memorial Service For Rev. Craig An Impressive One.

St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church was well filled on Sunday afternoon by those who took part in the union service in memory of the late Rev. A. D. Cralg, th edeceased pastor of the Oakland station.

The service was very impressive. Rev. W. M. Shultz, of Fairmont, W. Va., district suprintendent of Morgantown District, delivered the address. In addition to Rev. Shultz six other ministers representing the Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal and Lutheran denominations occupied places on the platform, each of whom took part in the public service by offering prayer.

SIXTH COMMUNITY SA[illegible] WILL OCCUR ON MARCH 21

Oakland Merchants Arranging For Another Sales Day—May Offer Two Specials

Oakland's sixth community sale, this one sponsored by Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, in which practically every merchant and business man will participate, will be held on Wednesday, March 21, according to I. R. Rudy, post commander, who is chairman of the committee in charge of the sale.

The sale will begin with the opening of business on March 21 and continue throughout the day and evening until 9:30 o'clock. A page advertisement announcing the sale will appear in the issue of March 15th—next Thursday.

Mr. Rudy and the members of the committee have been calling on the business men this week and will continue to visit same until Saturday or Monday. "Advertisers should have their advertisements ready on Saturday, March 10," he said, "and everyone who wishes to participate in this sale should be sure to get in touch with me before that time."

May Sell One or Two Articles.

Each business taking part in the sale, according to the rules governing this effort, is given the privilege of advertising one or two articles at special prices for the sales day, and everyone will make preparation to have sufficient of the advertised articles in stock in order that they may not disappoint their customers.

Oakland's five former community sales were considered successes, and it is hoped to have the sixth one greater than ever. There will be big values for everybody in every line has been promised by the merchants thus far interviewed.

This sale is sponsored, as above stated by the American Legion. Former ones were sponsored by the Oakland Commercial Club.

The committee is planning on something special for the occasion, but the particulars have not been ma[illegible] lic.

Extension Forester Visits ty High Schools.

Mr. F. B. Trenk, extension forester of the University of Maryland, is in the county this week talking to High School students and taking several field trips with them. He is assisted by A. L. Sines, district forest warden. Yesterday Mr. Trenk visited Oakland High School; today he is at Accident and tomorrow he will talk to the high school group at Friendsville.

The reasons these talks are given is to emphasize the relationship between forest growth and other farm crops and to demonstrate the best practices in order to make woodlands more profitable, according to Mr. Trenk. Arrangements are now being made for a demonstration of windbreaks, which will take place in the month of April.

Snowfall Slows Up Traffic.

Traffic was delayed to a considerable extent Friday evening and all day Saturday when this section and the surrounding country west and north of Oakland was enveloped in probably the heaviest snowfall of the year, the depth of the fall reaching perhaps twelve inches on the level and drifts in the roadways being a result.

Accompanied by high winds from the west, the snow drifted over the highways and kept the road commission's plows busy maintaining an unobstructed road for traffic. Snow was piled seven feet high on the road west of Terra Alta, while on the highway leading north from Oakland through Accident to the National Highway the drifts were said to be from ten to twelve feet high in places.

Bus service was interrupted on Saturday but ran on schedule Sunday.

...this Man was the Son ... knew ... hour of destiny had ... given in the ... that will be made thru... country during March—and in which Maryland will take part—to bring about a more general understanding of the importance of the care and treatment of tuberculosis in the early stages of the disease before it has wrought irreparable damage and while the possibilities of control are greatest.

"Great gains have been made in the fight against tuberculosis but much more could be accomplished if we could make an earlier start," was the way Dr. R. H. Riley, Chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases of the State Department of Health put it. "Tuberculosis hits hardest," he continued, "at boys and girls just reaching maturity and at young men and women just entering upon their careers in life—the age groups that offer the greatest promise to the individual and to the nation.

"The records of the State Department of Health show that one out of every four deaths from the disease in Maryland in recnt years has occurred among young people from fifteen to twenty-five years old. Considerably over one-half has occurred in the age group from fifteen to forty and over two-thirds in the age group from fifteen to fifty years old. Eearly diagnosis and prompt treatment would have checked the disease and would have prolonged many of these lives.

"But the great difficulty in regard to the early detection of the disease lies in the fact that some of the early symptoms of tuberculosis may easily be taken for 'over-fatigue,' 'persistent indigestion,' 'only a heavy cold' and the disease is allowed to run on unchecked, making inroads that are much harder to control. Tuberculosis can never be checked by quacks or by quack medicines. The best medical knowledge and skill is required and fortunately is readily available in Maryland through the services of private physicians practicing throughout the State or through the public clinics.

"The clinics that were started nearly five years ago in cooperation with the Maryland Tuberculosis Association provide State-wide service of that sort. One or more clinics is held in each county every month. Last year 270 clinics were held at which 3132 persons were examined, of whom 1158 were found to have the disease, but I am glad to say that in over half—693—it was in the early stage.

"In connection with this special effort to arouse widespread realization of the possibilities of the earlier conquest of the disease through the early recognition of symptoms followed by prompt treatment, the National Tuberculosis Association has published a poster giving this advice:

"You may have tuberculosis. Watch for these signals: Too easily tired; loss of weight; indigestion; a cough that hangs on.

"To this I want to add that the next step should be to go to your doctor and follow his advice."

...US FEEDS THE MULTITUDE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 6:31-44.
GOLDEN TEXT—I am the bread of life: he that cometh to Me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on Me shall never thirst.
PRIMARY TOPIC—An Unusual Meal.
JUNIOR TOPIC—A Hungry Crowd Fed.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Jesus Meeting Every-Day Needs.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus' Compassion for Human Need.

I. Jesus' Invitation to the Weary Disciples (vv. 31, 32).

The apostles had just returned from an evangelistic tour in Galilee with a report of what they had done and taught. Their ministry occasioned no little stir. Besides, Jesus Himself continued to preach. As a result of their combined ministry, the commotion was so great that there was no opportunity for resting or eating. In such a time of need Jesus invited His disciples to retire from the crowd and rest. In order to do this they departed privately by ship for a desert place. Periods of withdrawal from the crowd in fellowship with the Lord are necessary after evangelistic campaigns. They serve a double purpose.

2. To prevent despondency for their failures.

II. Jesus Teaching the Ignorant Multitude (vv. 33, 34).

1. Thronged by the people (v. 33).

The wonderful words and works of the Lord and His disciples brought the multitudes to them. To escape the throng they took their departure for a desert place (v. 32). Seeing the Lord and His disciples depart, the people from the surrounding cities anticipated their landing place, and, proceeding thither, welcomed the ship upon its arrival.

2. The Lord moved with compassion (v. 34).

Instead of becoming irritated by the intrusion of the crowd His heart was moved with pity. His personal interests were forgotten as the needs of the shepherdless sheep pressed upon His notice, therefore He began to teach them many things. Jesus is now the same compassionate Savior, touched with the feelings of our infirmities (Heb. 4:15)

III. Jesus Feeding the Hungry Multitude (vv. 35-44).

1. Conference with the disciples 35-38).

The disciples request that the ...tude be sent to the surrounding ...es to buy bread (v. 36). Accord... Matthew, Christ made the ...position that the multitude he fed (Matt. 14:16). (2) Jesus commands them to feed the multitude (v. 37). (3) The disciples' perplexity (v. 37). They began to calculate as to the amount of provisions required. They asked the Lord whether they should go and buy two hundred pennyworth of bread. Their perplexity was due to the fact that they were depending upon their own resources instead of Christ. To be face to face with the humanly impossible has a threefold benefit. (a) It makes us realize our dependence upon Christ; (b) Drives us to Him for help in our need; (c) Leads us to give Him the glory for the results. Though our ability to teach, preach or to give, be meager, when coupled with the Lord's ability, it is equal to any demand.

2. Jesus' method in feeding the multitudes (vv. 39-44).

(1) The Lord's part. This was to issue instructions as to the method of procedure and to create the provision. Though they had but five loaves and two fishes He so increased them that the need of the hungry multitude was met.

(2) The disciples' part. They were to have the people sit down in companies so as to facilitate distribution. They then took that which the Master had blessed and distributed it to the people. The disciples' responsibility was not for the creation of the provision, but for its distribution to the people. (3) The people's part. Their part was not to create, nor distribute, but obediently to sit down and partake of the provision. Even after the bread had been blessed by the Lord and distributed by the disciples, they would have famished with hunger had they not partaken of the food. Unless the people receive Jesus Christ and the salvation which He has provided they shall eternally starve. The Lord has done His part. The disciples are under solemn obligation to do their part and the final responsibility rests upon the people.

THE MASTER.

An angry mob had dragged Him to the edge of a precipice from which they were going to hurl Him headlong. They would put an end to the arrogant egotism of this carpenter who presumed to know more about God than the rabbis and prophets of Israel.

As they pause before the last fatal step, Jesus turns and calmly surveys this crowd of former neighbors. With those eyes of His which the Bible describes as being like a "flame of fire," Jesus glances from man to man. Before the piercing, withering, scorching flame of the Saviour's eyes, the eyes of the mob waver and fall, its bravado wilts, the murmur of snarls and curses is hushed. "And Jesus, passing through the midst of them, went His way" (Luke 4:30). The hostile crowd had recognized the MASTER.

We can understand why no man dared to oppose Him when He overturned the tables of the money-changers and drove out of the temple the greedy merchants who had turned His Father's House into a den of robbers.

Jesus was the Master of men. He uttered His simple, compelling word of invitation, "Follow Me!" and fishermen left their nets to go with Him and become fishers of men.

"Follow Me!" He said to Levi, and Levi left the most lucrative business in Capernaum, left his luxurious home to follow the homeless, penniless, wandering Teacher of Galilee.

One glance, one word, and the paralytic "took up his bed," that is, he rolled up his mat, and walked.

Jesus looked into the eyes of the scarlet women and they went away weeping, henceforth to live lives whiter than snow.

Pilate's heart stopped beating when ... And as the Saviour hung upon the cross, the Lamb of God slain for the sin of the world, a silent figure between two crucified thieves who were screaming in agony, begging the soldiers for the mercy of a final sword-thrust, the Roman captain looked curiously at the strangely quiet figure upon the central cross whose only word was a prayer for forgiveness for His murderers. And when their eyes met, the soldier's gaze faltered and fell. This calloused, brutalized Roman soldier bowed his head and ... Jesus Christ was then and is now, and ever shall be, the MASTER. In sheer genius of mind, in irresistible magnetism of personality, in passionate love for man and mankind, in penetrating insight into the mysteries of divine and human nature, in the superhuman quality of His courage, He stands out as a figure absolutely unique in history.

And real men and real women, today as in the past, acknowledge Him to be their Master, and realize that only by following Him can they find the true meaning and purpose of human life.

Dis world am full of tall plum trees,

An' yo' must shu climb one of dese
Ef yo' gwine bring home de bacon.

March, with its raging wind and drifting snow, brings consternation to the heart of local sugar makers. Every one, weary of the slowly passing winter, is longing for the cheery call of the belated robin and his assurance that spring is near.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Brenneman is now brightened by the presence of a baby daughter, born to them one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Ellithorp entertained Rev. E. E. Campbell and family and Misses Giles and Goodwin at dinner last Saturday evening.

Oscar L. Brenneman, teacher of the Casselman school, has resigned his position and immediately following his sale, which will be held on March 27, Mr. Brenneman will leave with his family for their new home in Ohio.

The drifted snows of the past week has completely stopped automobile travel in this section except for the hardy mail carrier, Mr. O. C. Buckle who has made the trip daily, all winter, in his Ford car.

Merchant C. E. Ellithorp, who was ill last week, is reported as being much improved.

A GOOD SHOWING.

Every citizen of Oakland and those expecting to become citizens should read with care the annual financial statement of the Mayor and Town Council, which will be found on page six of The Republican today.

There is no need of going into detail concerning the report, because it speaks for itself. After paying the entire indebtedness on the City Hall and all old drafts for supplies and materials which were held for several years by those selling these supplies and materials, there is still a balance in the treasury of more than $4,000, or approximately as much as the year previous when no such amounts were disbursed in pyament of indebtedness contracted previous to the term of the present Mayor and Council.

The Mayor and members of Council are to be congratulated for the showing made by the report in question. The financial condition of the city itself should drive the fact home to the citizens more forcefully than any printed word could do that it was through their united efforts that such a decrease in the amount of liabilities carried by the town was possible and at the same time maintaining the reserve of $4,000 in the public treasury.

Study the statement carefully, and give credit where credit is due.

A GAS LEAK.

The lives and property of more than 3000 pepole of Oakland and surrounding territory were endangered last week through the criminal act of a person or persons unknown. The potential danger did not materialize into the real thing and the only way to explain it is to say "it just happened that way."

Luckily Oakland had no fire alarms sent in during the past week or two. Had there been a serious blaze the result would have been their worst, for twenty-three gallons of gasoline, which had been placed in the large fire truck had been drained out by some miserable thief.

Practically any name applied to him would be appropriate for him to bear, for in doing such an act he was doing a personal injury to every person in Oakland, in Garrett county and in nearby towns in West Virginia.

That there had been a sufficient supply of fuel put in the supply tank of the machine can be verified by at least two responsible parties after which and until the moment it was found to be empty it had not been moved out of the department. There were no leaks and the tank was completely drained when the discovery was made last Friday night.

There need not be a column or two written about the foolishness or the criminality of such an act. Everyone knows of the danger in which the town was placed. And just as one of the department officials said, "Whoever did such a contemptible act as that should be sent down the road."

OAKLAND A. A. DEFEATS CUMBERLAND CASEY TEAM

Knights of Columbus Handed a Surprise in Contest at Oakland Tuesday—Final Score 27-24

The Knights of Columbus basketball team, Cumberland, leader of the City Amateur League, was handed a surprise package of large dimensions in the form of a 27-24 defeat at the hands of the Oakland Collegians at Naylor's Hall here on Tuesday night before a packed house, the crowd present being the largest at any previous game this year.

The teams were tied at the quarter 6-6, but Oakland led at the half-way mark 17-8 and also at the close of the third quarter, 20-14. Fouls were freely called on both sides and Bolden was banished in the third quarter when he had completed four personal fouls.

Parsons, of Terra Alta, who refereed the contest, made a creditable showing in holding the game in hand

Killen and McComas led the Oakland scorers with five and four goals respectively. May and Keegan with four and three goals led the Casey attack.

In the preliminary game Oakland High School won from the Masontown Reserves 13-11. Stanton and Stemple were the leading scorers for Oakland with three and two goals. Brotherton shone for the losers.

FIRE TRUCK IS DRAINED OF GASOLINE BY THIEF

Criminal Act On Part of Someone Unknown Endangered the Safety of Whole Community

That someone unknown or several different persons have been stealing gasoline from the big fire truck in the Oakland Fire Department was discovered Friday night by Elmroy Bolden, one of the members of the fire department, who, upon making examination of the machine noticed that the container for the fuel gave out a sound indicating that the supply was low or entirely exhausted when he brushed against it. A closer inspection and examination showed that the tank was completely dry.

When apprized of the theft Fire Chief George Kerins was indignant and gave expression of his feelings by saying that "whoever did this contemptible deed should be sent down the road. The man or men responsible endangered the safety of every bit of property in Oakland as well as the lives of the people of the community."

Twenty-three gallons of gasoline were placed in the tank after the last fire call several weeks ago, according to Mr. Kerins and Walter Dawson, head of the fire company. Since that time the pumper motor has been in its place in the fire house with the other two trucks and has been inspected twice weekly for leaks and other indications of motor trouble. The gas supply in the other cars was not molested.

In order that there will be no repetition of the affairs Chief Kerins has made a frame which will be placed over the lock on the outside door of the fire house. The frame will be fitted with a glass door and will be securely locked. Those who have authority will be given keys to the building. In case of fire, when someone without authority desires to enter the building, he will have to break the glass in this frame in order to gain admission.

"It is certainly a reflection on the good citizenship of someone that such measures should have to be adopted to protect public property," Mr. Kerins said. "The door to the fire department should be kept open at all times but the fire department cannot take any chances on not having a supply of gasoline in the tanks in time of need, for you know that when an alarm is sent in the engines should be in readiness to make the run without a moment's delay and this can only be done with the equipment kept in first class running condition at all times. A fire department is an emergency agency and a moment's delay in getting under way may result in the loss of not only property of value but of human lives which are much more valuable."

Measures have been adopted by the officials to run down any clues which might lead to the arrest of the offender or offenders in this particular case.

MISS KING TELLS ROTARY ABOUT ORTHOPEDIC WORK

What Has Been Done Toward Aiding Cripples and what Must be Done are Stressed by Nurse

give hospital care to cases of this type in the State of Maryland. This is a hospital of one hundred and twenty-five beds, located in Baltimore.

It was after this clinic the Rotary Club voted to give $100 to take care of one or more orthopedic cases. After talking it over with Dr. McComas, we decided the three Hershman children would be the ones for you to sponsor, as their club foot condition could be entirely corrected. These children, or the two boys have each had four operations and are walking with braces with their feet as straight as anyone's. The little girl, who had only one club foot, has been in casts and is now wearing a brace and her foot is perfectly straight. These braces will have to be worn for some time, perhaps a year before the muscles will be developed enough to do without the braces. Perhaps a word is necessary here why we can't send this type of case to just any kind of hospital. Special kinds of baths, electric treatment and massage are necessary, as well as special exercise equipment to develop muscles and loosen bones and joints which have never been used. A general hospital does not offer this equipment.

The Hershman children are home now, but have to return to the hospital in May for observation and re-adjustment of braces. It must be remembered that the money given by this club did not cover the cost of braces and shoes, which amounted to $90. The braces were paid for by the County Commissioners and the shoes by the Civic Club, nor did it take care of their hospital bill, as they were taken care of by the State appropriation. This State appropriation has all been used now, and we cannot send any more cases without paying $2.50 per day. I think perhaps $50 will be enough to complete the work necessary for the Hershman children.

As your next project, I would like to have you consider taking care of the Connaway children. The boy, 14 years of age, has a club foot and the girl is an infantile paraylsis case. Neither of these children have received care and it is necessar[illegible]made self-supporting [illegible] of family financial conditions. If you should decide to take over these children as your project I would like for you to in a way adopt them for their period of treatment; anw ya; visit their home; have all bills come to you and really feel the responsibility of them. I am willing to do my share, too, but I want you to come in closer contact with them.

Two weeks ago I returned from Memphis, Tenn., where I attended the Seventh International Conference for Crippled Children. A most inspiring meeting. The keynote of this meeting was "Where Are We Now?" Most every State in the Union was represented and messages were read from various countries.

This movement to help the crippled child was started about 20 years ago by Edgar F. Allen, better known as "Daddy" Allen, of Elyria, O., but the International Conference for Crippled Children was started seven years ago.

One thing that interested me was that so many men were present, about 350 were registered and about two-thirds of that number were men, but when we think of the Rotarians and Shriners being the ones who first assisted with this movement it doesn't seem strange.

One thing we must remember about our crippled children is that they are crippled in body, not in mind, and that their minds must be developed. Every non-producer or non-worker is a liability to our county and we want to make them an asset. We spend money and time on our blind, deaf and feeble-minded; they are all well taken care of by State appropriation, with schools well equipped, etc. Why not make provision for our cripples who would also react to treatment as well as the blind and denf and better than the feeble-minded. It takes men like you to get behind a movement of this kind to push it and see that it is done.

Another thing brought out in this meeting was the necessity of preventing disease which cause these crippled conditions, such as infantile paralysis. To do this we need support from the State also. Another thing necessary for us to do is to do more child welfare work, teach prevention of diseases, yearly physical examinations, etc. The ideal situation is one full-time health officer for every county and one health nurse to every five thousand persons.

We have cripples now who must receive care. Two thousand years ago the cripples were destroyed; five thousand years ago they were ostracized; one hundred years ago they were endured; five hundred years ago they were salvaged.

We are now at the place where we must locate the cripple, see that he is examined, that he has the proper treatment, is educated and is given proper work to make him self-supporting. Our next step is prevention and going on to our goal, which is the eradication of crippledom.

There are four kinds of education we must give our children: A general education, character education, muscle education and emotional education. We must see that our cripple is not looked upon as a freak of nature by one who is built differently, and in time will be as we are. He does not need sympathy in words but material aid and proper understanding.

We have only three children that I know of who do not attend school because of their crippled conditions.

I heard a splendid talk by Mr. Arthur H. Sapp, International Rotary President. He pointed out that the meaning of the club was "service," and they knew of no better way to serve than to help the crippled child find his proper place in the world. This talk was given at a Rotary luncheon with about eight hundred in attendance. Hon. Frank D. Roosevelt gave a splendid address on "Why Bother With the Crippled Child." Mr. Roosevelt had infantile paralysis over twenty years ago and when one sees what has been done for him and that his treatment and education has made one of the finest looking men of the country and a wonderful orator, we really see the necessity for carrying on.

Going back to our keynote, "Where Are We Now?" is what I am wondering. Where is Garrett county now? To find out, I have asked Miss Mary E. Church, secretary of the Maryland League for Crippled Children, to help me make a survey of Garrett county early next spring, before our next orthopedic clinic, locating our handicapped children. By handicapped, I mean those with speech defects, deaf, cardiac conditions and crippled conditions. Then when we are ready for our clinic this spring these cases will be all lined up for definite diagnosis.

In closing, I want to say, please carry away this thought, Where are we now in Garrett county in the work for the crippled child? Are we doing as we should? and if anyone has any suggestions I shall be glad to hear them.

Scoop has been bewildered with contributions this week. The following poem comes from the wife of Archibaldson, one of the associate editors of The Republican, and gives a startling explanation:

I lost my heart to Buster Curley;
We had to part—he called me "Girlie."

I really thought that Dent was best
Until he bought a velvet vest.

Then Percy Wahl fair made me giddy,
But he would call a child a "kiddie."

My time with Ed was gaily spent;
Alas! he said: "I should have went."

I married Arch I, however, comma,

PHOTOGRAPHER IS BADLY BURNED AROUND HIS CHIN

Colonel Bell In a Bad Way Following Accident.

Making a personal visit to Colonel "Jeems" Bell's studio early Monday morning to see who had been photographed for this column, Scoop discovered the Colonel in a very sad state. Mystery surrounds the cause which brought about the condition of the man who was found with his feet sticking out of the window, his hands still clutching the flashlight powder holder. He was unconscious when the discovery was made, and Scoop, knowing that it would be impossible for the Colonel to snap any local character for this week's column, immediately seized upon the opportunity and took a picture of the Colonel as he lay with his hands in his head.

GRANTSVILLE.

By G. W. Diefenbach

W. O. W. Hall Improvements.

The local camp, Woodmen of the World, have worked out a plan to improve the interior of their lodge room and hall, which is now being done by Joel H. Miller. The partitioning has been entirely removed, also the low ceiling and the chimney. In their place will be erected a commodious stage at the north end of the room, thereby giving much additional space for seating purposes, which was useless heretofore. The raising of the ceiling will provide a much better room for speaking and musical parts and also afford a basketball floor, if desired. The replacing of the chimney will be done in such manner that it will be concealed and not obstruct the view, as has been the case in the past. This arrangement will be a most welcome one by the people of the community, from the entertainment standpoint, as the town has lacked a proper hall for many years. The local camp is to be commended for their prompt action after having worked out the plan which was just recently completed.

Dairy Short Course.

Mr. Emerson Bishoff, instructor in agriculture in the high school here, says: "The Agricultural Department of our high school is arranging for a short course in dairying. This course will last throughout the week of March 19-23, and topics of greatest interest to the farmers are to be discussed."

Desire for a course in the breeding of dairy animals has been expressed by many. It is hoped that such a course will tie up with the feed school which so many attended last year with interest and profit. Certainly every man or woman who owns a cow cannot afford to miss this opportunity of studying with Dr. DeVoe Meade, Dairy Specialist at the University of Maryland."

The school is to be commended upon this action and the people having dairy animals should certainly not miss this course, as dairying is one of the coming sources of income for this community, and he who loses the income loses a large part of his livelihood. Show your interest in your school by letting it help you, Mr. Dairyman.

Frank Beachy Married.

Frank Beachy, second son of Marshall Beachy, residing at Smock, Pa., and Miss Ada Pike, residing at the same place, were quietly married in Frostburg on February 25th. Mr. and Mrs. Beachy will reside in Smock. They spent the week-end with the groom's father here.

Anderson-Kifer.

Robert Anderson, a restaurant owner, of Frostburg, and Miss Mabel Dorothy Kifer, of Davis, West Va., were married on March 2nd in the M. E. parsonage here by the Rev. J. E. Johnson. Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside in Frostburg.

Missionary Society Meets.

The Womans' Missionary Society of the Lutheran church met at the home of Mrs. C. S. Zeller on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30. The topic, The Story of Missions, was led by Mrs. Wm. Baker, the devotional service was conducted by the president, Mrs. F. C. Diehl, and Mrs. Harry Bender sang "Only a Smile." There were 22 members present and one visitor. Two new members were received. A delicious luncheon was served by the hostess.

Russian Evangelist Here.

On Sunday morning at 10:30 and again at 7:30 p. m. the Russian Evangelist, Rev. K. Y. Yaroshewich, will appear in the M. E. church holding worship both meetings. The minister has done extensive work among the socialists, anarchists, bolsheviks and other enemies of the Gospel in New York, Chicago and Cleveland, also in Baltimore, and has established a number of strong churches. You are invited to hear him.

Personal Mention.

Charles Bevans, of Washington, spent the week-end here with his mother, Mrs. Marshall Beachy. He came up to see his brother, Elwood, who was also visiting his mother for a week. Charles left Monday evening and Elwood and family started on their return trip to Horton, Kansas, on Tuesday evening.

Miss Lulu Smith, of California, Pa., is a guest at the Casselman Hotel.

Miss Annie Hoover, of Jennings, visited her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Bittinger on Sunday.

Mr. Emerson Bishoff spent the week end at the University of Maryland, College Park, and Miss Eva Falkenstein with relatives in Myersville, Md.

George Simpson, of Bretz, W. Va., and his sister, residing in Lonaconing, spent Sunday here with their sisters, Mrs. Lulu Edwards and Miss Ethel Simpson.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Younkin and daughter Dorothy, accompanied by Mrs. Robert Himmler, of Trafford, Pa., and Mrs. List Daniels, Cumberland, motored to the home of Mrs. Daniels on Sunday, where they spent the day. The Cumberland ladies had spent a week with their sister, Mrs. Younkin, following the illness and death of their father, John Yommer.

BOYS FOR POTATO CLUB SELECTED ON SATURDAY

Each Member of Club Will Be Furnished With Seed by R. R.

The selection of ten boys for the Potato Club at Oakland was made on last Saturday by L. S. Hartley, Agricultural Agent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Mr. Hartley was in Oakland with the Poultry Improvement special and at that time the names of the boys of the Certified Potato Seed Club, sponsored by the Baltimore and Ohio and the University of Maryland were announced. Those selected at the time were Lawrence Bittinger, William Friend, Joseph Glotfelty, Benson Kelley, Harland Ridder, William Spiker, Charles Spoerlein, Logan Weber, Wellington Welch and Lester White

The railway company will furnish each of the boys with five bushels of blue tag certified Rural Russet seed potatoes which are to be planted on a measured quarter acre of ground. The seed will come from Northern New York State and will be in Oakland about April 15. Each boy selected has made plans to purchase additional seed from the same source to plant an additional quarter acre.

Joseph Ours, an Oakland lad, has ordered sufficient seed from this source to plant a quarter acre and will therefore be eligible to compete for the same prizes and have the same privileges as members of the club. Other boys may secure membership in this manner, O. T. Graser, agriculture instructor at the local high school stated. Members of the club will be expected to attend stated meetings under the direction of Mr. Graser, who will act as club leader for the purpose of organization and study in potato culture.

The first meeting of the club will be held at 2:45 in the Oakland High School building on Tuesday, March 20. At that time it is expected that each member will be prepared to pay dues of one dollar which will be transmitted to the railway company.

Surprise Birthday Party.

Those present were Misses Coral and Clara McRobie, Emma and Virginia Casteel, Mary Grace Sharer, Mrs. Paul Jones, Mrs. Elsie Ashby, Messrs. Jack and William McRobie, Leland Roth, Mason Glotfelty and Reynold Ashby. Delicious refreshments were served.

DAIRY FEEDING SCHOOLS TO BE HELD IN GARRETT

Sessions Will Convene In Accident and at Grantsville.

An opportunity for advancement in the lines of dairying will be given farmers next week when the Short Course in Dairying will be conducted at the high school buildings in Grantsville and Accident, the dates being March 19 to March 23, according to Emerson Bishoff, a member of the high school staff of instructors at Grantsville, who has arranged with State instructors for these demonstrations.

The course, which will be conducted by Dr. DeVoe Meade, dairy specialist at the University of Maryland, promises to be one of outstanding opportunities made available to farmers this year, Mr. Bishoff said.

The daily programs which have been arranged call for meetings at Grantsville on Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons at 2:45 o'clock and on Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 8:00 o'clock. At Accident the dairymen and farmers will meet on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings at 7:30 o'clock and on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

Special features are being planned by the boys of the agriculeure department of the Grantsville high school. A demonstration in rope tieing and splicing is being arranged for Monday afternoon and a scrub bull is to be tried before the "Bovine Court of Justice" on Tuesday evening.

Every farmer in each of these two communities is cordially invited to attend all of these meetings.

KILLED WHILE IN BED ASLEEP WITH SISTERS

Child's Head Blown Off When Shot-gun is Accidentally Discharged by Step-father

Lily Durst, thirteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Elzie Layman, Grantsville, was instantly killed Friday night when a shotgun was accidentally discharged at her home, according to a coroner's jury, who returned a verdict of accidental death. The inquest was held on Saturday.

The upper portion of the child's head was blown off as she slept, with three of her little sisters beside her, in a bedroom of the home, eight miles west of Frostburg. Her sisters escaped injury.

State's Attorney J. C. Renninger and Sheriff William D. Casteel, of Oakland, investigated the shooting and assisted Coroner George Brown in conducting the inquest.

Wife Tried To Detain Him

The girl's mother testified that her husband secured a shotgun to go down the stairway about 9:30 o'clock Friday night. Mrs. Layman declared that she asked her husband to remain upstairs and that she grasped the gun held by her husband.

In some manner the weapon was discharged, the contents of one barrel passing through the bedroom door, which was slightly ajar, and striking the sleeping girl. The child was killed instantly.

Veteran of World War

Howard Durst, 20, son of Mrs. Layman, corroborated his mother's testimony. Layman is a veteran of the World War and is partly deaf from the effects of his services. His wife, the widow of a man named Durst, is the mother of six children, all of whom are at home.

The jurors were Otho Fike, William Garlitz, Enoch Robinson, William L. Hetz, Orville Stark, Jesse Merrill, Forrest Robinson and Emory Fazenbaker, and four others.

Funeral services were held afternoon at 2 o'clock at Mt. Zion church, with interment in the church cemetery.

To Confer Rank of Page.

The Rank of Page will be conferred on a small class of candidates at the weekly meeting of the local lodge, K. of P., to he held on Friday evening, it has been announced by Reese Friend, chairman of the program committee.

The special features of last week's meeting were the pie-eating and cereal-eating contests, which were won by Daniel Thayer and George Little, respectively. The weekly award, this time a pipe set donated by the Recreation, was given to A. G. Gortner.

The attendance prizes were won by George Fulk and Harry Stemple.

Four rolls for the piano were donated by Stanley Bond and Thornton Deffinbaugh.

OFFICERS MAKE ARRESTS FOLLOWING VIOLATIONS

150-Gallon Still and 4 Barrels of Mash Discovered—Owners are Yet Unknown to Officers.

Several arrests for minor offenses were made and one large still was confiscated by Sheriff W. D. Casteel and Deputy Sheriff Joy Griffith during the past week.

The still, which had a capacity of 150 gallons, was discovered in an abandoned house in the North Glade section of the county. The house was on land belonging to the Eastern Land Corporation and borders Deep Creek Lake near its head. Four barrels of mash were also discovered and destroped by the officers, but no manufactured product was found and no one was near the premises so far as the officers know, when the place was raided, hence no arrests were made.

Hunting Without Licenses.

Ray Frush and Ellis Snyder, each about 25 years of age, and residing in the vicinity of Bittinger, were arrested on Monday, charged with hunting without first procuring a license and for hunting during the closed season. They were taken to Grantsville where they posted bonds of $100 each for their appearance in Oakland on Monday, March 26, when they will be given a hearing by Justice E. L. West.

Held for Non-Support.

Samuel Lewis, of near Sines, was apprehended on Monday by oficers of the court on a warrant charging him with non-support. He will be accorded a hearing tomorrow.

Roy Wright, about 35 years of age, of Wilson, was apprehended last Saturday evening on a charge of being drunk and acting in a disorderly manner. He was given a hearing before Justice Gonder on Monday and was fined $5 and costs. The fine was paid and Wright was released.

Bernard Nally, indicted at the December term of Court for robbery, and who escaped arrest at the time by leaving the State, voluntarily returned one day the latter part of last week and was apprehended by the officers. Bond in the sum of $1000 for his appearance at the June Term was furnished and he was released.

Derailment Disrupts Traffic on Two Roads

Twenty-three cars of coal in Baltimore and Ohio eastbound freight train No. 6109 were derailed at 6 o'clock Sunday morning about a half mile west of Rawlings, Allegany county, tearing up both tracks for a considerable distance and delaying traffic until 6:15 p. m. Trains running through Oakland were sent back to Grafton, W. Va., where they were detoured to Connellsville, Pa.

Several cars rolled down a steep embankment to the Western Maryland railway tracks, which parallel the B. and O. Line at that point, and blocked traffic for several hours. The cause of the derailment has not been determined. Wrecking crews were hard at work all day removing the wrecked cars and repairing the tracks.

Mid-Week Services Well Attended In St. Mark's hurch.

The union mid-week Lenten service was well attended yesterday evening in St. Mark's Lutheran church. Rev. John A. Wood, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Keyser, W. Va., preached the sermon on "Is It Nothing To You." A tri owas sung by Mrs. Harold Harned, Miss Hazel Nine and Mrs. Karl Kahl.

The next mid-week service will be held in the Presbyterian church.

Community Council Meets.

The Oakland Community Council of Religious Education met with Rev. J. A. Wood, of Keyser, W. Va., last evening and formulated plans for the school of religious instruction which is to be conducted for the benefit of the Sunday schools of Oakland and all surrounding communities the week of May 5th. Col. Joseph Cudlipp, of Baltimore, will be the dean of the school and will conduct one of the classes.

Dr. Harriet B. Jones, of Wheeling, will teach the New Testament.

Those who are sponsoring the school will immediately begin a campaign of publicity which will be carried to the schools of the community seeking enrollment for this special school. The hope has been expressed that there will be a ready response.

LARGE NUMBER ATTEND POULTRY SPECIAL TRAIN

More People Visit Train in Oakland Than at Any Other Station, Officials Stated

More than 500 farmers and other interested parties visited the poultry improvement special train, operated by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which arrived in Oakland Saturday morning and remained in the railroad yards until early afternoon, according to J. L. McGlone, county agent. This was the largest number to attend the special at any stop along the route, the officials of the train stated.

Oakland was the last stop to be made in Maryland, and from here the Maryland extension men in charge of the train were released, to be replaced by men from the extension department of West Virginia. The same method will be followed throughout its entire trip to the Western coast, changing railroad officials when changing to railroads other than the Baltimore and Ohio.

One-reel films were shown in connection with short talks by specialists from the Extension service, University of Maryland, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture, including Mr. Aaron Fell, of the Maryland Poultry Breeders' Association; H. L. Strader, department of Agriculture; S. B. Shaw, University of Maryland, and W. H. Rice, of the Poultry department of the University. Talks were given on Breeding, Brooding, Marketing and Housing of poultry. Many inquiries were made about the purchase of poultry, it was said.

The train consisted of an exhibit car, a lecture car, a stock car, containing chickens, turkeys and geese; and a flat car upon which was a model chicken house. The train also carried charts and pamphlets and other helps to poultry raisers.

The exhibition car was in charge of Miss Edythe Turner and Miss Ethel O Reagan, home demonstration agents of Baltimore and Prince George's counties. Miss Elsie Benthien, home demonstration agent for Garrett county, assisted them.

O. H. S. News Notes of Interest.

The play, "Parlor Matches," will be presented in the High School auditorium on Friday, March 23, by the class in Problems of American Democracy. The purpose of this play is to raise money to aid the school library. We need new books, good books, expensive books, books that will really help us in doing required school work, to be used as references. The more good books we have to read the greater will be our store of worthwhile knowledge. Help us get it! Help us increase our school library! Do your bit! Come to our play! 15c. for adults and 10c. for children.

We, the O. H. S. basketball teams and the faculty of the school take this opportunity to thank all for the manner in which they have turned out to all our games and for the generous help we have received during the past season to make it successful.

Oakland High School basketball season was officially closed March 12 at home. Davis High defeated the locals by a score of 16-12 before one of the largest gatherings of the year. The game was interesting from start to finish. The players who took the floor for the local school for the last time were Captain Sanders, Stahl, Stanton and Stemple, who put forth every effort to win but could not succeed. Sanders was high scorer for Oakland with three pretty field goals from mid-floor, while Stemple, Stahl and Stanton played a good floor game. Lohr also played a good game. Warden was Davis's best bet.

In the preliminary game the Oakland girls were defeated by the Davis girls by the score of 21-12.

On March 13, Oakland High boys, Garrett county champions, journeyed to Frostburg where they played the strong Allegany High of Cumberland. The first quarter was very interesting, the score being 9-7 in favor of Allegany, but in the next quarter they completely outclassed Oakland, and when the final whistle blew the score was 63-17. Stanton was high scorer for Oakland with four field goals, while Wolfe, Shaffer and Young were high scorers for Allegany.

HELEN HINEBAUGH,
VIVIAN CLARY, Reporters.

Dr. E. A. Poe, government veterinarian, accompanied by an assistant, will begin a tuberculin test of cattle for Garrett county on April 2, upon which day Oakland will be visited.

MANY TICKETS SOLD FOR BAND BENEFIT PICTURE

Food Sale For Benefit of Organization Will Be Held Saturday

A record crowd is already assured for the band benefit picture to be given on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 27 and 28 insts., at the Maryland Theatre, according to Director R. R. Gilbert, who says that practically all of the tickets have been sold.

The picture, "Shanghai Bound," will feature Richard Dix, and the proceeds will go for the benefit of the Oakland Boys' Band.

A food sale for the band's benefit will be conducted on Saturday, March 17, at the offices of the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas Company. Pies, cakes, candy and other things, donated hy the mothers of the boys and members of the Band Auxiliary, will be on sale.

Another Donation.

Another donation of $3 was received during the week from City Tax Collector James O. Hinebaugh, bringing the total of voluntary contributions to $45. "I am sure there are more to come," Mr. Gilbert said.

MINER BLOWN TO PIECES WHEN EXPLOSION OCCURS

Remains of Midland Man, Former Garrett Countian, Hurled Two Hundred Feet

David A. Llewellyn, aged 44 years, father of ten children and a miner by occupation, formerly of Avilton, Garrett county, was blown to pieces when a stick of dynamite he was carrying in his coat pocket came in contact with a dynamite cap he also had in his pocket while he was en route to work on Friday morning at a point near his home in Midland.

His body was literally torn to pieces by the blast and a portion was carried a distance of two hundred feet by its force. The body of the Ford car in which he was riding was totally destroyed but the chassis was virtually uninjured.

Beside his wife and ten children, he is survived by his mother, who resides in Avilton; one brother and three sisters: Mrs. Ernest Michaels, of Avilton, being one of the sisters. The funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon from his home in Midland, the Rev. Lynn Arbogast, pastor of the Midland Methodist Episcopal church, officiating. Interment was made in Oak Hill cemetery.

Oakland High Loses to Allegany 63-17.

Oakland High School basketball team was defeated by Allegany High of Cumberland, 63-17, in the first game of the State championship tournament sponsored by the Playground Athletic League of Baltimore, on last Tuesday night in the Beall school court at Frostburg.

Stanton made four of Oakland's six field goals. Allegany scored 28 field goals and flashed a brilliant passing game.

Lose to Davis.

The local High School team also lost two games to Davis High, one at Davis, 29-27, and one at Oakland on Monday night, 16-14. Stemple, Sanders, Stanton and Stahl carried the brunt of the scoring attack, while Lohr played well on the defense.

The school boys will close their season on Thursday night in a preliminary game to the Grafton-Oakland A. A. contest. They will lock horns with Terra Alta High.

DIED.

FREDERICK BYER MAYER.

Frederick Byer Mayer, 35, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John C. Mayer, of Terra Alta, West Va., died Monday morning, March 12, in a Philadelphia hospital, following an illness of a few weeks. His body was taken to Terra Alta on Tuesday morning and funeral services were conducted yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock from the Presbyterian church with the Rev. M. O. Magnuson officiating. Interment was made in the Terra Alta cemetery where the Masonic fraternity conducted the services. Mr. Mayer is survived by his wife, two children and three sisters: Mrs. Harland L. Jones, Oakland; Mrs. W. O. Zacharias, of Chambersburg, Pa. ,and Mrs. W. R. Shaw, of Terra Alta, and by his stepmother, Mrs. Aletta Mayer of Amboy, West Va.

Lawrence M. Fraley was re-elected mayor of Oakland over Mrs. E. Z. Tower by a majority of 344 votes in the municipal election held Monday in the Town Hall, according to officials. Jesse J. ## METHODISTS ALMOST SURE OF WINNING SECONDROUND

Bowling League Games Will End For Season Next Week.

With the Methodists practically assured of first place in the second round of the Oakland Bowling League, "Bill" Gibson, manager, is preparing for the championship series between the winners of the first and second round the latter part of the present month.

Postoffice, winners of the first round of the League games, must win all of their remainnig games in order to win over the Methodists, and this was considered highly improbable by the followers of the sport. The banquet to follow the series for the championship will close the season, which has been highly successful, according to the manager.

During last week's play the Merchants won six games, three from Crellin and three from the Rotarians. The Methodists took three from Crellin and the Ramblers took two out of three from the Presbyterians. The Postoffice-K. of C. game was postponed until Friday night.

Home Demonstration Agent's Schedule, March 20-24

ELECTION IS OVER

The municipal election is over. The Mayor, members of Council and the City Treasurer have been elected by the greatest number of voters ever participating in a contest in the history of Oakland. There were many ballots cast against those who were elected. That is perfectly proper, because that is the privilege of the individual voter.

But that is all past now. The differences between friends which existed on election day should disappear, and these differences in many cases did disappear as soon as the polls closed. Now all are united and are back of the winners and are supporting them in every laudable undertaking for the betterment of Oakland and its residents.

The election is over. Good men and an excellent woman have been selected as officers. The new administration will begin to function on April 1st. It should have the united support of every individual in the city.

WHILE THE IRON IS HOT.

Coming at a time when dairying is fast becoming Garrett county's best known industry, the short course in feeding and care of dairy cattle, which is to be held at the Accident and Grantsville high schools March 19 to 23, inclusive, should be welcomed by every farmer in those communities.

It is not the first time that these short courses have been conducted in Garrett county, but they are becoming more and more valuable each year in making known to farmers the importance of careful breeding, good food and proper care.

To prove that dairy cattle in Maryland need improvement, one need only to compare the annual production per cow of this State with that of other parts of the world. Netherlands, 7585; Switzerland, 6950; Denmark, 5666; United States, 3527; Maryland, 3250. By these figures, which are furnished by the Bureau of Dairying, it is easily seen that the United States is very low and that Maryland is below the United States.

The short course will be in charge of a specialist from the University of Maryland, and he will endeavor to impress the farmers with the importance of scientific breeding. If Maryland is to increase her milk production, the start must be made on this basis.

Every farmer is welcome to attend these courses, the schedule of which appears in a news story in this issue of The Republican. The only thing that is asked of him is his time, and the information obtained from attendance at these meetings will be of the greatest value to him.

If proposed plans are successfully carried out Garrett county will soon become known as the greatest dairying county. Everyone has heard the old adage, "Strike while the iron is hot." Change it and you have "Learn dairying while the time is ripe."

SMILE AND—

Smile and the world smiles with you. A truer statement was never made. Test it out for yourself. When you get up in the morning, get up with a smile, meet your family and your friends with a smile—see what a big improvement it makes in your day.

Smiling will get work done quickly and efficiently. Smiling is so much easier to do than frowning. The frown of determination may well and profitably be replaced by the smile of willingness to serve.

Smile at neighbor Jones and he will smile at you.

Smiles tend toward happiness in the home and in the community. It carries with it its own reward—a knowledge that each day we are doing our share toward making this a better and happier place in which to live.

Smiles make little troubles out of big ones, and little troubles disappear entirely when met with a smile.

Watch for the smiles of the Oakland business and professional men on Community Sales day, March 21. They will be out to serve their customers.

OAKLAND A. A. TO PLAY GRAFTON—CUMBERLAND

Will Wind Up Home Season Tonight—To Play Caseys in Cumberland on Friday

Oakland A. A. will close its current basketball season with two games this week-end, one tonight at Oakland with the Hazel-Atlas team of Grafton, W. Va., and one tomorrow night with the Cumberland Caseys, champions of Cumberland, at Cumberland.

During the past few days the Collegians have won two games and lost one. On Thursday night they defeated the Grafton team at Grafton 35-28 in a slow and uninteresting game. Oakland caged baskets when necessary but was not pushed at any time during the game. Killen made seven field goals and McComas and Bolden four each to lead the Oakland scorers. Posten and Howearth were the point getters for Grafton.

Lose to Potomac State

Potomac State college defeated the local team for the second time this season on the Armory floor, Keyser, on Saturday night, 46-34. Oakland led at half time, 17-13 and was one point behind when the third quarter ended, 28-27. In the final period the Parrish coached team got the better of the argument and ran up 18 points while the best Oakland could get was 7.

Masontown Defeated

The Masontown Merchant five was given a setback on their home floor on Monday night when the locals, without the assistance of Bolden, won 24-19. Masontown led up until the closing minutes of play, but a pair of field goals by Nally and a field goal and foul by Killen put them to route. Killen led the Oakland scoring. Kahl and F. Wolf alternated in place of Bolden. Monday's victory was the fourteenth victory out of twenty games played this season.

The lineup of the Potomac State encounter follows:

| Oakland—34 | | State—46 |
|---|---|---|
| Killen | F | Cathers |
| McComas | F | Goldstein |
| Bolden | C | Overholt |
| Nally | G | Umberger |
| Hanst | G | Parkinson |

Subs, for State, Kasun, Drepperd and Seamon. Field goals: Killen 4, McComas 6, Bolden 2, Hanst 2, Cathers 5, Goldstein 6, Overholt 2, Umberger 3, Parkinson 4. Fouls: McComas 2-3, Bolden 1-1, Hanst 1-3, Goldstein 4-7, Umberger 2-2. Referee, Robert Gibson.

THE GREAT TEACHER

There are men who accept Jesus as a Teacher who do not accept Him as a Saviour. Most of the leading men of the world, men of various religious faiths and some of no faith, stand reverently, with uncovered heads, in the presence of Jesus of Nazareth, and acclaim Him the greatest Teacher who ever lived. Stephen Wise, the outstanding Jewish rabbi, Mahatma Ghandi, the greatest living Hindu, H. G. Wells and George Bernard Shaw, most brilliant figures in the world of literature, are a few examples of modern men who, though not Christians, nevertheless testify that Jesus is the Master Teacher of the ages, and that only from Him can the world learn the way out of the darkness of social chaos and spiritual tragedy into the new day when man shall truly find himself and civilization shall become truly civilized.

At the conclusion of the Sermon on the Mount we read that, "The multitudes were astonished at His teaching, for He taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes" (Matt. 7:28). This Teacher was utterly different from the rabbis to whom the people had been listening all their lives, whose discourses were nothing but long strings of musty quotations from Torah and Talmud, stying that had been shewed over in many thousands of mouths until they had lost whatever flavor and vitality they had ever had. Here was a new Teacher who was His own authority, whose words were not a parrot-like repetition of what His audience already knew by heart—words with the freshness of the early morning dew of the Syrian hillsides where He stood; words with the charm of the lilies to which He pointed as He spoke; words as luminous with truth as the rising dawn across the Galilean Lake.

A book was recently written by a professor of education in a great American university entitled "Jesus, the Master Teacher." After making a critical analysis of the Gospel records the author makes the amazing statement that the untrained Carpenter of Nazareth, who lived centuries before the birth of modern science and modern pedagogy, nevertheless anticipated and practiced with consummate skill the fundamental principles of the most up-to-date educators.

Jesus was and is and always will be the Master Teacher of mankind. When He spoke, the blind eyes of men were opened and they saw deeply into the mysteries of life and death, of nature and of God. And only by sitting at His feet and listening to His voice shall we find the truth which makes men free.

KNOCKOUTS FROM THE BOWLING ALLEY

By BILL GIBSON

Well, the bowlers are as keen as ever about who shall be the winner in the last half of the season and at the present time it looks very much like the Methodist team will have the honor unless something unforseen happens.

* * *

Anyhow, a match between the Postoffice and Methodist teams for the championship of the league will be an attraction worth while.

* * *

If a woman stacks the cards cleverly a man will give her a good deal.

* * *

Anyhow, the Merchants have been stacking the cards on all their opponents lately and have been bringing home the bacon.

* * *

Joe Hinebaugh leads the league so far with individual high score for 3 games—527 pins. Certainly some score.

* * *

Jim Kerins will continue to say that luck and science won't always hang together.

* * *

Jim told me a funny one the other day. He said he went into a restaurant on his last trip to Detroit and asked for a combination salad, so they served him mayonaise dressing on the dishwasher's cauliflower ear.

* * *

* * *

Alva Gortner eontinues to come in contact with bad breaks, but why worry about bad breaks, everybody gets them and many automobiles are afflicted with them.

* * *

The good breaks will eome with the next banquet of the bowling league.

* * *

And I know everybody will enjoy himself at that particular affair, and with plenty of good eats and lots to talk about the bad breaks will never be mentioned.

The above two pieces or parcels of ground comprise all of one farm of a total of three hundred and sixty-three acres, more or less, and contains the following improvements:

A six room substantial frame dwelling; a frame and log bank barn about thirty by fifty feet in dimensions; a wagon shed; an automobile shed; two springs of never-failing water situated close to the house.

The soil is limestone soil and about one hundred acres of the same are cleared and under cultivation. There is an apple orchard of about sixty trees of an average age of 12 years.

This farm will be offered and sold as a whole. It is situated about five miles from Avilton on the Pea Ridge Road leading from Lonaconing to Avilton. None of the timber upon the above farm will be sold, it having already been disposed of under certain contracts of sale heretofore executed and the farm will be sold subject to the rights of the parties holding said contracts to remove the timber therefrom.

Green by Rebecca Clark, widow, by deed dated May 26th, 1924, and recorded in Liber E. Z. T., No. 88, folio 63, one of the Land Records of Garrett County, Maryland.

The above farm is improved by a five-room log and frame dwelling house, a small barn and other outbuildings.

The property contains a never failing spring near the house and an apple orchard of about thirty trees of an average age of twelve ycars.

MYSTERY SURROUNDING PHOTOGRAPHER IS CLEARED UP

Asserted That High School Students are Guilty of Indignities Suffered By Colonel Jeems Bell.

The mystery surrounding the discovery one day last week of Col. Bell unconscious on the floor of his office with his feet sticking out of the window was solved late this morning by Scoop, The Republican's cub reporter.

The particulars, in the order in which they occurred, were as follows: Oakland High School is preparing to issue its annual year book. Seniors are having their pictures taken at the studio of the Colonel. Kenneth Stahl is a senior. He was before the camera. Col. Bell, as a good soldier and as was the rule during the late war, sensing danger, attempted to get back of the front. Stahl, broke the camera and ignited the flashlight powder. The fumes were too many for the Colonel, hence his unconscious condition.

As afterwards explained to Scoop, the students present looked about for Col. Bell following the accident and concluded that he had gotten too far back of the front to be overtaken. Hence they spent the entire day in a vain search for him. When Col. Bell was told these matters he seemed to recall everything and is now as well as ever, barring a little nervousness due to shock.

COMPLETELY RESTORED

In order to prove his complete restoration Col. Bell and Scoop went on a hunting expedition and uncovertd a moonshine nest in a building in Oakland (owner's name withheld from publication). A complete still with all modern conveniences was taken while the operator was away on a "business" trip in West Virginia and other foreign countries.

On account of the coils and gas burners in evidence in the house, a flashlight picture was deemed inadvisable and a time exposure of two days and one night was necessary. Col. Bell stuck to his post without food and water and was near collapse on the eve of the second day. His condition may be analyzed from the foregoing picture, which shows his pallid countenance. He is still clutching the "snapper" of the camera.

* * *

A Still "Still" Still.

The foregoing picture was taken "on time." From the picture it will be seen that the still is disguised as a coffee pot. In the upper part, or "Ground Coffee", is the mash. Below in the "Filtered Coffee" section is the pure stuff ready to be drawn through the spiggot.

Scoop may decide to publish the name of the owner and his address in next week's Republican. Better subscribe and learn the inside of things in Garrett county. Only $1.50 per year; you'll never miss that amount.

The Republican's Good Friend, Mr. E. W. Kelso, who is Still a Farmer at Heart But Is On an Indefiinite Vacation in the Southwest, Feels the Urge to Again Follow the Plow—He Is Now at Tucson, Arizona,

To the Editor of The Republican.

It is rather amusing to hear eitizens of Las Cruces and farmers in the Valley of the Rio Grande River say this has been an unusually cold winter. If we of Maryland could have a similar winter we would consider such conditions extremely mild. December and January are considered the winter months in this climate. February has encroached on this claim to some extent this year. On February 16th it rained the first part of the night and the next morning there was only enough snow to slightly eover the ground and standing water froze to a thickness of a quarter of an inch with the temperature 24 above. Snow on the mountains, sixteen miles distant, remained five days.

While hiking over the valley farmers with their teams could be seen in every direction preparing ground for crops.

While viewing this wide expanse of fertile land, somehow the desire to again be a tiller of the soil bobbed up in my mind, but I realize that I am past the meridian of life and tilling of the soil will have to be performed by the younger gencration. However, I am still a farmer at heart, but I am on an indefinite vacation.

Farmers are now irrigating alfalfa, but cotton, corn and other crops will be planted in April.

Fruit trees in the Valley are still in a dormant state and no indication of swelling buds can be seen. Farmers are hoping such conditions will remain some time yet in order to be more sure of a crop.

El Paso, Texas, I am told, has a population of 125,000, with electric street car lines extending five miles to Fort Bliss, and is a modern eity in every respect.

An immense oil refinery is now under construction in El Paso, the crude oil to be piped from Western Texas oil fields to this plant.

El Paso is becoming very much of a tourist town. From a statement published in an El Paso paper I learn there have been 21,634 tourist registrations in the eity from January 1 to February 15, and the surprising part is that 1259 of the 21,634 tourists were from California.

I had a delightful visit of two months in Las Cruces with kind relatives and friends and their hospitality and many courtesies will linger with me in kind remembrance.

February 22nd, a beautiful day, upon which I took leave of El Paso for Tucson, Arizona, 312 miles distant. I left El Paso at 7:30 p. m. and the porter woke me at 7:00 a. m., saying the Pullman car had been placed on the siding at Tucson at 4:00 o'clock. When I came out of the car I was surprised to see beautiful green lawns of velvety grass and palms and a variety of trees in leaf and circular driveways with beautiful walks all around both the passenger and freight depot. The green yards are very extensive and makes a good impression on visitors and indicates progress.

Tucson is a very lively town of 37,000 inhabitants and stands 2400 feet above sea level. The streets are wide and paved with cement and oiled and the main streets of the city have white ways and present a beautiful sight in the night. There are also electric street car lines.

Tucson is the countyseat of Pima county. Old Tucson was a walled town until 1847 and the Spanish military headquarters from 1776 until 1847. Tucson is now a city of the first class with an area of seven miles, seventy and one-half miles of paved and graded streets; railroad machine shops and other works in connection with railroads employe about 3000 men. The combined yearly payroll of Tucson is over $10,000,000.

The assessed value of Tucson is $26,000,000 and that of Pima county is $73,000,000. Four banks and trust companies, eight good hotels and eight city parks, a Carnegie library, city hall, Masonic temple and many other public and semi-publie buildings, all of large size, are within the city.

I am told there are 28 churches in Tucson and many are large buildings. The First Baptist has 1000 members and the Sunday school attendance is 600.

The residents of Tucson do not hesitate at cost when they want new school buildings, as evidenced in the erection of a new $750,000 high school building. The structure is four stories high, of cream-colored brick and in it are 1615 students enrolled at the present time, with fifteen grammar schools, many of which are large in size.

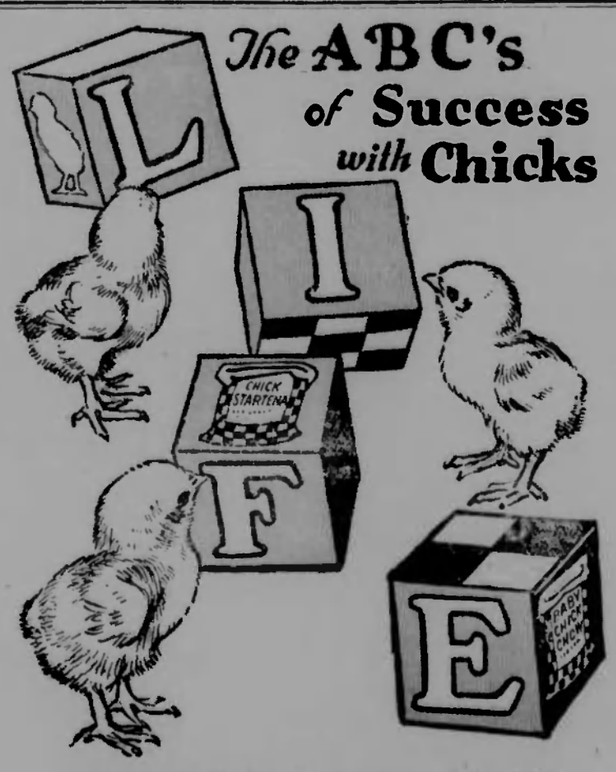
The University of Arizona, located a mile from Tucson has a campus of one hundred acres with a large number of palm, olive and pepper trees alongside the driveway. There are many buildings on the campus for different branches of education. Students come from many different states one of whom told me there were 1800 enrolled.

Nearly two miles from town 2000 cattle are being fed for the market. I visited the ranch the cattle are on. They are orrasled in different sections and are fed from troughs. In one driveway of about one eighth of a mile there were troughs on each side. All the cattle are white-faced Herfords and as they put their heads through a space to eat it made a white line appear as a streak an eighth of a mile long. The cattle will be shipped to Los Angeles in March.

In conversation with a dairyman he told me he sold milk at 17 cents a quart. He informed me cotton was their main crop and irrigated from wells 140 feet deep, the water being pumped by electric power furnished by the same company that furnishes light for Tucson. He told me one pump furnishes sufficient water to irrigate 40 acres.

There are no skyscrapers in Tucson. Five stories is the highest building in the town. The main business houses are two and three stories and chiefly of brick and stucco material.

Here in the city are many beautiful and costly residences surrounded by palms, pepper and other trees with green foliage.



There is one beautiful city park, the most gorgeous I ever looked upon, and in it are a variety of palms and other beautiful trees and shrubbery with large fountains and well-laid out walks.

Tucson is situated in a valley with mountains four miles distant—the Catalena Mountains, I am told. They have large pine timber on the east slope and much game in this government reservation. One six-foot mountain lion was killed when feasting on a deer it had pulled down. The climate of Tucson is delightful.

On the 29th at 8:20 a. m., I will leave for Phoenix, 125 miles distant.

E. W. KELSO.

Lesson for March 18

JESUS TEACHES SINCERITY

LESSON TEXT—Mark 7:1-23.

GOLDEN TEXT—Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Obeying God and Our Parents.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Honoring God and Our Parents.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Sincerity in Religion.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Denounces Formalism.

I. The Emptiness of Formal Worship (vv. 1-7).

The tendency of the human heart is to depart from the life and to choose the mere form which is calculated to express the life. The traditions and customs adopted by men for the temporary help of the spiritual life frequently are crystallized into laws and made to supersede the laws and institutions of God.

1. The charge against Christ (v. 2). This was that Christ's disciples ate bread with unwashed hands. The charge was not on the basis of physical uncleanness, but their disregard of custom which was to engage in the thorough washing of the hands before eating, as well as washing the pots nad vessels.

2. Examples of empty forms (vv. 2-4).

(1) Washing of the hands before eating (v. 3). They not only washed their hands often but diligently and intensely.

(2) Washing of cups, tables, pots and brazen vessels. The ceremonial washing applied to the vessels as well as the hands.

3. Explanation demanded by the Pharisees (v. 5). They asked Christ to explain why His disciples ignored the tradition of the elders with reference to ceremonial cleansing.

4. Christ's answer (vv. 6, 7). He declared that worship which centered in forms was as empty and meaningless as was lip service where the heart was away from God. This He calls hypocrisy, even such as foretold by Isaiah, the prophet. Men of his day made much of external observance and of religious rites, while their hearts remained unchanged.

II. Making the Word of God of None Effect (vv. 8-13).

1. How it may be done (v. 8). It was done by punctiliously observing the precepts of man, such as washing of the hands, pots, etc., while ignoring the commandments of God. This is being done by those who make much of the externalities of religion but at the same time are indifferent to the moral requirements.

2. An instance cited (vv. 9-13).

The law of God as given by Moses said, "Honor thy father and thy mother, and whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death: but ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me, he shall be free, and ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother." The law of God demands of children that they care and provide for parents in their need. According to an accepted tradition among the Jews, if a man should consecrate his goods or possessions to the Lord's service by pronouncing over them the word "Corban," which means "the gift," his goods would be thus dedicated to God, and would not be available for help to his parents. It was possible, therefore, for a man to be enjoying wealth while his parents were in destitution.

III. The Real Source of Defilement and Impurity (vv. 14-23).

1. Sin is moral and spiritual. Uncleanness before God is not of the body save as the body is directed by the soul. A man is not defiled by that which enters his mouth but by that which springs out of his soul.

2. That which springs out of the heart—the deliberate choice of the will—is the source of defilement (v.20).

3. A list of evils springing out of the heart (vv. 21, 22). The awful list is as follows:

Evil thoughts, adulteries, foralcations, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness, which all come from within. This catalogue includes every possible form of evil. Every one of them originate in the heart and when they become acts of the will and life they defile the man. It is only when temptations and solicitations lead to indulgence by the deliberate act of the will that they corrupt a man.

Children's Needs

Children have more need of models than of critics.—Joubert.

Christian Giving

Our Father has so much confidence in us that He makes no hard, arbitrary rule for Christian giving, but leaves it to the filial love and loyalty of His children to determine how much of their possessions they will offer to relieve the pains and sorrows of the world.—J. H. Jowett.

Faith in God

$565,000 SPENT ON COUNTY SCHOOLS IN MARYLAND

This Item Was for Buildings and Averaged $5.66 Per Pupil

Building expenditures for white elementary schools in the counties of Maryland averaged $5.66 a pupil in 1927, against $12.64 a pupil in 1926, the State Department of Education announced on Friday.

Of the $565,000 expended $519,000 was used for graded schools, $24,000 for one-teacher schools and $22,000 for two-teacher schools. Most of the money spent for construction went into large buildings.

900 One-Teacher Schools.

It was explained that of the 1,414 buildings in use in 1927, 900 were one-teacher schools and 242 two-teacher schools. There were ninety-four schools with one teacher for each elementary grade. Four counties have more than one hundred schools each —Garrett, 144; Frederick, 117; Washington, 109; Carroll, 105. These, it was explained, have the most one-teacher schools.

According to the report, one-teacher schools were reduced by fifty-eight in 1927. Approximately twenty-nine per cent of the teachers worked in one-teacher schools last year as compared with thirty-nine per cent in 1920, distributed among 273 fewer one-teacher schools than seven years before.

Cook For Larger Schools.

Since all evidence available points to the improvement in teaching results possible in larger schools," Albert S. Cook, State Superintendent of Education, said, "the hastening of the disappearance of one-teacher schools is probably a wise policy to encourage."

Mr. Cook pointed out that North Carolina is operating on the theory that schools should be built large enough so that each teacher can give instruction in one grade only. Maryland school officials are interested in comparing the results of tests in the schools where teachers have two or three grades to instruct with those in which the teacher has only one grade.

Smaller Institutions Reduced.

The report shows that the greatest reduction from 1926 to 1927 in the number of teachers in one-teacher schools were made in Frederick, Carroll, Garrett, Montgomery, Allegany, Caroline and St. Mary's counties.

Of these the first three had the largest number of one-teacher schools. Baltimore county, with thirty-four teachers, or ten per cent, in one-teacher schools, ranked first, and Calvert, with twenty-one teachers, or seventy-two per cent, ranked lowest in proportion of one-teacher schools.

Can Regulation be Made to Regulate —Can the Consumer of Electricity be Assured of Reasonable Rates by Regulation, or Can and Will the Electric Interests Prevent It? Is a Question Asked By Former Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania In the Following Communication.

Mr. Benj. H. Sincell,
The Republican,
Oakland, Maryland.

My dear Mr. Sincell:—

Can regulation be made to regulate —can the consumer of electricity be assured of reasonable rates by regulation, or can and will the electric interests prevent it?

That is the essential question involved in the Walsh resolution in the U. S. Senate. The same issue is at this moment before the Legislature of Massachusetts in a form that gives it a direct interest to every householder in America.

This question has been put before the Legislature by the Massachusetts Utilities Commission because of the very serious difficulties it has met in its effort to protect the public against extortion by electric utility corporations.

When the Commission reduced electric rates in the city of Worcester from seven cents per kilowatt hour to five, on the general principle that rates should be fixed on the basis of money actually and prudently invested, the company brought suit in the Federal Court in Boston. Thereupon the court, by injunction, forbade the enforcement of the Massachusetts Commission's order until the suit should be decided, which may well take many years. For all these years the consumers of Worcester will have to keep on paying seven cents instead of five cents.

The Massachusetts Commission says that it "has been constantly confronted in the fixation of rates with long involved and expensive hearings in which the electric utilities have seriously presentel the value of the property based upon the cost of reproduction, less depreciation, as a base upon which they were entitled to receive a return."

The Commission further says: "The danger of the so-called United States Supreme Court doctrine (rate fixing on the basis of present value chiefly measured by reproduction cost less depreciation) being enforced in this Commonwealth is so great that we think that we should at this time make preparations to avoid the results of such a doctrine. This doctrine promotes greed and gluttony upon the part of owners of public utilities. It asserts that the owners of the public utilities are entitled to retain and earn a profit upon excessive earnings which they may have exacted from the public. It asserts that the public has no real control over these utilities other than an ineffectual method of regulating rates, notwithstanding that the public gives them exclusive rights in the highways and confers upon them the sovereign power to take private property by eminent domain.

"Moreover it asserts that the property of the utility is increased in value by improvements in the public highways and that the owners of the utility are entitled to increased ernings by reason of these improvements and of the enhanced value upon its property resulting from the growth of the communities. It also asserts that the owners of the utility are entitled to earnings upon the reproduction value of the property less depreciation, notwithstanding the service performed by it could be performed as well, if not better, by property that would cost much less."

To meet a like situation in Pennsylvania, the Giant Power Survey Board proposed state legislation offering to the power companies a contract, to be embodied in their charters, which would bind them (as does a water power license contract under the Federal Water Power Act) to accept rate regulation on the prudent investment rate-basis. Companies which refused to make this contract were to lost certain old privileges like the right to condemn property and to be denied new charters, mergers and municipal franchise grants.

The Massachusetts Commission now recommends legislation which will offer to the power companies a like contract. If they refuse to make this contract with the State they will lose the right to take property by eminent domain and will not be allowed to issue any new stock or bonds. Furthermore, the law which makes privileges granted to companies by municipalities irrevocable, except for breach of condition, will be repealed, and they will lose their monopoly to the extent that municipalities in which they operate will be allowed to supply electric current to their inhabitants without first buying the company's plant.

Those companies which accept the contract will be allowed to issue stock dividends to their stockholders in cases where that is necessary to make the par value to all outstanding securities equal to the actual money investment. On this actual investment as a rate-base each contracting company may earn enough "to enable it to pay dividends sufficient to maintain the market value of its shares of capital stock at their par value", and no order allowing earnings to that amount shall be modified, amended or annulled as unlawful, unjust or confiscatory."

The Pennsylvania Giant Power proposals were and still are denounced by hired spokesmen of the power companies as radical and dangerous. Their adoption by the Utilities Commission of staid old Massachusetts is proof enough, if proof were needed, that they are just and conservative.

The Pennsylvania Giant Power Board and the Massachusetts Public Utlity Commission have blazed the trail for their own and their sister Commonwealths.

The principle of fixing rates on the money actually and prudently invested is obviously fair and reasonable. It can be fully applied to past investments only by States which have held security issues down to the amount of the prudent investment, as Massachusetts has done, for the inocent investor must be protected. All States may apply it to new companies and to new capital invested in old companies.

The power companies blocked the trail for Pennsylvania for 1925 and 1926 by defeating the Giant Power bills. Will they block it for Massachusetts in 1928 by defeating the Commission bill? Will the other States follow it through to the square deal and to freedom from usurpation by the Federal Courts of control over the corporate servants and creatures of the States?

This momentous issue is now before the Legislature of Massachusetts. It should be up in every Legislature and in the mind of every thoughtful citizen who loves his country and desires justice. To that end you may make such use of this letter as you please. Sincerely yours,

GIFFORD PINCHOT.

OAKLAND MERCHANTS ARE PLEASED WITH SALES DAY

Sixth Cooperative Affair Held Yesterday With Fairly Good Crowds Present and Buying

Although the day was ideal overhead, the deep snow of the past few days kept quite a large number of prospective buyers at home yesterday, the day of the sixth community sale in Oakland,who would have been present had not this state of weather conditions existed. But in spite of the bad condition of country roads a great number of people were in town and spent the day purchasing the many bargains offered in the advertisement appearing in The Republican last Thursday.

Oakland's first community sale was held on December 8, 1926, and was sponsored by the Oakland Commercial Club. Yesterday's sale was under the direction of Proctor Kildow Post, No. 71, American Legion, with I. R. Rudy, manager. Other sales will be held in the future, it is said.

Twenty-nine business and professional men participating in the sale advertised their bargains in The Republican as above stated. Business houses remained open until 9 o'clock to give those who could not take the time during the day an opportunity to do their shopping.

Those who took part in this special effort to secure business were G. A. Fraley & Sons, Coffman-Fisher Co., D. M. Dixon & Son, Miller's Meat Market, E. S. Evans' Garage, F. A. Smouse, Wade H. Hinebaugh, Gonder's Pharmacy, Dr. R. L. Kercheval, Smith's Millinery Store, Hamill's Stationery Store, L. Waingold's Garage, M. ## WEAKER SEX LOSES NERVE AFTER MAN GETS LICENSE

Two or Three Each Month Never Marry, Records Show

"Here's the marriage license I obtained the other day. She decided not to have me."

This is only one of the several letters which have been received at different intervals at the office of the clerk of the Circuit court from disappointed Romeos who have had their highest hopes dashed to the ground simply because of the changeability of a woman's mind.

On an average, there are two or three licenses issued each month which are never returned, A. G. Ross, deputy clerk, said, showing one of several reasons for not getting married.

Italians who follow the custom of a certain part of Italy look upon a marriage license as a permit, and do not think it necessary to go to a minister. Consequently, Mr. Ross pointed out, the minister never gets these licenses and cannot return them to the court house for record.

"One couple I remember came in one day with a marriage license which had been procured about a year previous and they wanted to know if it was still good. They said they had decided, after getting the license, that it would be better to wait.

"Some couples come here and desire to be wed by the Catholic priest, and unless they have the consent of the priest from their home, the request is refused. The majority of these couples give up and go back home, taking their license with them as a souvenir.

"A small percentage is caused by the changing of a woman's mind. After the license is procured and the couple is on the way to the minister, the weaker sex loses her nerve and the deal is off."

A decision like this caused the above letter to be written to the clerk recently, and proves conclusively that one is never sure of what he gets until he gets it, and then he isn't sure.

Civic Club to Elect Officers

Election of officers for the coming term will be held at the regular monthly meeting of the Civic Club on Tuesday afternoon, March 27, at 3 o'clock. The meeting will convene in the Ladies' waiting room of the Court house. Other business matters will be taken up at this time, it was stated.

PROF. T. B. SYMONS PRAISES WORK ON DAIRY PROJECT

Says Committee Has Fulfilled Its Promises—Now up to Farmers

Members of the dairy committee, Oakland Commercial Club and a few farmers heard Dr. T. B. Symons, director of the State Extension Service of the University of Maryland, congratulate them on the work they have started in bringing a milk shipping station to Garrett county at a meeting held in the Court House on Monday morning . He also said that he believed it would be of great value to the county to develop it into a dairy section. Mr. John McGill, secretary of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, also addressed the meeting.

The dairy committee has arranged for the tuberculosis testing of the dairy animals in the county to begin on April 2.

The site for the proposed milk shipping station has been selected and the building of the plant will begin April 2 provided the Chestnut Farms Dairy is assured that the supply of milk, which was promised by the committee, will be available by May 1.

The committee has, therefore, according to J. L. McGlone, county agent, carried out its promises to the farmers. "It is now up to the farmer to get ready and furnish the milk by the first of May," he said.

Many of the farmers have started to remodel their barns but there are still some who have not said they would be ready. Should they still want the new milk shipping station, Mr. McGlone advised, they should report their intentions to some member of the dairy committee so that at the next meeting to be held the latter part of this month, a report can be made to the president of the Chestnut Farms Dairy, which fact will be the determining one with reference to the establishment of the station.

The success or failure depends upon the farmer, Mr. McGlone said, so it is up to them what the outcome of the project will be.

WILL BEGIN TUBERCULIN TEST OF COUNTY CATTLE

Government Veterinarian to Arrive in Oakland April 2.

Dr. E. A. Poe, Government veterinarian, accompanied by an assistant, will be in Oakland on Monday, April 2, to begin a tuberculin test of cattle throughout the entire county.

It is said that Dr. Poe's intention is to test all the cattle in the county and it is stated that Dr. Poe said that providing the dairymen and farmers cooperate he can make Garrett county an accredited section within six weeks' time.

J. L. McGlone, County Agent, is desirous of a hearty cooperation on the part of dairymen so that the work can be completed within the limit of time set by Dr. Poe.

The work will be carried on by districts or sections, so that the tests as well as the completed work may be made without having to cover the same territory twice.

Selections For Boys' Band Concert Are Announced.

The numbers to be played at the Boys' Band concert between shows of the benefit picture, "Shanghai Bound" at the Maryland Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, have just been announced by R. R. Gilbert, director.

The numbers will include "America-Maryland, My Maryland"; march "Activity"; Estelle waltz; march, "The Great Divide"; Autumn Leaves, serenade; and march, "Do a Good Turn Daily."

A record crowd is already assured if the advance ticket sales are any criterion, Mr. Gilbert stated yesterday.

The picture to be shown will feature Richard Dix and the proceeds will go for the benefit of the Oakland Boys' Band.

Home Demonstration Agent's Schedule—March 27-31

March 27—McHenry 4-H club at 1 p. m. Dodge 4-H club at 3 p. m.

RAPID STRIDES MADE IN PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE

Miss Clawson Compiles Statistics on Work Accomplished at Newest Health Center.

Rapid strides in the advancement of public health nursing service at Kitzmiller, Bloomington, Kempton and the communities surrounding thost three towns, are shown by some statistics compiled by Miss Yolanda Clawson, public health nurse for that section of Garrett county.

Kitzmiller is the latest addition to health centers in the State and under the leadership of Miss Clawson and the local health club of the town the building was obtained and made presentable by donations from local industrial concerns about six months ago. Electric lights were installed in the building by neighbors, partitions were erected, both the inside and outside of the structure was painted and then the teacher in the home economics in the Kitzmiller high school and the girls in her classes had their turn at beautifying the interior.

The sum of $100 raised in the community; interest of the people of Kitzmiller in health activities aroused; rent for health center paid by the people of Kitzmiller for one year, 953 homes visited by the nurse; 910 school children given personal examination; health talks given in each public school and at teachers' meetings; hundreds of toothbrushes and tubes of tooth paste sold to school children at 5 cents each; twelve children (charity patients) taken to Cumberland to have their tonsils removed by Dr. Sharretts.

Eighteen new-born babies weighed and instructions given to their mothers as to diet, bathing, fresh air, etc.; "Talks to Mothers about their Babies," printed by the Bureau of Child Hygiene, Maryland State Board of Health, given to each mother; thirty nursing visits made in the homes; two pre-school and school and three tuberculosis clinics held in the health center; literature on health topics sent for and distributed; mid-wives of the community visited and instructed; value of toxin-antitoxin for prevention of diphtheria taught by motion pictures, talks and literature; five hundred pre-school and school children given toxin-antitoxin.

Arrangements made and seven adult charity patients taken to hospital for examination and treatment; contacts made with them following health officials; cooperation received from Drs. Strahn and Crittenden, of Kitzmiller; Drs. McComas and Gattens, of Oakland; Dr. Fugat, of Kempton, and Drs. Hawkins, Sharretts and Tolson, of Cumberland.

Clothing, food and medicine given to poverty-stricken families; four socials given to raise money for the public health fund; Christmas play, "Santa's Clinic," given by the people of the community, directed by Miss Clawson.

Plans for the Future.

Miss Clawson is planning for the immediate future four dental clinics which are to be held in the health center this month, the necessary funds and equipment having been secured; home care of the sick and personal hygiene to be taught to the third and fourth year high school girls of Kitzmiller during the month of April; health day for adults of Kitzmiller and vicinity April 16, with prominent physicians as the speakers; May Day Health Day for the children of Kitzmiller.

The general plans for the next six months are for more and better health activities, according to the report.

More Money For Boys' Band Realized From Food Sale

Approximately $27 will be realized from the food sale conducted by the Auxiliary of the Boys' Band, according to R. R. Gilbert, director. The food sale wns held in the office of the Cumberland and Allegheny Gas company on Saturday and pies, cakes, candy and other home cooked food was on sale.

The money realized will go toward the purchase of the bass horn. "No voluntary donations have come in this week," Mr. Gilbert said. "I hope that these donations have not stopped altogether, because a small sum from various sources can do much good in bringing the total to the amount desired. I am sure we will have one next week," he concluded.

FOREST WARDENS MEET FOR SESSION OF TWO DAYS

State Department Heads Made Addresses at Assembly Held in the City Building, Oakland

Addresses on many phases of forest work hy officials of the Maryland State Forestry Depart...nt. a talk by State's Attorney Julius C. Renninger and R. S. Browning, District Game Warden, were heard by an enthusiastic group of forest wardens of Garrett county at a two-day meeting held in the Oakland City Hall on Monday and Tuesday. Twenty-three wardens were present despite the heavy snow that all but blocked the highways of the county.

The Forestry Department was represented by F. W. Besley, State Forester; Karl E. Pfeiffer, assistant State Forester; J. R. Curry, assistant forester in charge of forest protection work; C. Cyril Klein, district forester, and A. L. Sines, district forest warden, and the United States Forest Service was represented by G. T. Beckus, forest inspector.

The conference was addressed by each of the above-named men on different phases of the forest work, and especial interest was shown in the discussion of the forest fire problem and the ways of prevention. The indifference shown and early efforts put forth to arouse interest in fire prevention was brought out by these men, and also how the conditions had now changed.

Mr. Renninger addressed the conference on the subject of law enforcement, and Mr. Browning on the need of keeping fires out of the forest if game is desired.

The wardens were shown two reels of motion pictures on Monday night through the courtesy of the Maryland Theatre management.

Questionaires on forest laws were given out and each paper was properly graded. D. N. Green received first prize, which was a fountain pen, and Dewey Sharpless received an eversharp pencil as second prize. Mike Tasker, C. H. Knox and Frank Hoye, all tied for honorable mention. A number of the men present had to plow through deep snow drifts in order to get to the meting.

Those present at the gathering were George Kerins, Frank Hoye, W. H. Barnard, E. A. Barnard, Silas Sines, M. G. Mellott, L. C. Bray, E. F. McClintock, E. C. Cuppett, Earl F. Teets, J. H. Sines, S. L. Bowman, C. H. Knox, Wm. Railey, W. H. Ferguson, Mike Tasker, J .G. Friend, T. R. Harvey, Raymond Sines, F. M. Green, D. N. ## LATE VISIT OF SNOW TIES TRAFFIC UP COMPLETELY

Ground Is Covered With 22 Inches and Roads Blocked

King Winter paid Garrett county a belated visit on Saturday, the last day upon which the proverbial groundhog would have had any effect, according to tradition, when the heaviest snowfall of the entire season overspread the ground to a depth of twenty-two inches, disrupting traffic and blocking the highways for several hours. Yes, yesterday, March 21, was the official beginning of spring.

The snow started to fall Friday morning and continued without much interruption until Monday about midnight.

The Oakland-Keyser Ridge road and the Oakland-Thomas road were kept fairly free of drifts, but the Oakland-Morgantown road was blocked for more than a day at a point just west of Terra Alta.

Bus service and other traffic was delayed to a considerable extent, but Baltimore and Ohio trains ran on schedule time. Telephone and electric service continued undisturbed.

MARYLAND DAY WILL BE OBSERVED SUNDAY, 25TH

Rev. W. B. Brock Will Address Audience at Maryland—Musical Numbers Arranged

A program appropriate to Maryland Day is being completed by a committee from the local post, American Legion, and includes an address by Rev. Walter B. Brock, pastor of Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church, to be made at the Maryland Theatre on Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Maryland Day, March 25, which commemorates the landing of Lord Baltimore's colony at St. Mary's in 1634, has been celebrated annually for a number of years, and is under the auspices of the Proctor Kildow Post, American Legion. Delbert Davis is chairman of the committee in charge of the program.

Besides Reverend Brock's address, several instrumental and vocal numbers will be included in the program which will be free to the public. There will be no admission charges and no offering will be taken, it was stated. Any expenses that might be incurred will be paid by the organization in charge of the affair.

The public is most cordially invited to attend the celebration on Sunday which will commence at 2:30 o'clock and last for approximately one hour.

An Abundance of Snow Ushers In Official Spring.

With a covering of snow to a depth of approximately two feet, but with a clear sky, the spring of 1928 officially arrived in Garrett county yesterday and was heralded by Oakland with a community sale.

Cardinals and robins were the forerunners of spring when they made their appearance more than a week ago and as they sang in the tree-tops and buds were swelling told that it wouldn't be long until the whole country would burst into green.

Spring is in the air, notwithstanding the fact that all the world is apparently covered with snow. According to a story appearing in the Baltimore Sun yesterday, "mothballs and baseballs, soft breezes and spring sneezes, fresh fruit and fresher flappers, longing and languor, callow love's longing and cod-liver oil have been officially with us since 3:45 p. m. Tuesday." There was just one extremely important thing left out of the Sun's article—marbles, for many think there is nothing which proves the closeness of spring more than a group of grammar school children "hunchin' " in the cinders and carrying with them a sack full of "commies" and "shooters" around with them.

It is now time to begin that beautiful ballad entitled, "Spring is Here, Spring Has 'Came'."

Maryland Tuberculosis Association Clinic.

A clinic for diseases of the chest will be conducted in Oakland, March 28, at the nurse's office at the Court house at 10:30 a. m.

Individuals complaining of any of the following: cough, expectoration of blood (spitting), tired feeling, loss of weight and appetite, indigestion, hoarseness, etc., should see their family physician and obtain permission to attend clinic at the place announced above.

WOMAN IS UNSUCCESSFUL IN ATTEMPT AT SUICIDE

Former Garrett County Resident Took Poison on New York-Washington Train Yesterday

Mrs. Mary True, daughter of Frank McRobie, of near Altamont, is in a serious condition in a Washington (D. C.) hospital following an unsuccessful attempt to commit suicide yesterday morning while a passenger on a railway train from New York to Washington, according to information telephoned The Republican at nine o'clock this morning by the Washington Times.

Mrs. True, who is said to be a nurse, and apparently about thirty-five years of age, brown bobbed hair, stepped on a Baltimore and Ohio train in New York yesterday morning, and at a point somewhere between the two cities it is said she administered to herself some kind of poison, presumably chloroform. The train arriving at Washington, railway attaches discovered the inert form of the woman and calling the Union Station physician, who after an examination, pronounced her dead, giving as his opinion that she had been dead two or three hours. The apparent suicide's remains were sent from the station to the city morgue where attaches made a second examination of the body when it was discovered that a spark of life remained in the body.

Calling the city fire department rescue squad they assisted after several hours of strenuous work in restoring the woman to a semi-conscious state. She was then removed to a hospital where she is lying in a serious condition.

It is said that Mrs. True had attempted to destroy all means of identification but a letter or card which she had overlooked was found among her possession which led to her becoming known to the authorities.

Mrs. True is a widow, her husband having been killed in 1918 in a mine accident at Kempton. Prior to going to New York she taught school in this county.

Her father, Frank McRobie, is a veteran of the Civil War and resides on his farm near Altamont.

Va., has been secured to deliver the address at the union palm Sunday evening service, which will be held in St. Paul's M. E. church beginning at 7:30 o'clock. No other church service will be held that evening.

Dr. Armstrong has been professor of English at the University for a number of years and has a thorough knowledge of the bible and of religion. He teaches all classes in both the Old and New Testament work and has written several books on how to understand the word of Christ and His followers. He is an outstanding scholar and a very pleasing speaker.

Holy Week Services.

Noon half-hour Holy Week services will be held in Garrett Memorial Presbyterian church beginning Monday of Holy Week and including Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. These four services will be addressed by outstanding laymen.

Good Friday services will be held in the Episcopal church and will last for a period of three hours, commemorating the three hours' the Master hung upon the cross.

The merchants and other business men of Oakland are asked to cooperate in these services by closing their stores and offices, thereby giving all an opportunity to attend.

Lesson for March 25

REVIEW—JESUS PROCLAIMS THE KINGDOM OF GOD

GOLDEN TEXT—And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom, and healing their sickness and every disease.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Stories About Jesus.

JUNIOR TOPIC — Mark's Stories About Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Jesus Began His Work.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Early Ministry of Jesus.

The method of review must always be determined by the genius of the teacher, the grade of the school, and the aptitude of the pupil. For the senior and adult classes perhaps the most profitable method will be to summarize the facts of each lesson and to study the main teaching thereof. Since the great personality around which all the facts and teachings of the quarter gather is Jesus Christ, it ought not to be difficult to plan a review. Whatever plan is used, the teacher should have the matter thought out and assignment made to the different scholars a week ahead of time. The following suggestions are made:

Lesson for January 1. John the Baptist came in fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy announcing the advent of the Messiah. The leading lesson is that Jesus is the Messiah, the Son of God, as witnessed by John the Baptist and the Voice from the open heavens.

Lesson for January 8. Jesus taught with authority and demonstrated it by conquering demons, healing a fever, and cleansing a leper. Jesus Christ is able to save unto the uttermost, to deliver from all kinds of sickness and satanic powers.

Lesson for January 15. Jesus freely gave Himself to the task of healing the diseases of the people and forgiving their sins, and the leading lesson is that Jesus has not only power to heal the diseases of the body but to forgive sin, which is the cause of disease.

Lesson for January 22. Jesus lived His life in conformity with God's law. Conflict with the Jews over the matter of Christ's disregard of their laws of fasting and the Sabbath was due either to their failure to understand God's law or to its perversion. Human welfare can be realized only through conformity to God's law.

Lesson for January 29. With the increase of the fame of Jesus came increase of opposition. In spite of the opposition by His enemies He continued His mighty works in casting out demons and ministering to those in need.

Lesson for February 5. Jesus was misunderstood by His friends, His family and fellow townsmen, and violently opposed by the scribes and Pharisees. A spiritual nature is necessary in order to understand Christ.

Lesson for February 12. Jesus showed Himself the master teacher in picturing truth concerning His kingdom so as to conceal the truth from those who were not in sympathy with Him and by interpretation to be understood by His disciples.

Lesson for February 19. Jesus' deity was manifested in calming the storm-tossed sea and in healing the demoniac. Because of what Jesus is we should confide in Him.

Lesson for February 26. Jesus raised from the dead Jairus' daughter and healed the woman who had been afflicted for twelve years. Only a divine being could raise the dead.

Lesson for March 4. Jesus called twelve men and sent them forth to preach the gospel of the kingdom. Those sent forth were furnished with power to heal diseases.

Lesson for March 11. Christ had compassion upon the multitudes and created food to supply their hunger. Our small gifts and possessions, when placed at the Lord's disposal, are sufficient for any need.

Lesson for March 18. Christ denounced the empty forms and traditions of the Pharisees and showed that defilement can only come from the heart.

Eternal Thoughts

The thoughts of God are eternal thoughts. They are independent of time, independent of worlds. You set your life today into the doing of the will of God. After you have set your life into that life, it need never be changed. Let change come, let death come, we pass on still doing God's business for ever and for ever.—Alexander MacKenzie.

The Lord's Aid

I tried to build without the Lord, and lo! a tumbled pile of bricks upon the ground! I turned, and built with the Lord, and lo! the walls rise fair and firm, and the sky is their roof, and eternity is their foundation.—Amos R. Wells.

Finding the Sunny Side

He who climbs above the cares of this world and turns his face to his God has found the sunny side of life.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Mr. E. W. Kelso, Well-Known Garrett Countian, In the Southwest, Visits Phoenix, Arizona, and There Meets Harry McComas, Former Oakland Resident, Who Is There for the Benefit of His Health.

To the Editor of The Republican.

It may be of interest to some of the readers of The Republican to read a brief account of what I observed on my trip from Tucson to Phonix, 125 miles distant.

The valley on the route which I took is several miles wide with mountains on either side and with no indication of running water.

Traveling many miles through land covered with both mesquite bush and broad-leaved cactus on each side of the railroad, did not appeal to an unaccustomed observer. But further on a nucleus of a dairy section with many cows grazing on green alfalfa irrigated by wells with electric power and with neat bungalows for the residents and large flocks of White Leghorn hens indicated contentment and prosperity.

But soon the train sped from this oasis and miles of desert land are seen, but like the darkest hour before the day, the train enters a large cattle ranch with many acres in alfalfa, all irrigated as in the dairy section above described.

On this route I saw what is called giant cactus forests and some had the appearance of being fifteen feet high. This forest covered many acres.

When within about two miles of Phoneix I saw evidence of the great benefit of the irrigation system from Roosevelt dam; of many acres in alfalfa with many cows grazing and other cattle contented. I noted large flocks of poultry also and many acres in a variety of vegetables, an indication of prosperity.

The train arrived on time in the city of Phoenix. It is the capital of Arizona and is a thrifty city of about 50,000 people at an altitude of 1109 feet. I am told there are thousands of tourists in the city having been lured here on account of the delightful winter climate. No snow, slush or mud to contend with. I am told that 28 above zero is the maximum of cold.

In conversation with an elderly man from Indiana he stated that he had spent two winters in Los Angeles and eight winters in Phoenix and experienced only one day of disagreeable weather when a partially foggy period was on. In his experience he said the climate of Phoenix was uncqualled.

There are many hotels and rooming houses and splendid restaurants and cafeterias, and they furnish plenty to eat at a reasonable price. Roosevelt Hotel is partly finished and will cost when completed $1,600,000 and will rise to fifteen stories. Other hotels are adding three stories and many apartment houses are being erected. Biltmore Hotel is to be built several miles from Phoenix and will cost in the neighborhood of $2,000,000.

The residents of Phoenix say this is not a temporary boom but claim it to be a legitimate growth. The city has four banks and some other financial and trust agencies.

Two daily newspapers are published in Phoenix and the city has an electric car system with five cent fare. The streets and avenues are wide and hundreds of mercantile establishments of a great variety line the streets with immense supplies of goods for all needs.

I am told there are forty churches in Phoenix and I have seen many of them. They are all of large size. The new Presbyterian church, dedicated February 25, cost $450,000. There are many large school buildings also. The high school chapel has a seating capacity of 1000. Christian influence and education stand out as two great benefactors as a means of civilization and good citizenship.

There are many palms in the city and the appropriate name is the City of Palms. I am writing this letter seated beneath a large palm on the capitol grounds. This park covers two city blocks and contains the most beautiful variety of semi-tropical trees I have ever seen. A man said to me that he had visited many capitol parks and claimed this the most beautiful of any other. The cactus garden here is very interesting when one notes the great variety of this plant. The giant cactus here is twenty feet high and about fifteen feet in diameter half way up its height.

About three city blocks east of the capitol building is located the Carnegie library. It is of large size located on a city block and the grounds surrounding it are a close second for beauty when compared with the park at the capitol.

Here in Phoenix I met Dr. and Mrs. McComas and their son Harry and his wife. The doctor and his son took me many miles sightseeing over the country and I appreciate the favor fully. Doctor McComas returned to Phoenix from a ten days' trip to the Pacific coast where he went to compare the climate with that of this section. He stated that according to his observation the climate here is far superior to that of the Coast, and as evidence of his faith in this section he has bought three valuable town lots in a sub-division near the city.

Unexpectedly I met Mr. Dye in the Y. M. C. A. building. He was a former summer resident of Mountain Lake Park and has resided in Phonix for nine years. He drove me many miles over the country, taking me through the orange groves. His son owns a 14-acre grove six miles from Phoenix. I appreciate his kindness in showing me these favors.

I am told there are 2000 acres in bearing orange groves and that there are 500 acres planted each succeeding season. Nearer the mountain trees are planted that are more impervious to frost.

The Salt River Valley is 12 miles wide and a variety of fruits are grown, but apples are not a success.

Alfalfa and the dairy and poultry business are very profitable lines in the valley. Cotton is a valuable crop, and large acreages are planted. The Salt River Valley is a very beautiful spot and farmers are well housed in nice bungalows.

Roosevelt Dam is located about 80 miles from Phoenix, on the Apache Trail. The driveway across the crest of the dam is 1125 feet long and 16 feet wide. The height of the dam from the bed of the river is 284 feet. The area of the reservoir is 16,320 acres and its waters irrigate 230,000 acres in the Salt River Valley. The water it impounds forms a lake 30 miles long and 4 miles wide at the widest point.

There are many acres in the valley that are owned by the Government and this land is rented to cattlemen for grazing sheep and cattle. The sheep are driven to the mountains from the valley after three months with the farmers who had suitable pasture who rented the lands at a very good price.

I was surprised to hear of a large settlement of Mormons about fifteen miles southeast of Phoenix at a small town called Mesa. Here they built a temple costing $2,000,000, including the ground. Harry McComas took me in his car to the temple. It is not a very imposing building. I am told it has been completed for about a year. Visitors were allowed to inspect it inside and it is stated that it is very handsome, but after the Mormons had service in the temple none but members of the sect were allowed to enter the building. I am told the Mormons are industrious and as a whole are good neighbors.

The Indian school is located five miles from Phoenix and is reached by electric cars at a fare of five cents. The town reaches practicall all the way to this school, numerous sub-divisions being opened and built upon. On this line is also located the hospital in connection with the school. The several school buildings are located in 160 acres and palms and other beautiful trees are growing on the green campus with benches here and there and many student girls of the school enjoying the climate. These Indian maids have short bobbed hair and wenr short skirts, the same as the white girls and are also given to the use of the lip-stick and beauty powder so much in evidence among the girls and women of our race.

An Indian girl, employed in the office of the school as a stenographer, is bright, active, intelligent and was anxious to give me all the information she could.

There are 300,000 Indians in the United States, and Arizona has 42,000 of this number. In all there are 217 tribes and bands.

The total enrollment in the school is 979, and the average attendance is 916. The school is supported entirely by Federal appropriations made annually totalling $240,000 and is under Federal control. The school term is nine months. The boys are taught farming, engineering and all other trades fitting into a busy life. The girls are taught cooking, sewing and many other things to become a good housekeeper. Pupils are all weighed monthly and those who have lost in weight are given a special examination at stated periods.

I have omitted writing many things of interest and I have only written about half of what I had in mind to write.

E. W. KELSO.

COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN.

J. L. M'GLONE,
Resident County Agent,
Office, Court House.

Mixture for Pasture Land is Recommended

Mr. Geary Eppley, University of Maryland Agronomist Specialist, recommends the following mixture for pasture on fertile land in Garrett county:

Kentucky blue-grass, 8 pounds; Timothy, 8 pounds; Alsike, 2 pounds; White Dutch Clover, 2 pounds.

He also snys the timothy might be entirely or in part replaced with English rye-grass. The rye-grass will give as good results as the timothy and will probably establish itself more quickly. The amount of Kentucky blue-grass and clover may be increased several pounds and will give a better stand of grass but most farmers do not wish to invest very much money in seed. If the pasture is on dekolb shale loam, replace the blue-grass entirely with orchard grass and red-top as our experiments in Allegany county have shown that the blue-grass will not grow on dekolb shale loam. If the pasture is on the type of soil where the acidity and drainage is questionable it would be advisable to increase the total seeding to 25 pounds and add 6 pounds of orchard grass, 4 pounds of red-top and cut the Kentucky blue-grass to 4 pounds.

Where you follow crop rotation on good productive land and you apply the proper kind of fertilizer corn does not need much fertilizer. Where the above conditions exist 200 to 300 pounds of 16 per cent acid phosphate applied has given good results.

When no crop rotation has been followed, the land is thin and no legumes grown for several years, it is always best to use a complete fertilizer.

The Republicnn columns are for the service of its readers. Use them.

AS A BABY IN TWENTIES STATE SENATOR CAUGHT THIS ONE

THE CHAIRMAN of the House District Committee frequently is called the "Mayor of Washington" and that's a title Representative Frederick Nicholas Zihlman ("Fred" to some and "Nick" to others) often hears applied to him. Born in Pennsylvania in 1879, he removed to Cumberland, Md., with his parents when he was 3 years old. At 11 he was working in a glass factory and he stuck to that work for many years, becoming prominent in trade union councils and serving one term as president of the Maryland State Federation of Labor. He quit the glass trade to enter real estate work in Cumberland in 1912. Previously he had been elected State senator from Allegany county and first came to Congress in 1917. He was defeated for one term but returned the next time and has been in the lower house since. He has two hobbies—fishing and work. He says the main hobby now is District bills.

L. HAROLD BOUCHER.

The very sudden death at 12:15 o'clock Saturday night of L. Harold Boucher, the second son of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Boucher, of near Grantsville, came as a shock to his many friends in the Grantsville community. Mr. Boucher had been ill for the past nine months with a disease which baffled the skill of medical men. He returned to his home on Friday from Jefferson Hospital, Philadelphia, where he had undergone treatment for the past four months. He is survived by his wife, who is the daughter of Mrs. Eva Bevans Beachy and the late Edward Bevans; his parents, two sisters, Miss Almira Boucher, of Philadelphia, and Miss Lucretia Boucher, of Cumberland; two brothers, John, a student at St. John's College, Annapolis, and Gordon, at home. Mr. Boucher was employed nearly four years by the Motor Service Company of Grantsville prior to his illness. He was a member of the Reformed church. ## GOOD FOR NOTHING—

Who has not heard it said of some men in a community that they were so good they were good for nothing? They never did anything wrong, they minded their own business, kept out of debt, and broke no laws; they never did anything unless they were certain that it had been done before by other people, they never started something for fear it wouldn't be considered right, but always waited for someone else to begin. And yet, ten to one, he poses as a good citizen.

But he is good for nothing because he lives to himself, by himself, and for himself exclusively. When he is asked, directly or indirectly, to help put across a community movement and give a boost, he never responds. When calamity has befallen people in certain localities and charity is needed, he never donates. When money is needed for a public enterprise such as the Boys' Band, etc., he is never on the list. When he sees some neighbor stuck in the mud (more specifically a snow drift at this time) he detours to avoid him.

If all mankind was fashioned from these "good" citizens, there would be no churches, no hospitals for the sick, no institutions for the unfortunate, no progress whatever. Everybody would be just good for nothing.

POTENTIAL BOOSTERS—

More than 1,000,000 people hear about Oakland each year through one source alone, and the source of the information is very uncomplimentary in its remarks. The worst of it is the source of the information is only being truthful about a situation here that runs back many years.

To begin with Maryland has a marriage law that is somewhat more lenient than its neighboring states, and Oakland as a part of Maryland is rather close the border lines between West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Last year there were 1,300 couples issued licenses at the office of the Clerk of the Circuit court, a number far beyond an average town of 2,000 inhabitants. It is safe to say that the 1,300 couples represented at least 700 towns in Ohio, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Virginia and a few scattered states. These 700 towns contain over one million and a half of people.

From this point of view, think of the chance that these young married couples have of either describing Oakland as a beautiful city on top of the Alleghenies where courtesy and good treatment go along with the wondrous mountain air and pure water, or as an ugly little town where one charges strangers the maximum and treats visitors in the rudest manner possible.

There has been a lot of talk about advertising Oakland to the rest of the world. Well, Oakland is being advertised but it is an undesirable kind of advertising, for nine-tenths of the couples who come here to be wed are "stripped" of all their spare cash during their short stay, and it is no secret that once a fellow is "beat" he has no desire to return to the same place for a further trimming. And he doesn't mind telling where he got trimmed, either.

During this advertising and boosting campaign for Oakland, it might be well to investigate this evil and find some means of cure.

BECOMES A HINDU.

Miss Nancy Ann Miller renounces Christianity and becomes a Hindu. The change includes no more and no less than what takes place when a prominent Hindu girl adopts Christianity. We are not used to it, however, and that makes all the difference in the world.

To us the ceremonies of Hinduism seem meaningless. We sense no spirituality in the sacrifice of rice balls one has cooked, in the worship of the sacred fire, in the mark on the brow, in the writing of one's name with a diamond ring on a golden plate. What is worse, we do not understand or appreciate why Hindus feel the same way toward the ceremonies of our religion and our beliefs in the ruling power of a Supreme Being over the destinies of mankind and of nations.

It is just another illustration of that weakness common to all men which Robert Burns cried out against when he said, "Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us to see oursel's as ithers see us!"

In this particular case love obscures religion. Wrong though it may be, one cannot help feeling that it was a Hindu, rather than Hinduism, who moved the young lady to change her faith.

Even so, the incident has a thousand parallels.

When it comes to influence with the majority of those under 30, and some who will never see 30, or even 40 or 50 again, Cupid has a way with him that must make other gods envious.

Nor does this look so strange when we remember that love is the oldest religion in the world; that it has not only remained to see a hundred religions come and go but that it was here before any of them.

CASEYS EVEN ACCOUNTS WITH OAKLAND A. A. 51-22

Cumberland Team Defeats Local Team on K. of C. Court by Lop-Sided Score Friday

The Knights of Columbus, city league basketball champions of Cumberland, defeated the Oakland Collegians by a lop-sided score on the K. of C. hall court last Friday, 61-22, enabling the Caseys to even accounts for a recent setback suffered at the hands of the Oakland team in Oakland, when the score was 27-24.

McComas and Bolden were way off form and couldn't seem to get going at the usual speed. Killen played a good all-round game and caged four field goals, to lead the Oakland scorers. The Caseys scored 21 field goals, leading 8-0 at the end of the first quarter, and 18-8 at half time.

Following the defeat the Collegians issued a challenge to the Cumberland champions for a "rubber" game on a neutral court and should the Knights defeat the Baltimore Pilgrims a second time, the challenge will be repeated with more force, according to the manager of the local team. "The Caseys cannot claim the State championship unless they defeat Oakland on a neutral court," he said.

Beat Grafton 40-37.

Oakland won a second time from the Hazel-Atlas quint from Grafton at Naylor's Hall on Thursday evening, 40-37. Killen led the attack for Oakland with seven field goals while Robinson was high point man for Grafton with six two-pointers.

Oakland had won from Grafton the week previous, 35-28, and was looking for an easy time of it, but the visitors led at half time 22-19, raised their lead to 26-19, but here the home team began to pick up. They soon ran up a comfortable lead, only to have the Grafton team to again become dangerous. The score stood 38-37 and as the whistle blew for the end of the fray Bolden was fouled as he attempted to shoot. He made both free tries and the game closed 40-37 in favor of Oakland.

The lineup of the Oakland-Casey game at Cumberland follows:

| Oakland—22 | | Caseys—51 |
|---|---|---|
| Killen | F | May |
| McComas | F | Keegan |
| Bolden | C | Minke |
| Nally | G | Dorsey |
| Hanst | G | Neubiser |

Substitute—Caseys, McMullen. Field goals, May, 4; Keegan, 5; Minke, 2; Dorsey, 6; Neubiser, 2; McMullen, 2. Killen, 4; McComas, 3; Hanst, 2. Fouls, May, 3-4; Keegan, 2-4; Minke, 0-2; Neubiser, 2-3; McMullen, 2-4; Killen, 0-3; McComas, 2-2; Nally, 1-4; Hanst, 1-1. Referee, Law.

BITTINGER.

Winter, with a final gesture, tossed a blanket of snow over this little, as the week closed.

The snow lies twenty inches or more deep upon the ground. The sportive winds of March, joining in the frolic, blew the fleecy flakes together in huge drifts, which now block every road in the neighborhood.

All church services in this neighborhood were abandoned last Sunday on account of the blizzard, which continued throughout the day.

Truant officer, J. L. Fitzwater, of Oakland, accompanied by Miss King, county Health Nurse, and Mr. Henry Meyers, were pleasant business callers in this village on Friday afternoon of last week.

Simon Brenneman did some much needed repair work on the Casselman school building, last Saturday afternoon.

Cecil Bittinger and his sister, Miss Mildred, of Hagerstown, Md., spent last week with relatives here. Miss Bittinger has been appointed teacher of the Casselman school, O. L. Brenneman, the former instructor, having resigned.

R. L. Emory is spending this week at his home here after having completed his studies at The Catherman Business school, in Cumberland.

GOLDSBOROUGH FILES FOR SEAT IN THE U. S. SENATE

Former Governor Is Apparently Backed By All Factions in the State G. O. P.

His action backed apparently by the entire Republican party in the State, Phillips Lee Goldsborough, former Governor, now president of the National Union Bank, on Friday filed a certificate of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate.

The certificate and the filing fee of $270 were taken to Annapolis in the afternoon by Mr. Goldsborough's son, Brice W. Goldsborough, and given to Murray G. Hooper, a clerk in the office of the Secretary of State, just after five o'clock. Mr. Hooper, who had been notified previously, kept the office open after the regular closing time to receive the certificate.

Backed by Party Leaders.

Mr. Goldsborough is supported in his candidacy by all the recognized party leaders. O. E. Weller, former United States Senator, and Galen L. Tait, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, each issued a statement that he would heartily support Mr. Goldsborough and Roland R. Marchant, city party leader, and W. Bladen Lowndes, members of the opposing faction, each announced that he would do likewise.

William P. Jackson, Republican National Committeeman and a candidate to succeed himself in that position, could not be reached last night, but it is understood he favors Mr. Goldsborough. Mayor Broening and party leaders in Southern and Western Maryland also are expected to support him.

Speculation As To Weller.

What effect Mr. Goldsborough's filing will have on the reported intention of Mr. Weller to become a candidate for the National Committeemanship could not be ascertained. It was thought at first that Mr. Weller would become a candidate for the Senate, but he announced two weeks ago that he would not and since that time he has declined to say what course he would adopt in connection with the committee post.

Mr. Weller's statement in connection with Mr. Goldsborough's candidacy is as follows:

"I am pleased that Governor Goldsborough has decided to accept the general support tendered him for the Senatorial nomination. He will make a brilliant campaign, and, as Senator, will be a credit to the State. I and my friends will energetically and loyally support his candidacy."

Tait Makes Statement.

The statement was given out by Mr. Tait, who obtained it from Mr. Weller after it became known that Mr. Goldsborough had filed. Mr. Tait's own statement was as follows:

"As Republican chairman, it has been my aim to avoid a State-wide primary and to aid in uniting Republicans behind strong candidates for both United States Senator and President.

"I am delighted that Governor Goldsborough has yielded to those who urged his candidacy and has promptly filed his papers. I believe all Republicans will heartily accept his candidacy. He will have my earnest support personally and as State chairman.

"With the party united and no primary fight, we should carry Maryland for two such candidates as Herbert Hoover for president and Governor Goldsborough for Senator.

Mr. Lowndes, at his home, said:

"I am pleased that Goldsborough has decided to run, and I believe he will be elected."

Predicts His Election.

Mr. Marchant, who was one of the first to urge Mr. Goldsborough's candidacy and probably the first to be informed that the former Governor intended to file, said:

"I am more than glad that Governor Goldsborough has decided to become a candidate. He will have the heartiest support from both my friends and myself, and I am certain that his candidacy will result in the election of a Republican Senator from Maryland.

"I do not know of any party man in the State who will oppose him, and I know personally that most of the leaders are heartily in favor of him as their candidate."

For more than two months Baltimore leaders of the party have been urging Mr. Goldsborough to run. He declined at first for business reasons, and later said he would take the matter under consideration.

It was not until about noon Thursday that he decided definitely to become a candidate. C. I. T. Gould, former president of the Board of Police Examiners, went immediately to Annapolis and obtained application blanks.

Born In Princess Anne.

The son of M. Worthington and Nettie M. Goldsborough, the former Governor was born August 6, 1865, in Princess Anne. He received his education in public and private schools and his first employment was as a clerk in the United States Navy.

He was admitted to the Maryland bar and began the practice of law in 1886. Five years later he was elected State's Attorney for Dorchester county, and at the end of a four-year term was reelected.

In 1897 Mr. Goldsborough was elected State Comptroller. Two years later he was defeated for reelection.

He was chairman of the Republican State Central Committee of Maryland from 1900 to 1904. In 1902 he was appointed Collector of Internal Revenue for the district of Maryland and was reappointed in 1906 and again in 1910.

Elected Governor In 1911.

Mr. Goldsborough was elected Governor in 1911. Succeeding Gov. Austen L. Crothers, Democrat, he was inaugurated January 11, 1912. Emerson C. Harrington, Democrat, succeeded him in office.

Since his term as Governor, Mr. Goldsborough has interested himself in politics, but never has been an avowed candidate for an elective office. In 1926 he was mentioned as a possible candidate for reelection as Governor, but his candidacy never materialized.

Stanton and Stemple played the best for Oakland and Whittaker played best for Terra Alta. Terra Alta made it very hard for Oakland to win because of their good guard work, but it seemed impossible for them to make many baskets.

KNOCKOUTS FROM THE BOWLING ALLEY

By BILL GIBSON

Just as I expected, the Methodists have won the honors in the last half of the season in the bowling league, and now the match between the Postoffice and the Methodists is a certainty and will take place on the Recreation alleys Monday evening, March 26, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

* * *

The play-off will consist of five games and the team having the greatest number of pins will be declared the champions of the league for the season of 1927-1928.

* * *

Reeves Blandford said that if he ever marries the woman will have to be able to play ragtime on the washboard.

* * *

And here's a secret. You can believe me the favorite fruit was not an apple in the Garden of Eden, it was just a green pair.

* * *

And ever since a certnin bowler swallowed his false teeth he has been complaining of gnawing pains in his stomach.

* * *

Ernest Gortner is acquainted with a young lady who loves nature so he gave her the air. There's a ripple in that.

* * *

It has only happened one time this season—I mean when the Postoffice team lost all three games in one match—and that lucky Rotary team had the pleasure of winning all three games.

* * *

It might look as though the Rotary team had been laying down all season, but such is not the case.

They always play to win.

* * *

And now the Merchants team has extended a challenge to any team in the league for a series of games to let them know that they have built up the strongest team in the organization after a poor start.

* * *

Some team might take them on.

* * *

But the time still lingers after the song is ended.

THE GOOD PHYSICIAN.

Matthew 11:5—The blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have good tidings preached to them.

Almost all the so-called miracles recorded in the Gospels are cases of healing. The presence of these miraculous stories has proved to be a stumbling-block to the faith of some people. A miracle, they say, is an event contrary to the laws of nature, but science teaches us that all things happen in obedience to law. Therefore, either science is wrong or the Gospel is wrong.

Now, a little further reflection will show that this is obviously a fictitious dilemma, resting upon n misunderstanding. We forget that the definition of a miracle as a superhuman event contrary to natural law is a purely modern idea. Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, when they wrote the Gospel records, many centuries before the birth of modern science, did not even know that there was such a thing as a law of nature. To them a miracle was simply what the word "miracle"really means—something to wonder at, something wonderful.

I fail to see why any reasonable person should be troubled by the Biblical statements that Jesus did many wonderful things. We all admit that He was a wonderful man; why should not His works also be wonderful?

When we study the Man of Nazareth, we find Him to be, contrary to the libels that have been so frequently circulated in Sunday school, not an effeminate weakling, "meek and mild," but a man of towering strength and sublime courage, before the scorching flame of whose eyes the bravado of angry mobs wilted away, before the subtle logic of whose mind the keenest wits of the nation were routed in confusion. This man, the touch of whose hand was so electric that men said that "power came from Him," this dynamic personality who has stirred the world's heart to its depths and inspired fallen women and broken men with unconquerable ambitions—why should it be hard to believe that so wonderful a person should have performed wonderful deeds?

We who live in an age of miracles, when the human voice, without wires or visible means of communication, can be heard to the four corners of the earth—why should it seem impossible to us that the voice of Jesus made the lame to walk and the blind to see?

The modern medical profession frankly recognizes that faith is a vital factor in the treatment of every disease. If the patient has confidence in his physician and in himself, and believes that he will "pull through," his chances of recovery are vastly improved.

Likewise the healing ministry of the Good Shepherd was conditioned by the faith of His patients. Again and again He said, as He did to the woman who touched the hem of His garment, "Thy faith hath made thee whole."

When people refused to believe in Him, He was powerless to help them. When He returned to Nazareth, "He could there do no mighty work * * * because of their unbelief."

If we have faith in Him, and in prayer touch but the hem of His garment, we shall receive health and strength and buoyancy both fo rbody and for soul.
